PREFACE.

This work was commenced some fifteen years ago. In early life I knew but little of the older family. My father was taciturn in his home, and what I heard him say was in his conversation to others of anecdotes of early colonial life, as learned from his grandmother, Sarah (Garret) Humphreys, who lived to ninety-nine years, and of her mother, called in her later years from her last husband, Grandmother Woodford, who lived to be one hundred and one. But from my mother, Anna (Landon) Humphreys, who had been brought up surrounded by the family, and whose memory and volubility were both remarkable, I learned much. Yet it was not until past middle life, and after the death of my parents, that my attention was fully aroused to the subject. A few months of investigation brought me in contact with Dr. Otis M. Humphreys, who had then, for quite a time, been working the same field. His intense devotion to this subject, in connection with his professional labors, completely prostrated him so that he had to make over to me all his accumulations and retire from all work in order to save his health. Then there were interruptions from business embarrassments, preventing that allotment of time, care and money indispensable to the prosecution of so extensive a work, with the alacrity which seemed called for. There were, also, large gaps in the English History of the family, and much time and research here, and correspondence and expenditure of money there, has been required in order to fill up or bridge over these gaps, with, after all, but indifferent success. Still much has been done to gather up these fragments and readjust these disjointed members, and while they leave to my mind much to be desired, they still show a vast amount of research and labor, and may seem very satisfactory to others. I think they present the only tangible history of the family in England, or from 1055 to 1600, and which will be invaluable to those who may hereafter desire to push the investigation farther.

The DORCHESTER, the PENNSYLVANIA and the SOUTHERN HUMPHREY branches have been mainly written up by other hands, and are the contributions of the persons named on the following page, or noted in the articles themselves. I acknowledge, also, some valued financial assistance from a friend of the name and book, and trust to receive yet more in the further progress of the work, as, while it is mainly a labor of love, yet it is too expensive an indulgence to be often gratified. I should be very happy to be able to conclude the publication during the year 1883.

AMERICAN FAMILIES.

1. Descendants of MICHAEL HUMPHREYS, from Lyme Regis, England, prior to 1643: who settled in Ancient Windsor, Connecticut; in the lines of his two sons, Sergt. JOHN and Lieut. SAMUEL.
2. Descendants of JONAS HUMPHREYS, who came from England and settled at Dorchester, Mass., 1634, and whose offspring are included in the Dorchester and Weymouth (Mass.) branches: the latter contributed by GILBERT NASH, ESQ., Secretary of the Weymouth Historical Society.
3. Descendants of DANIEL HUMPHREYS, who (with mother and sisters) came from Merionethshire, Wales, in 1680, and settled near Philadelphia, Pa.; contributed by Maj.-Gen. ANDREW A. HUMPHREYS, U. S. A., of Washington, D. C.
4. Genealogical material relative to the descendants of the emigrant HUGH HUMPHREYS, who settled in New York State, upon the Hudson River; the NEW JERSEY HUMPHREYS and the SOUTHERN HUMPHREYS, of Tennessee, Virginia and Mississippi, who may possibly have been offshoots from the Pennsylvania family; and other HUMPHREYS, not placed.

INTRODUCTION.

To present a mere genealogical outline of family history, consisting of births, marriages and deaths, seems to subserve only a moderate degree of usefulness; and, unless something more can be evolved from it, the doubt may be well entertained, whether it were worth the care, labor, and expense which so serious an undertaking requires. Accordingly I have asked myself whether I could lay before the reader such facts or observations of conclusion, as seem to have a practical value; so that, while the reader may be searching for genealogical data, he may also be comparing these data, with the ultimate conclusions which the writer has drawn, from perhaps a more comprehensive view of the same premises.

But, at the threshold, the writer must disclaim any authority to speak in the premises. He simply states, or suggests, the conclusions to which his investigations and reflections have led him; leaving to each entire freedom to accept, or reject, or to propose others as may seem to them most fitting. In some cases the data may be scanty, and the field for conjecture quite extensive, and in others, conclusions are arrived at from several or a multitude of minor or almost intangible circumstances, which, while they may lead one mind to a positive conviction, quite fail to bring another to the same conclusion.

The ANTIQUITY of the family, as such, cannot be questioned. Among the brave warriors who followed William the Conqueror from Normandy, in 1066, we find Sir ROBERT DE UMFREVILLE, knight, "his kinsman," Lord of Tours and Vian; HUMPHREY DE CARTERET, whose son Regnaud de Carteret accompanied Duke Robert to the Holy Land; HUMPHREY, Lord of Bohun, who seems to have been related to the Conqueror, and whose descendants were Hereditary Constables of England; and, subsequently, Earls of Hereford, Essex and Northampton. There were also HUMFREY OF TILLEUL, the warden of Hasting's Castle, 1066—67; HUMFREY, the King's Seneschal, killed in the storming of the castle at Le Mans, 1073; and HUMFREY, the Priest, who was living in the neighborhood of Battle Abbey prior to 1087.

In the "Doomsday Book," one of the most ancient records of England, "the register from which judgment was to be given upon the value, tenure, and services of lands therein described," the name "Hunfridus" frequently occurs. There are mentioned: Humphrey of Dover; Humphrey the Chamberlain, who held, of the king, lands in Leicestershire, Hampshire, Dorsetshire, Gloucestershire, etc.; Humfrey of Saint Omer, "a foreign follower of William"; Humphrey, who held, of the king, lands in Herefordshire; and several others. This serves to show that there were residing in different parts of England, soon after the Conquest, several bearing the name of Humphrey, some of whom had doubtless received, from the king, grants of land as a reward for their services.

Members of this family were engaged in the Crusades: PETER D'AMFREVILLE, 1197; LE SIRE D'UMFRAVILLE (related to Robert de Umfreville), and LE SIRE D'ONFREI, 1091. The first-named was a "Norman noble, knight, or esquire," who bore arms which are thus described in Dansey's "English Crusaders":—Argent; an eagle, sable, armed gules. The arms borne by the other two are also there represented. Recurrence to these early dates discloses the fact that these arms borne by Humphrey families in England were brought from France by the companions of the Conqueror.

Coats of arms, when well authenticated, are the most substantial proofs of the antiquity of a family. The Herald's office in England was instituted in 1340. At this period, from an examination or search made by "Shilde," as noted in the marshalling of arms in the frontispiece, these six several Humphrey arms (then spelled Humfrey) were in existence, and were duly recorded. In 1390, the same arms, the sable with four pallets of ermine, were duly emblazoned, as trappings of the horse mounted by Sir JOHN HOMFRAY whose picture, up to a recent date, remained in the British Museum. He seems to have belonged to the same family as Le Sire D'Onfrei, the crusader, from whom the baronet of the name Homfray claims descent.

It will be noted that the cross bottony, or budded cross, is used as the crest, or as the central figure, on several of the Humphrey arms. These crusader crosses were the marks of distinction awarded or allowed to the knights who had borne arms in the "Holy wars," or wars for the recovery of the Holy Sepulchre. The escalop shell also indicates a pilgrimage to the tomb of St. James, and the Holy Land. The bezants were heavy gold coins of the value of fifteen pounds sterling, which were used for the redemption of Christian captives taken in the Holy wars and held in captivity by the infidels, and indicate the large use of this money by the wearer, for this purpose.

The fleur-de-lis now represented upon the royal standards of France and England, and also noted on so many of the Humphrey arms, could only be there because of such use of them before their appropriation by the crowns above mentioned, and at a period anterior to the formal establishment of the College of Heralds. These facts show the great antiquity and former renown of the family.

The predominant mental trait of the family, according to my observation, is self-reliance, leading often to the neglect of ordinary prudence in their adventures; to the neglect also of family alliances and to the undervaluing of danger or disaster; and often causing them to leave the plodding and certain for the more exciting and hazardous. This characteristic has asserted itself in the great historic arenas of the past. The family was represented in the conquest and partition of Normandy; was among the first, if they did not even antedate the Crusades or wars for the recovery of the Holy Sepulchre; was among the warlike chiefs, nobles, and kinsmen of the conqueror of England; was among the founders of the East India Company, and also were pioneers and took prominent part in obtaining the Patent and founding the colony of Massachusetts Bay. There has never been a call to arms in this country, which has not found a prodigal response from the Family. In all new enterprises the family are likely to well represented. The value of such a predominating family trait may well be questioned.

Another characteristic, almost as predominant, is readiness of acquisition and ready adaptation to circumstances. They learn readily, often almost without effort, and easily retain what is learned. They succeed as professional men, lawyers, doctors, artists, or clergymen; not so well as tradesmen; and I have known none as mere mechanics. They sometimes learn trades but never work at them. This readiness of acquisition in art or letters is evidence, to my mind, of long continued hereditary mental training, and is fully in consonance with the views before expressed.

Another characteristic is a predominant artistic temperament. It is indicated in the delicate and almost feminine lines of face, or cast of features; and is fully sustained by the many individuals of the family who have been eminent as painters, musicians, composers, poets, authors, or men of letters. There is almost universally in the family an instinctive recognition of art and a readiness in acquiring its principles and manipulations which speaks of long hereditary training or culture.

The faculty of language is very highly developed. The Humphreys are all good talkers, splendid story tellers, eloquent even as speakers; learning languages easily, (several have been remarkable in this respect) and eminent as conversationalists. This faculty of language, with a fine sense of humour and graceful manners, renders them good companions, and general favorites. When they fail to achieve a success, it is usually from the want of prudence, and that dogged pertinacity so common in others, and so rare because not seen to be necessary in them.

Judge Barbour of Hartford, Conn., is very emphatic in speaking of their predominant goodness of heart, which he thinks has been stamped upon the countenance, giving in many cases what has been called the "Humphrey look"—a cast of countenance, expressive of benignity and quietness. He says in his work entitled "My Wife and my Mother": "There are certain peculiar characteristics which seem to have distinguished the Humphrey family for many generations, viz: amiability and gentleness of disposition, ease, dignity and urbanity of manners." Of Major ELIHU HUMPHREYS he says, quoting from a pamphlet, published by a Revolutionary soldier in 1827: "He was a well-bred gentleman; his friendly turn of mind, with a sweetness of disposition secured him the love of all good men. He, dying about the close of the year 1776, left as a legacy to his family, a name whose reputation will not be forgotten during many generations." Of JONATHAN HUMPHREYS, then Regimental clerk, and afterwards Colonel, he says: "He was a most charming companion. His social airs and pleasant countenance gained the affection and good wishes of all." These qualities were noted also as belonging to SOLOMON H., Jr.; and of the Rev. Dr. HEMAN HUMPHREYS it was said, that "he was the embodiment of every quality which constitutes a perfect gentleman." His own observation of his ancestors upon this point was that: "Piety and integrity are general characteristics of those in this line of descent, who have never become famous," and the more conspicuous members of that ancestry were distinguished for moral as well as natural worth. WILLIAM HUMPHREYS, of Boston, remarks that he never felt embarrassed in calling upon any of the name, as he never heard of one who was accused of a crime or convicted of an offense.

There has also been noticed in many families of the name, especially in the sons, an alteration of temperament and tastes and habits which seems peculiar. Of two sons in the same family the one may be exquisitely nice, almost fastidious in habits and tastes, in dress, carriage, studies, language and associations; while another brother may be frank, independent, and careless, and set the least possible value upon those traits which seems so vital to the other. Examples are afforded in several families of the name. I can give no account of its origin. It has been also noticed in daughters of the same families, though in a less striking degree. That these qualities should be perpetuated through so many generations is evidence of remarkable vigor and balance.

There have been also several instances of self assertion and manifestation of the best elements of character, in the most forbidding circumstances, that are very striking and unusual. In three several instances which have come under my own observation, and which will appear in the course of the work, boys have been left by the death of parents, or other adverse events, without good example; without even the common elements of schooling; without parental advice, regard or control; and exposed uncared for, to all the degrading influences of poverty and vice; and who yet have come out unscathed from them all, obtained good educations, acquired property and have become valued and even learned and distinguished members of society—without a blot on their record or memory.—There seems to have been something in the children which has made them a law unto themselves and which was potential for control over and above all surrounding circumstances.

The Humphreys are usually a prolific stock. Large families are the rule and small ones the exception in the older time. The men are tall, of clear countenance and large of stature, unless the mothers are of small stock; and the women are noted for vivacity, intelligence and pleasing address, their sons often manifesting in a remarkable degree the prominent family traits.

THE PILGRIM'S SCALLOP-SHELL.

St. James the Greater is the patron saint of Spain. The body of the Apostle, after his decapitation, placed itself in a boat, which came for the purpose, and set off for Spain. On his way he passed by Bouzas, in Portugal, where the wedding of the Lord's daughter was taking place. One of the amusements on the occasion was throwing the cane, which took place on the sea-shore. To the consternation of the party, the bridegroom's horse plunged into the sea, only emerging when it reached the boat of St. James, which had stopped for that purpose. After the interview the horse again disappeared, landing afterward covered, as well as his rider, with scallop-shells; St. James being pleased to promise that he would take good care of any pilgrim who should visit his future shrine and wear a scallop-shell in token of having done so. Papal bulls excommunicated those who dared to sell pilgrim's scallop-shells, except at Santiago. Leaving Bouzas, the saint's body continued its voyage and landed not far from Santiago, the stone on which it lay down enveloping it like a cloak. After sundry perils, it was hid in a cavern, where it remained nearly 800 years, when it was discovered by a hermit and removed to Santiago. A pilgrimage to St. James of Compostella (Campus Stellæ, from the star which pointed out the place where the body lay) was as indispensable in the middle ages as that to Mecca is for Mohammedans now. No fewer than 2400 licenses for this pilgrimage were granted to Englishmen in the year 1434. At the battle of Clavijo—one of the thirty-eight occasions on which St. James came to help the Spaniards—he appeared, as Castor and Pollux did at Regillus, on a "steed as white as snow," and killed 60,000 Moors, and ever since then "Santiago!" has been the battle-cry of Spain.—From "On Relics Ecclesiastical," in the Cornhill Magazine, 1882.

Lineage.—The name of Homfray is derived from the French words homme vrai. The Homfrays were distinguished amongst the soldiers of the Cross, and they were eminent in the early wars of the Plantagenet kings. The portrait of John Homfray, living in 1390, and a gallant warrior of that day, is still (1868) preserved in the British Museum. (See page 33.)

WM. HOMFRAY, who resided at Wales, near Rotherham, in Yorkshire, in 1590, was lineal ancestor of

FRANCIS HOMFRAY, of Wales, near Rotherham, who had (by Elizabeth his wife, who was buried at Wales, 3 January, 1724) three sons, viz:

- I. FRANCIS, his heir.
- II. Thomas (see HOMFRAY of The Place).
- III. John.

John Humffreys was s. at his death by his brother the present WILLIAM HUMFFREYS, Esq.

* The second son of WILLIAM AP HUMFREY of Montgomery, in North Wales, was NATHANIEL HUMFREYS, citizen of London, from whom was descended Sir WILLIAM HUMPHREYS of Barking, in Essex. The last-named, in 1715, was Lord Mayor of the City of London, at which date Hever Castle and the manors of Hever Cobham and Brocas were conveyed to him by James (son of Baron Waldegrave created Earl of Waldegrave in the 3rd of George II. (1730). Sir W. Humphreys, knt., of London and of Hever Castle, was created baronet by King George I. (No. 978 in the general order of creation). ("Hist. of Co. Kent," by Edward Hasted, pub. Canterbury, 1797. Vol. I, p. 227, etc.). He died in 1735, leaving an only son and heir, Sir ORLANDO HUMFREYS, bart., who died in 1737. His children were three sons and two daughters. Of the former, two died young, when ROBERT, the second, and only survivor, possessed said castle and manors, and died before his father. In the chancel of the church at Hever is a memorial for "Robert Humfreys, Esq., Lord of the manor of Heaver, only son and heir of Sir Orlando Humfreys, bart. of Jenkins, in Essex, obt. 1736, æt. 28."

On the demise of Sir Orlando, his two daughters became his heirs, as well as co-heirs to their brother, of whom Mary, the eldest, had three husbands: first, William Ball Waring, of Dunston in Berkshire, who died in 1746 without issue; secondly, John Honeywood, of Mark's Hall, who likewise died without issue; and lastly, Thomas Gore, Esq., uncle to Charles Gore, Esq., M. P., who had married, in 1741, Ellen, the other daughter of Sir Orlando Humfreys. They, with their husbands, in 1745, joined in the sale of Hever Castle and the manors of Hever, Cobham and Hever Brocas to Timothy Waldo, of Lyons in France. ("Hist. of Co. Kent," by W. H. Ireland, pub. 1829. Vol. III, p. 394).

Sir William Humphreys bore for his arms two coats: Quarterly, 1st and 4th, sable, two nag's heads, erased argent; 2nd and 3rd, per pale or and gules, two lions rampant endorsed, counterchanged. In Berry's Ency. ## ANTIQUITY OF THE HUMPHREYS FAMILY.

The name of HUMPHREYS is very ancient, illustrious, and associated with many a knightly deed of valor. It frequently occurs in connection with the histories of France and England, and has various forms. In Cartulaire de l'Abbaye de Redon en Bretagne,* we find: Hunfrid, in January, 837—838, witnessed a deed of gift by Unrog of his vineyard in Gramcampus to the monks of the Abbey of Redon, in Brittany.

In Cartulaire de l'Abbaye de Saint-Bertin:† Humfridus, bishop and abbot of Saint-Bertin and of the monastery of St. Peter, called Sithiu, in Taruensis, "Sanctus Humfridus" in the list of abbots, described as a man endowed with all goodness and holiness, succeeded the blessed Folquinus as bishop. Bishop Humfridus died at a very advanced age, March 8th, 869, in the 15th year of his episcopate.

Hemfridus is also in the list of abbots of Saint-Bertin. He succeeded Odbertus about 1012. In writings relating to the monastery of the Holy Trinity of Mt. Rothomagus, Rouen, occur as witnesses, the names of Humphrey, son of Richard, (date 1035—40) Fulchelnus, son of Humphrey (Hunfredus) of Mathun, a canton of Longueville, (date 1050—66).

Prior to 1076, the Abbot Rainerius gives Humphrey, a soldier, son of Rueder, or Ruedrus, an elder, (filio Ruedri presbyteri) land on which to build a house in the fort Archense.‡

"Hurfrey de Vetulis," living in 1035, "was son of Thorulf of Pont-Audemer, and of Weva, the sister of Gunnor." He sent his son Roger of Beaumont to fight with Roger of Toesny.** This Humphrey is probably the same who, in 1078, built two convents at Pratellum, one for monks and the other for nuns. The first Abbot was Anfrey, 1078, a monk of St. Wandregeselus. Rodolph, abbot of St. Michael, gave to Hurfrey de Vetulis Utica and Bellum—Montellum.††

In the "Ancient List of the Conquerors of England," published by Andre Duchesne, from a charter in Battle Abbey, the name is found as "Umframville"; in a list from Bromton's Chronicle as "Ounfravyle et Downfrevyle"; and in Leland's list as "Vipount et Umfreville."‡‡ This abbey was founded

Great light is thrown upon the origin of these names by considering the history of the grand partition of Normandy, which followed an invasion of France, by Norwegians, about 896.

There was at the court of Harold, King of Norway, among the chieftains of the first rank, a certain Rognvald, whom the king greatly loved, and who had served him zealously in all his expeditions. Rognvald had several sons noted for their valour; of these the most renowned was Rolf, or by a sort of euphony common to many of the Teutonic names, Roll.

It was an immemorial custom of the Vikings to exercise, upon every coast without distinction, a privilege which they termed strandhug, or impressment of provisions. While on his return from a cruise in the Baltic, before landing in Norway, Rolf, by following this practice, incurred the displeasure of some peasants, and they complained to King Harold who chanced to be in that vicinity. The monarch summoned a Thing, or great council of justice, to try him according to law, and he was sentenced to banishment for life. He collected some vessels and sailed towards the Hebrides, which had been adopted as an asylum by a portion of the Norwegians who emigrated after the conquests of Harold in Norway. He was at first king of only one portion and extended his power over the remainder by force of arms, making of the whole country one kingdom. All these men were of high birth and great military reputation. The new-comer, Roll joined his vessels with theirs, thus forming a numerous fleet, and all agreed to act under the orders, not of one sole chieftain, but of the confederates generally, Roll having no other pre-eminence than that of his personal merits and name. Sailing from the Hebrides, the fleet doubled the extreme point of Scotland, continuing in a southerly course until the coast of France was reached, when it passed up the Seine, taking possession of Rouen on the way. King Carl, or Charles, determined to repel the new invasion, but it was finally decided to hold a parley with the enemy before on the battle-field of Hastings, in fulfilment of a vow made by the Conqueror in the time of victory (1066). In the list of persons to whom a dwelling-place was allotted around the circuit of the abbey, with their customary rent or service, are given:—number “89. Humfrey, the priest, 7d. and labour,”; number “111. Humfrey Genester, 7d. and labour.”* These persons must have lived in the houses assigned to them prior to 1087.

The name of Humphrey occurs often in “Doomsday Book,” appearing most frequently as “Hunfridus,” in the “Exon” Doomsday, which is supposed “to contain an exact Transcript of the original Rolls or Returns, made by the Conqueror’s Commissioners at the time of forming the General Survey, from which the Great Domesday itself was compiled. Its main body presents a description of the western parts of the kingdom, comprising the counties of Wilts, Dorset, Somerset, Devon and Cornwall.”† risking a battle. Being asked if they would submit to King Charles, who offered them fiefs and honors on condition of faith and service, they replied “By no means.” The French then tried the force of arms, but failed to bring them in subjection. Free to navigate the Seine, Roll and his companions ascended it to Paris and laid siege to that city, but without being able to make themselves masters of it. Evreux and several other neighboring towns next fell into the hands of these Normans. At Amfreville, near Evreux, which is a very ancient city and capital of the department of the Eure on the Iton (Normandy), at a later date, was the Seat of the Umfreville family, to which belonged Robert de Umfreville, Lord of Tours and Vian, who came to England, in 1066, with William the Conqueror, one of Roll’s descendants. The arms of Evreux are: d’azur à trois fleurs-de-lis d’or, 2 et 1, à la bande componnee d’argent et de gueules brochant sur le tout.‡

According to an old chronicler, the companions of Roll made him “their king”; but this title, which was perhaps merely given him in the language of the north, was ere long replaced by the French title of duke or count. A tribute was regularly levied upon the towns and country districts. The Normans having become a territorial power, leagued themselves with other Scandinavians, probably Danes by origin, who occupied the mouth of the Loire, and agreed to pillage simultaneously the whole territory between that river and the Seine. The devastation extended into Burgundy and Auvergne. Paris was attacked a second time but resisted successfully, as did Chartres, Dijon and other strong places; but many unfortified towns were destroyed or sacked. In 912, sixteen years after the occupation of Rouen, the people of all conditions began to complain bitterly on account of these ravages and to demand that the war should be ended. King Charles thereupon convoked his barons and bishops in council, demanding of them “aid and advice.” All counselled him to conclude a truce, and to negotiate for peace. The Archbishop of Rouen was chosen to conduct this negotiation. He went to Roll, the son of Rognvald, and said: “King Charles offers you his daughter Gisla in marriage, with the hereditary seignury of all the country situated between the river Epte and the borders of Brittany, if you consent to become Christian, and to live in peace with the kingdom.” Roll replied that the words of the king were good, but the land was insufficient. Flanders was then offered, which he refused as a “poor country, muddy and full of swamps.” Then word was sent to him by the king that he should have, in fief, Brittany conjointly with Neustria, and the arrangement was accepted.

The treaty was ratified in the most solemn manner. Roll swore faithfully to “protect the life, limbs and royal honour” of the king; and the king and barons gave “the Norman chief the title of count, and swore to protect his life, his limbs, his honour, and all the territory set forth in the treaty of peace.” He was baptized, and married to the king’s daughter, at Rouen, where it had been arranged that this double ceremony should take place. For seven days he wore the white habit of the newly baptized, and gave each day an estate to one of the seven churches, which had been indicated to him by the archbishop. Then, having resumed his ordinary dress, he occupied himself with political affairs and with the grand partition of Normandy. The country was divided out by the cord, say the old chroniclers; such was the mode of mensuration used in Scandinavia. All the lands, whether desert or cultivated, except those of the churches, were shared out afresh, without any attention to the rights of the natives.—

* * “New geographical denominations, even, resulted from this re-partition of territorial property, and usage thenceforth attached to many of the domains the names of the Scandinavian warriors to whose portion they had fallen.

* * “Thus Angoville, Borneville, Grimonville, Heronville, were the territorial possessions of Ansgod, Brion, Grim, Harold,” &c. This explanation seems to account for the name Umfreville, as taken from the town of Amfreville. We do not consider these variations of spelling in the name as of much importance or significance, especially when dealing with ancient records, as it is no unusual thing to find the name of an individual spelled in several different ways, occasionally in the same document. The Doomsday Survey was probably completed about 1086.

‡ Saint Fargean’s Dictionnaire des Communes de France, pub. Paris, 1844.

In mentioning houses with owners, in Dover, it is stated that "of the house which Ralph Colville occupies, heretofore the property of an exile or outlaw, it is agreed that one half of it belongs to the king, and the other to Ranulf. Hunfrid has 1 house, one half of it belongs to the king."*

In Domesday for Leicestershire we find that "Hunfrid" the Chamberlain, held of the king lands in Abegrave, Dalbi, and Barnesbi; "Nigell de Albingi" held of the king "two ploughlands in Sela," and "Hunfrid" held them of him.†

Under "Notices of Commendation in Domesday" we have: "Humfrey the Chamberlain holds lands 'de feuo reginæ.'"‡ There is likewise a notice of the "forfeiture of a foreign follower of William, Humfrey of Saint Omer."**

Mr. Ferguson, (English Surnames and their Place in the Teutonic Family††), states that the Anglo-Saxon frid, Old Norse fridr, signifies peace, and is frequently used in ancient compounds. "Humfrey is the same as Hunfrid, seventh bishop of Winchester, and a Hunfrid in the Domesday of Yorkshire." Burke regards the name "Homfray" as derived from the French words homme and vrai.‡‡

Let us now consider the history of some who took part in the Conquest. It appears that "the fortress of Hastings had, from the very day when it began to arise, (1066—67) been placed under the command of HUMFREY,*** the brother-in-law of — — Hugh of Grantmesnil. His son Robert, known afterward as Robert of Rhuddlan, had been one of the Norman favorites of Eadward; had received knighthood at his hands, and had held what one would think must have been the sinecure office of armour-bearer to the Saint." Concerning the ancestry of Robert is given: "Umfridus pater ejus fuit filius Amfridi de progenie Dacorum." In 1068, Humfrey, the warden of Hasting's Castle, returned to Normandy.†††

HUMPHREY DE BOHUN is mentioned in the ancient poem "Le Roman de Rou," in the list of the principal Norman warriors who followed the Conqueror: "E de Bohon li vieil Onfrei."‡‡‡ He is also styled in foot-note "Onfroï, seigneur de Bohon."

"Bohun, or rather Bohon, the place whence the family derived its name, is situated in the arrondissement of St. Lo, in the Cotentin, where are still the communes of St. Andre and St. George de Bohon. The mound of the castle was visible some thirty years ago, and may be still. The honor of Bohon was in possession of this Humphrey at the time of the Norman invasion, and his later gift of the Church of St. George de Bohon as a cell to the Abbey of Marmoutier, is confirmed by William, King of the English, 'his Queen Mathildis, his sons Robert and William, his half-brother Odo, Bishop of Bayeux, Michael, Bishop of Avranches, Roger de Montgomeri, and Richard, son of Turstain,' husband of Emma de Conteville, which certainly supports the belief that he was closely connected with the Conqueror. He died before 1113." Of his children, "the eldest son, Robert, died in his father's lifetime apparently, unmarried; and from Richard, the second son, descended in the female line the Bohuns of Midhurst, in Sussex; but the grandeur of the Bohuns was due to the extraordinary succession of great matches made by the descendants of the youngest son, who became Earl of Hereford, Essex and Northampton, the co-heiresses of the — — last Humphrey de Bohun being the wives, one of Thomas of Woodstock, Earl of Gloucester, and son of King Edward III., and the

‡ In 1447, Humphrey, Duke of Gloucester, was chosen Protector, during the minority of his nephew Henry VI. "He was of a meek and gentle disposition, a lover of the Commonwealth, a supporter of the poor Commons, wise, discreet, studious, a lover of religion, a friend to virtue, and an enemy to pride, especially in the clergy, which made him to be much hated of them, and in the end brought him to an immature death. His learning was rare and memorable, and his discreet wisdom no less exemplary." He was a "Patron of learning and learned himself, particularly in Astronomy. He wrote a treatise called Tabula Directionum." †† His name is given among those "Illustrious English Names that shine in the History of the Conquest of France," as is also that of his brother John, Duke of Bedford. †† Henry Beauford, Cardinal and Bishop of Winchester, is said to have been the "chief contriver of his martyrdom, * * * who drawing to his side William de la Pool, Duke of Suffolk, and the Duke of Buckingham, they conspired with the Queen to deprive him both of honor and of life. For which end a Parliament was summoned to be kept at Bury, far from the citizens of London, who much loved the Duke of Gloucester.

"And when the lords and commons were met, and amongst them the duke, neither thinking harm to others, or suspecting danger to himself; the second day after the Parliament began, the Lord Beaumont, then High Constable of England, accompanied with the Duke of Buckingham and some others, arrested the Duke of Gloucester, and put him into ward, which caused much murmuring amongst the people; and the next night after, he was found dead in his bed, being, as it was commonly reported, smothered between two feather beds, having prudently governed this realm for the space of twenty-five years. * * * Not long before the duke's death, he had complained to the king, his nephew, of sundry injuries which the Cardinal of Winchester had done, not only to him, but to the king and the whole kingdom; which he had put into writing in twenty-four articles, and presented them to the king. King Henry committed the examination thereof to his counsel, (who being for the most part clergymen) the business was shuffled up and the duke entrapped, as we have heard. To aggravate this affliction, they accused his religious duchess, the Lady Elinor Cobham, of witchcraft and treason; as if, to advance her husband to the crown, she had practised by sorcery and enchantment to destroy the king's person. And hereupon they enjoined her in a disgraceful manner to go through Cheapside with a taper in her hand, and to do penance in three public places of the city, and afterwards to be committed to perpetual imprisonment in the Isle of Man, under the custody of Sir John Stanley, Knt." (Reece's Christian Martyrology, Vol. II., pp. 307-8.)

He was buried in old St. Paul's Church, London, and one of the public walks near by was called "Duke Humphrey's Walk." In this walk those who were without the means of defraying their expenses at a tavern were accustomed to loiter about, hoping to obtain an invitation to dinner from some passing acquaintance. Hence was the anciently well-known expression, "dining with Duke Humphrey"; reference to which is probably intended by Shakespeare's expression (Richard III., Act IV., Scene IV.) "Humphrey's hour calls upon every one." (See "J. W. W." in Southey's Common Place Book, 4th Series, foot-note, p. 615, London, 1851.) A lately published volume of the "Roxburgh Club," is entitled "Boke of Nurture and Keruyng." It is an edition, in quarto, of part of a volume on Manners and Meals in Olden Time, that has long been in preparation for the Early English Text Society. The first "Boke of Nurture" is one by John Russell, usher and marshal to Humphrey, Duke of Gloucester, "Good Duke Humphrey," about 1420-44 A. D.; and has, oddly enough, been overlooked by all former writers on the subject. It is the most minute and interesting treatise on the management of a noble's household in the fifteenth century that has yet been printed, exceeding even the very valuable but more general "Boke of Curtasye," edited by Mr. Halliwell for the Percy Society. It describes how the Duke was dressed, undressed, and put to bed; how his bed was made, his table laid, his pew and bath prepared; what dishes he ate on flesh days and fish days, and what grand Soteltes or Devices were prepared for his feasts. Elaborate directions for carving joints and fish, of all kinds, are given; as well as for making hippocras, taking care of wines, etc., and how people are to behave at table, etc.

PEDIGREE OF UMFREVILLE.*

BARONS OF PRUDHOE, HARBOTTLE AND OTTERBURNE, IN NORTHUMBERLAND, ENGLAND; AND (WHILOM) EARLS OF ANGUS, SCOTLAND.

I. SIR ROBERT DE UMFREVILLE, Knt., surnamed "ROBERT WITH THE BEARD," Lord of Tours and Vian, came to England with William the Conqueror, who, in the tenth year of his reign, granted to his "kinsman" the forest, valley, and Lordship of Riddesdale, Co. Northumberland.† Thierry‡ says that Sir Robert received from King William the sword which he had worn upon his entry into Northumberland; and that, upon it, he swore that he would use it in defending his new possessions "from thieves and wolves. By the tenor of the grant he was invested with the power of holding, governing, exercising, hearing and judging in all the pleas of the Crown, as well as others occurring within the precincts of Riddesdale." One account** says, that, with this, was given the Barony and Castle of Prudhoe, and the Castles of Harbottle and Otterburne (in 1100—1135) by King Henry I.;—but it is more probable that they were "infeoffed," or confirmed, to him by the son of the Conqueror. His children were:

GILBERT.

ODONEL.

II. ROBERT DE UMFREVILLE, in 1110 was witness to the foundation of Kelso Abbey.†† One of the same name (probably this Robert) was witness to the foundation Charter of Neath Abbey, Glamorgan, time of Henry I. (1100—1135)‡‡; and, from him descended a branch, seated in that county. His descendant, Henry de Humfreville, held five knights' fees of the honor of Gloucester, 1201.***

III. ODONEL DE UMFREVILLE, famous in our annals for his bravery, held, by feudal tenure, the castles of Prudhoe, Harbottle, Otterburne and Riddesdale. With Bernard de Baliol, and others, he took William, King of Scots, prisoner at Alnwick, (20th, King Henry II., 1174) after his retreat from the siege of Prudhoe Castle.††† His name is found as a witness in the Charters of King David I.,

* This Pedigree is based upon that given in Burke's Hist. of the Commoners of Great Britain and Ireland, ii., 191—194, with amplifications from other authentic sources.

† Redesdale is the name of a district, comprising the parishes of Elsdon and Corsenside. The church of Elsdon is on the west side of the village; and an old tower, at a short distance, which is the rectory-house; the arms of the Hunfranvils are upon it; argent, a fess, between six cinquefoils, gules. There is an inscription underneath, not legible. (Wallis' Antiq. of Northumberland, II., 61).

"Richard de Umfranvill held the vale of Redesdale, by the service of guarding it from thieves; and his successor, Gilbert, held it 'per regalem potestatem.' But as this district continued a nest of lawless freebooters, it was enacted by parliament, in 1420, that the statute of the second year of Henry the Fifth, against the robbers of Tindale, should be extended to those of Redesdale, 'that they should be outlawed, and their property forfeited.' Harbottle Castle, and the manor of Otterburne, were held of the king, in capite, by Robert Umfranvill, in 1428, 'by the service of keeping the valley of Riddesdale free from wolves and robbers, which service was adjudged to be great serjantry.' 'Upon search', at this time, 'it was found in one of the books of knights' fees, in the custody of the king's remembrancer, that Gilbert de Humfranvill held Riddesdale per regalem potestatem, by royal power.' There was no species of tenure in England known by the name of tenure by royal power. I do humbly apprehend, that in this case the tenure was barony, accompanied with a full power of a Lord Marcher foreagainst Scotland, like that baronial power which was anciently vested in the Earl of Chester, for the time being, or some other great Lord Marcher foreagainst Wales." (Beauties of England and Wales, XII., Part I., 140). Prudhoe Castle, as well as the Chapel of Our Lady, at the foot of the hill are now ruins. Otterburn Castle, probably derived its name from the brook Otter, on which it stood.

IV. ROBERT DE UMFREVILLE, Baron of Prudhoe, in 1182 (temp. Henry II.), granted lands to the monks of Newminster. He was succeeded by his grandson, (erroneously called his son, by Dugdale) Richard, son of Gilbert de Umfreville.

V. GILBERT DE UMFREVILLE.

VI. RICHARD DE UMFREVILLE, Baron of Prudhoe, was a benefactor of Hexham Priory, and fortified the castle of Harbottle in the beginning of the reign of Henry III., in the 11th year of which reign (1227) he died leaving four sons, one of whom,

VII. GILBERT DE UMFREVILLE, Baron of Prudhoe, according to Matthew Paris, was "a famous baron, guardian and chief flower of the North." He was Warden of the Marches; and held his barony by the service of two knights' fees and a half. In a Charter between Henry III., of England, and Alexander of Scotland, his name is affixed as witness. He died, 29th Henry III. (1245), leaving a son and heir.

VIII. GILBERT DE UMFREVILLE, Earl of Angus, jure uxoris, was seven years old when his father died. He was summoned to the Parliament, held at Carlisle (35th King Edward I.), in the Octaves of St. Hilary, January 21th, 1307; held his barony by the tenure above mentioned, and was highly instrumental in fortifying Scottish castles and strongholds. He founded a chantry in the chapel of Our Lady, at his castle at Prudhoe; endowing it with two tofts, and 118 acres of land, and five acres of meadow, for the maintenance of the two chaplains to perform divine service as above mentioned. He seems, also, just before his death, to have been appointed one of the King's two Lieutenants in Scotland. His wife was Elisabeth, daughter and heir of John Comyn, Earl of Angus.† He died 1308,‡ (temp. Edward II.) and was succeeded by his son, (then thirty years of age),

IX. ROBERT DE UMFREVILLE, second Earl of Angus, and feudal Baron of Prudhoe, distinguished himself in Scottish wars. In 1st Edward II. (1307), Robert de Umfreville, Earl of Angus, and his kinsman, William, Lord Roos,** were constituted the king's lieutenants in Scotland, between Berwick and the River of Forth; also in the marches of Annandale, Carryk and Galloway.

Again, when Edward II., sent a solemn deputation to Robert de Brus to treat of peace, the Earl of Angus was one of those persons chosen to act in this capacity. In a brief summary of the wardrobe accounts of the 10th–11th–14th years of Edward II. (1317–18–21) is the following:

"To Sir William de Roos of Hamlake, banneret, sent by the King and Council, with all the men-at-arms in his pay: together with Robert de Umfravill, Earl of Anegos, Sir John de Benstede, knight, Roger de Northburgh, keeper of the wardrobe, and Master Robert de Baldoc, Archdeacon of Middlesex, to the Marches of Scotland, to treat with Sir Robert de Brus of the ratifying of a peace between the said Lord our King and the said Sir Robert; for his wages, those of two bannerets, twenty knights, and sixty-seven squires, from the 30th of March in the present year to the 17th of April next following, being nineteen days during which he was employed in the said mission, receiving for himself and each banneret 4 s., for each knight 2 s., and for each squire 1 s. a day.

By composition made with Thomas de Wilton, his clerk, at York, 20th of July, 16th Edward II. (1323).

He was among the Scotch peers who did homage to King Edward I., in the August assembly. Wallis' Antiq. of Northumberland, ii., 305, 434.

In the 11th year's accounts we find:

"The king kept his Christmas this year in the palace of Westminster, and on that day the following knights received sumptuous presents of plate from the king; viz: Sir Robert de Umfravill, Earl of Anegos, and others."*

X. GILBERT DE UMFREVILLE, summoned to Parliament, as 3rd Earl of Angus, from 27 January, 1332 to 26 August, 1380, was chief commander at the battle of Durham, 20 Edward III. (1346), where David Bruce was totally defeated and made prisoner by the English.‡

He married, 1st, Johanna, daughter of Robert, Lord Willoughby de Eresby; no issue. He married 2nd, Maud, sister of Anthony Lucy, and had only child Robert, who married Margaret, dau. of Henry, Lord Percy, but pre-deceased his father without issue. He died, 1381, leaving his niece Alianore,** heir of the whole blood; and Thomas, his brother, of the half blood, his next male heir. None of the family were ever subsequently summoned to Parliament.††

XI. SIR THOMAS DE UMFREVILLE, (brother of the half blood to the foregoing Gilbert, 3rd Earl of Angus), m. Joane, dau. of Adam de Roddam, and had a son.

XII. SIR THOMAS DE UMFREVILLE, knt., m. Agnes —, and had a son, XIII. SIR GILBERT DE UMFREVILLE, Lord of Kyme,‡‡ known as "a valiant knight," was nephew to Sir Robert Humfraville, Knight of the Most Noble Order of The Garter, and Vice-Admiral of England, whom he attended (1408) in that famous expedition into Scotland, where he acquired the nick-name of "Robin Mend-Market" from his selling the Scots round penny-worths of their own goods, taken by pillage. He also attended King Henry V., the "Glory of England," in his expedition into France, 1417—19, by whom he was made Governor of the castle of Gournie for his bravery; also Governor of Melun, upon the Seine, in the same kingdom.*** He was slain on Easter Eve, 1419, at a narrow pass called Viel Bauge, or Baugie, in Anjou, with his general the Duke of Clarence, and John Grey, Earl of Tankervil, the party having been decoyed there by a servant of the Duke's under bribe from the enemy.

† Walter Kyme was of that Baronial family which took their name from Kyme, Lincolnshire. He was summoned to Parliament as a Baron, and is mentioned for his valour in Palestine [in the third crusade]. See account of "Le Sire d'Umfraville," also Dansey's English Crusaders, for arms of Kyme family; also, Humphrey family of County Sussex.

†† In Nisbet's System of Heraldry, Ed. 1816, it is stated that "the Earl's amorial bearing was, azure, a cinquefoil within an orle of eight cross-crosslets or; but the Umfravilles afterwards, for adhering to the Baliols, and to the interest of the Edwards of England, were forfeited of their lands, and forced to reside in England. They were great men there, and always claimed right to the Earldom of Angus, for which see Edmund Howe's Hist. of England." Nisbet adds: "there are few or none of that name now with us, save some small families in the name of UMPHRAY, one of which I find in our New Register, Mr. THEODORE UMPHRAY, Minister of the Gospel; Vert, a chevron between three cinquefoils in chief, and a cross-crosslet fitched in base argent: Crest, a book expanded, proper; Motto, Pax tua Domine est requies mea." The same author also speaks of an INGELRAMUS DE UMPHRAVILLE, who was of a branch of the U. family "that were Englishmen, but possessed of a great estate in Angus, and elsewhere, which they lost because they would not renounce their allegiance to England and turn honest Scotchmen. In the rolls of King Robert I., there are charters of land granted by that prince, upon the narrative, that the lands had formerly belonged, and forfeited to the Crown, by the attainder of INGELRAMUS DE UMPHRAVILLE. Upon the forfeiture of the English Family of U., Sir Alexander Stewart, of Bonkill, was, in 1327, created Earl of Angus.

Sir Walter Scott, in his description of the battle of Bannockburn, gives the following incident which is worthy of record:

"The next morning, being the 24th of June (1313), at break of day, the battle began in terrible earnest. The English, as they advanced, saw the Scots getting into line. The Abbot of Inchaffray walked through their ranks barefooted, and exhorted them to fight for their freedom. They kneeled down as he passed, and prayed to Heaven for victory. King Edward II., who saw this, called out, 'They kneel down, they are asking forgiveness.' 'Yes,' said a celebrated English baron, called INGELRAM DE UMPHRAVILLE, 'but they ask it from God, not from us—these men will conquer, or die upon the field.'"—He probably belonged to the Northumberland family.

*** In 1417, Henry V. was accompanied to Normandy by "Sir Gilbert Vmfreuile" and others, on a "high enterprise." They laid siege to a Castle called "Tonque," which they took; and the town and Castle of "Cane" also came into the King's possession." "When the King had set Cane in good order, he left there for Capteynes, the one of the town and the other of the Castell, Sir Gilbert Vmfreuile and Sir Gilbert Talbot." (Grafton's Chronicle, I., 526.)

In the "Old English Poem on the siege of Rouen, A. D., 1418, by King Henry V.", there are several allusions to Sir Gilbert Umfreville, who so greatly distinguished himself by his military talents during the war in France. He was one of the Commissioners appointed to treat with the French legates.

The inhabitants of Rouen sent unto the King begging for mercy.

"Thanne a new zeris day in the Mornynge,

He is mentioned in other parts of the poem, but this brief extract is sufficient to show its quaintness. Sir Gilbert is said to have "perished with many others at the unfortunate battle of Baugy, in 1421, leaving no issue."† From this statement we are led to believe that the following relates to him: Gilbert de Umfreville was constable of the Castle of Shepey (an ancient castle of Queensborough) Anno I. Henry V. (1413), and died Anno 9, Henry V. This castle was built about 1361, by King Edward III.‡

Sir Gilbert Humfreville was the principal executor of the will of Thomas Arundel, Archbishop of Canterbury, who died February 20th, 1414.<sup>**</sup>

He was succeeded in his Lordship of Reedsdale, and Castles of Harbottle and Otterburne, by his kinsman Walter Tailboys, who was in possession of them 17 King Henry VI. (1438.) By the attainder of Sir William Tailboys, after the battle of Hexham-field, 3 King Edward IV. (1463) they reverted to the crown. This castle and Lordship of Prudhoe were given to John, Duke of Bedford; and afterwards to Henry Percy, Earl of Northumberland, and are now in the possession of his Grace, the Duke of Northumberland.††

SIR ROBERT UMFREVILLE‡‡ was created Knight of the Garter, by King Henry IV., (1399—1413); was sent, 1408, to the assistance of the Duke of Burgoyne (accompanied by his nephew, Sir Gilbert, of whom, see page 22),<sup>***</sup> "with dyuerse other valiant Capteynes"; he was appointed by King Henry V., in 1414, to keep the "Marches ioyning to Scotland. EDWARD UMFREVILLE, Esq. of Farnham Royal, (a descendant of William, who was left to the care of the Abbot of Missenden, and heir to his grandfather Andrew Umfreville, who died in 1651), "born in 1638, of the Inner Temple, barrister-at-law, sought to recover the barony of Umfreville, but failed by reason of the great lapse of time and the difficulties arising through the wars of York and Lancaster (1455—1485); the family of Umfreville suffering severely during these contests, so that in some instances they were obliged to absent themselves in foreign countries, and in others to change their names and arms to avoid prosecution."**

* It seems probable that this estate had belonged to his uncle, Sir Robert, as Mr. Surtees gives a representation of "the Seal of Robert de Unfranville, Chivaler," appended to a grant of warren in his lands of Farnacres, made to the Prior and Convent of Durham, 24 December, 1368. Hist. of Durham, i., plate IX., 15; Seal of Thomas Umfraville, ii., plate X., 19. HOLMSIDE, in the parish of Lanchester, Durham, became the estate of the Umfrevilles. "Thomas Umfreville held the manor, stated to contain a hundred acres, by the services named in Boldon Book. In 1387, he died seized of the manor by homage, fealty, and 14 s. 4 d., and of ten acres called Hamwellburn, held by three shillings ex-chequer rent, (and of the manor of Whetele, &c.) leaving Sir Thomas Umfreville, Knight, his son and heir." Thomas Umfreville held the manor of Whitley "by knight's service, and 36 s. rent." The estate rested in the Umfrevilles till the extinction of male issue. Surtees gives the following:

"The Hall (at Holmside) seems to have belonged to a class of mansions inferior to the peel or castle, yet built with some view to defence. Part of the old court-yard is remaining; the Chapel forms the north side, and its west window is still perfect, of two lights under a square label, with the cinquefoil and two blank shields in the spandrels. Above this west window a mutilated figure is fixed in the wall, with a full moony face, and a kind of round helmet or pot en tele. I should almost conjecture this to be a rude piece of Roman sculpture, removed from the Station, which may probably have furnished the coins and squared stones used in building this chantry of the Umfrevilles." This Station occupies a lofty hill to the west of the village of Lanchester.††

The descendants of Sir Thomas Umfreville, Knt. of Harbottle Castle, and owner of Holmside and Whitley, are found on Chart I.

FRENCH AND ENGLISH CRUSADER-KNIGHTS OF THE HUMFREY NAME.

The ancient Family of Humphreys was honorably represented in the Crusades, or Wars for the Recovery of the Holy Sepulchre at Jerusalem.* In a Latin work, De Bello Sacro (Lib. I., 77, 80)† by Benedictus Accoltus, which narrates the history of these wars, we find, in a foot-note, the names of those, of the highest rank, who followed Boamundus out of Italy, or other western provinces, in the first crusade, viz.: Tancredus, son of the sister of BOAMUNDUS,‡ and of Wilhelmus Comes; Richardus of Principatus, grandson of Robertus Viscardus, and Ranulphus his brother; Robertus of Anxa; Hermanus of Carnus; Robertus of Surda Valle; Robertus, son of Tristanus; HUMFREDUS, son of Rudoltus; Richardus son of Ranulphus, Comes of Rosinulus, with his brothers, Boelus Carnotensis, Alberedus of Cagnanus; HUMFREDUS of Mount Scabiosus. This army comprising ten thousand horsemen and a very great number of footmen, under most illustrious ensigns, came to Constantinople, and, three weeks after the feast of the Passover,** joined Godefredus.

Even earlier than this, as we learn from the Dictionnaire de la Noblesse,†† in the year 1094, a

* The first crusade for the recovery of the Holy Land was about 1097; the second, 1147; the third, 1189; and the fourth, 1203. The first crusade was published by Pope Urban II., at the Council of Clermont in Auvergne, 1095. Godfrey de Bouillon, Duke of the Lower Lorraine, was one of the principal commanders of the main army. He was accompanied by a great number of German and French nobles. The conquest of Jerusalem took place in 1099. The crusaders formed a Christian kingdom of the conquered countries, of which they gave the crown to Godfrey de Bouillon.

The passage of the French crusaders awakened the zeal of the Italians. Bohemond, prince of Tarentum, was the first who resolved to associate himself with their fortunes. He was the son of Robert Guiscard from Normandy. "A short time after," having been chosen by the Italian crusaders to command their expedition, "he embarked for the coasts of Greece with ten thousand horsemen and twenty thousand foot. Every illustrious knight of Apulia and Sicily followed the prince of Tarentum. With him marched Richard, prince of Salerno, and Randulf his brother; Herman de Cani; Robert de Hanse; Robert de Sourdeval; Robert the son of Tristan; Boile de Chartres; and HUMPHREY DE MONTAIGU. All these warriors were celebrated for their exploits, but no one amongst them was more worthy to attract the attention of posterity than the brave Tancred."

The relationship of this Tancred and the Humphreys is thus set forth in Biographie Universelle, XIX, 336; and Grand Dictionnaire Universelle, par Larousse.

"UNFROI, called also ONFROI, HUMFROI or HUMPHROY, third son of TANCREDE DE HAUTEVILLE, succeeded in 1051, DROGON, his brother, in the command of the Norman adventurers who conquered La Pouille and founded the kingdom of Naples. It was he who gained, 18 June, 1053, the great victory of Civitella over Pope Leo IX., and who obtained of this pontiff, whom he had made prisoner, the investiture of the same provinces from which the holy father had wished, a few days before, to drive the Normans by a crusade. He died in 1057, and his brother

ROBERT succeeded him as Count de Pouille. This famous warrior who took the surname of Guiscard, or Wiscard, was born about 1015, and died 1085. In his conquests of various cities and of the Island of Sicily, he was aided by his younger brother ROGER, who became King of Sicily, and whose descendants were kings and dukes there. Robert's son

MARC BOHEMOND, the crusader, who eventually became Prince of Antioch, married Constance, daughter of Philippe, King of France. His posterity held supreme sway in Antioch over a hundred years. This celebrated knight, while on a visit to France, died at La Pouille in the year 1111.

Humphroy's sister's son, TANCRED, a Sicilian prince, in 1096, joined his cousin Bohemond and other friends, and led his Normans from Italy and Sicily to Palestine to aid in the conquest of the Holy Sepulchre. One of his knightly followers, Raoul de Caen, has told the story of his exploits in "Gesta Tancred;" and in Tasso's "Jerusalem Delivered" he has also found a place."

We add the following account of the meeting of the two armies: "In the midst of battle, when Bohemond and the rest despaired of seeing Jerusalem, and were in momentary expectation of death, a thousand voices proclaimed the approach of Raymond and Godfrey, who were advancing with the other division of the Christian army. Scarcely had Godfrey, who, followed by fifty knights, had preceded his army, mixed with the combatants, when the Sultan sounded a retreat and retired to the heights. The Christian army immediately formed in order of battle. Bohemond, Tancred, and Robert of Normandy placed themselves on the left; Godfrey, the Count of Flanders, and the Count de Blois led on the right wing," &c. See Michaud's Hist. of the Crusades; Dansey's English Crusaders, pp. 92, 93, 107, 109; MacFarlane's Cabinet Hist. of England, Vol. III., p. 214. Ptolemais was taken by the Sultan of Egypt in 1291, with which ended the Holy War.

† The edition from which we copy this statement was published in 1731; and has a preface by Thomas Dempster, also valuable explanatory notes collected by him from various sources. Godefredus is Godfrey de Bouillon.

†† Containing the genealogies, history and chronology of noble families in France, description of their arms, &c.; pub. by Chenaye-Desbois, at Paris, 1776; Vol. XI., p. 81. In this work it is stated that ONFROI, or HONFROI, was the name of a noble estate and fief de Hautbert, in the earldom of Eu, which has given its name to an ancient family of Upper Normandy. In a few instances we have accepted corrections of this account of the Onfroy family, found in Nobiliare Universel de France, pub. Paris, 1818; Vol. XV., pp. 191-198.

Lord of the name ONFROY, son of RODOLPHE [probably the same as the "Hunfredus, son of Rudolfus," in extract from the De Bello Sacro, as above quoted] with another Lord named Cany, and other devout Norman knights, undertook a pilgrimage to the Holy Land, and, passing through Italy, he signalized his valor at the siege of Salerno.

In the course of the first crusade, ONFROY DE SURAUMONT, son of the preceding, at the head of thirty Normans, took possession of Thoron, the strongest fort of Palestine, near Nazareth, from which he and several of his descendants took the surname.

In 1150, ONFROY, called Thoron,* son of the one who had taken this citadel by storm, commanded the rear-guard of the army which defended Antioch against the Sultan. Having become Constable of Jerusalem, he re-captured Alexandria; but displeased with Amaury, King of Jerusalem, he withdrew to Lower Armenia, with his son, where he died in 1167.

ONFROY, third of the name, called Thoron, was not more fortunate than his father and than the constable, his grandfather. After the death of Amaury, he married, in 1174, the king's younger daughter, named Isabeau Melissante, who was then only nine years of age; but, in the course of time, Philippe de Dreux, Bishop of Beauvais, who had distinguished himself in this crusade, annulled the marriage. Onfroy-de-Thoron, indignant at seeing his wife married successively to the Marquis of Montferrat and the Count of Champagne, returned to France to re-claim his rights. It was not until after his death and that of Melissante that the peers of the kingdom, assembled at Melun, published, in 1227, a notable decree, by which the children that Melissante had by her second and third marriages were declared illegitimate.

ONFROY du Boricard, son of Thoron and of the Lady of Boucard, was then too young to profit by this decree. He styled himself Porte-Oriflamme, in a census of his fief of Boricard returned to the Comte-Pairie d' Eu, 7 Jan. 1235. He had no posterity, and left a brother, one of whose descendants, the last of the name Thoron, was charged, in 1343 or thereabouts, by Philippe de Valois, with an important negociation with the Swiss: he died in Switzerland, and left a son to whom, on account of his achievements in warfare, had been given the surname of Lutin. One reads above his epitaph, of the year 1462, in the church of Puissanval, in the earldom of Eu: — "In 1425 was born ONFROY TAUPIN, grandson of ENGRAND, Esq., Lord of ONFROY, Puissanval in the earldom of Eu, and Verchots in Boulonnois, who married in London, in 1459, Bethsi Roper, eldest daughter of William Roper, Lutheran Doctor, and grand-daughter, by her mother, of the celebrated Thomas More." He was born in 1425, on his Normandy estates, and died in England, where he had been made a prisoner, leaving a daughter, and a son who had issue: GUILLAUME ONFROY-TAUPIN, who married in London, 1559. By this marriage were several sons who all changed their names in England on account of religious disturbances. The younger branch is still in existence there.

NICOLAS ONFROY, head of the elder branch, died at his chateau of Verchots, in Boulonnois. He was called de la Barre, which name his children and grandchildren have nearly all borne since that date. He left four children, all born in France, viz.: 1 N. ONFROY, died a convert to the Trappists, in the odor of sanctity. See the article Onfroy, in Second Volume of La Vie des Peres de la Trappe; 2 JEAN, Vicar of Ifs in Normandy; 3 NICOLAS, whose history is given below; 4 FRANCOISE, wife of M. de Chamilly.

NICOLAS ONFROY, called de la Barre, Esq., Officer of Cavalry, was married, in the city of Eu, to Claude de Villy, and had issue: NICOLAS DE LA BARRE, Esq., Lord of Onfroy; FRANCOISE DE LA BARRE, and several other children.

There is an Onfroy, Esq., who lives (1776) at St. Domingo, in the quarter of Isle a Vache, who belongs to this family, which bear arms: argent, a lion rampant, a rising sun or.

* Hunfredus de Torono, as given in Historiens des Croisades, pub. 1844, under the supervision of the Royal Academy; Humfroy, Humfroi, or Henfred, Le Seigneur de Toron, as found in Les Familles d' Outre-Mer, pp. 468-476; one of the series of Documents Inédits sur l' Histoire de France.

There are two other families of the name ONFROY, in the same province of Normandy; the first, of the Election of Bayeux, who bear arms: argent, a chevron, gules, three trefoils vert, two and one.

The second family is of the Election of Caen, and bear arms: or, a bande azure.

From the Nobiliaire Universel de France*, we glean the record of another branch of this ONFROY-DE-THORON Family, as follows:

I. MARIN ONFROY, a descendant of Onfroy de Thoron, 3d of the name, died in 1548; he was Esquire, Lord of Vert, Veret, Agnerville, Saint-Laurent-sur-Mer, Aubigny and Pyramiere, six parishes in the Election of Bayeux, and the Generality of Caen: and obtained from Francois I. a charter, dated 1543, in which the king eulogized his services, and those of his children and vassals, in the Bans and Arriere-Bans of the army. The name of his wife has not been ascertained.

According to an ancient tradition preserved in the family, it appears that, about the year 1490, Marin came from the city of Philadelphia, in Asia, where his family had resided since the Crusades, and that he brought with him a very large fortune which he invested in Normandy, the ancient country of his ancestors. He there planted, or grafted, a variety of apple which he had obtained in his travels, and which, in the vicinity of Caen, became famous for producing excellent cider. This apple, in our day, is known as the Marin Onfroy. After so long a residence abroad, Marin could not authentically prove his filiation with Onfroy de Thoron, third Duke of Antioch, and one of the descendants of the twelfth son of Tancred de Hauteville, a nobleman of the diocese of Coutances. It was believed to be right that he should obtain from Francois I. the charter already mentioned.

II. JEAN ONFROY, Lord of Vert, Veret, Pyramiere, &c., married Jeanne Herbellyne, and had issue:

1. CHARLES, whose history is given below.
2. Lambert Onfroy.
3. Marie Onfroy.

III. CHARLES ONFROY, Lord of Vert, Veret, Pyramiere, &c., married Christine le Poultriel, by whom he had:

1. FRANCOIS, of whom presently.
2. Pierre Onfroy, Lord of Saint-Laurent-sur-Mer, who had a daughter named Jeanne Onfroy who married Jean le Blois de la Chapelle, Counsellor to the King, and Treasurer-General of France.

IV. FRANCOIS ONFROY, Lord of Vert, Veret, &c., married Perrette Blondel, daughter of Guillaume Blondel of Emflour, Esquire, and Guillemette le Margand. Their children were:

1. FRANCOIS, of whom an account follows.
2. Lambert Onfroy, from whom was descended Jacqueline Onfroy, wife of Pierre le Court of Maillardiere.
3. Marie Onfroy, who married Pierre, Knight, Lord of Longueville.

V. FRANCOIS ONFROY, Lord of Veret, married Jeanne Hebert, daughter of Bartholemi Hebert, Lord of Beaumer, and Marie de Bunel. In a decree obtained by Francois Onfroy, in 1666, from Lord Chamillard, Commissioner of the King, it was declared that he was son of Francois, son of Charles, son of Jean, &c. He had sons:

1. JEAN, of whom presently.
2. Nicolas Onfroy, who went to rejoin his brother at Saint-Christophe, and served in the regiment de Maison. It is stated, in a certificate from the knight of Saint-Laurent, Governor of said isle, that Nicolas having been among the first to scale the fort of Tobago when it was stormed, received a wound in the arm. This governor highly praised his zeal and bravery, and employed him as an engineer. Nicolas returned to France with the remnant of his regiment.

* Pub. Paris, 1818; Vol. XV., pp. 191-198. Onffroy, in idem.

VI. JEAN ONFROY, Lord of Vert, Veret, &c., married Anne le Tellier, daughter of Marin le Tellier, Major in the isle of Saint-Christophe (and of Francoise Dumont), where Jean Onfroy acquired an extensive sugar-refinery, which was confiscated by the English when they took the island. Marin le Tellier there lost his life in battle, and probably, Jean Onfroy also, as his widow returned alone to France, and obtained a certificate from M. Hozier the genealogist, dated 13 November, 1697, in which it was stated that the arms of Jean Onfroy were entered in the Armorial General. He had a son:

VII. JACQUES-CHARLES ONFROY, Lord of Vert, Veret, &c., who married Jeanne de Minfant, daughter of Jean de Minfant, Esq., and of Jacqueline Carrel. They had a son:

VIII. PIERRE-ROLAND ONFROY, Esq., Lord of Rosiere, a wealthy resident of Saint Domingo, who married Claire de Pike, daughter of Samuel-Antoine-Martin de Pike, a naval engineer at Cape Francois, and Marie-Claire d' Auvergne de Gagny. He belonged to a prominent family in the county of Lancaster; his father, Thomas Pike of Barouthe, was executed at London on account of his loyalty to his king.

IX. JACQUES-ROLAND ONFROY, Lord of Gaudinelaye, Rosiere and Varennes, Marquis of Veres, or Veret, &c., &c., born at Saint Domingo, 21 Sept., 1751; married, 21 October, 1771, Louise Augustine du Frene de Virel, daughter of Augustine du Frene de Virel, Counsellor in the Parliament of Brittany, and of Louise-Henriette de Coulombe, daughter of Hyacinthe de Coulombe, knight of Saint-Louis, and a sea-captain. Jacques-Roland Onfroy was settled in Brittany, and wishing to enjoy the prerogatives of the nobility of this province he obtained a decree from the Parliament of Brittany, 20 July, 1782. He and his descendants lost immense fortunes in France and Saint Domingo during the Revolution. For an account of his children see Nobiliaire Universel de France, Vol. XV., p. 197. His son

X. ANNE-MARTHE-ROLAND ONFROY, Knight, was born in Brittany, 15 Dec., 1778, Knight of the Royal and Military Order of Saint-Louis, Chief of Battalion of the Royal Corps of Artillery, and in the regiment of Douai. He married, 31 Jan., 1807, Jeanne Paulin de Gournay, daughter of Michel de Gournay, a venerable officer, Knight of Saint-Louis, and a wealthy resident of Saint Domingo. They had five sons and a daughter born on the island of Jamaica. For their names, &c., see p. 198, Idem.

ARMS: argent, a chevron gules with three trefoils vert. The shield stamped with a marquis' crown. Supports: two lions.

The name of "PETER D' AMFREVILLE," banneret, is found in "A Roll of all the Norman Nobles, Knights and Esquires who went to the Conquest of Jerusalem with Robert Duke of Normandy," (first crusade, 1096) copied from an ancient manuscript, written on vellum, found in the library of the Cathedral of Bayeux, and entitled "Les anciennes histoires d'outremer." Coat of Arms: D' argent, a l'aigle de sable, becquee et membree de gueules. (i. e. an eagle sable, beaked and legged gules.)

During the third crusade, in 1177, the town of Belinas, known in Scripture as Casarea Philippi, was captured by Noradin, from HUMFREY DE TORON.*

In the same crusade was WALTER FITZ HUMFREY, whose arms are given as, "quarterly, ar. and sable." HUMPHREY DE VELLI was at the siege of Acre in 1191. When an assault was made upon the town, the English and Germans attached ladders to the walls, whereon the Pagans made a sortie, and put them to flight, taking the ladders belonging to the Germans. "They, moreover, tied cords to the scaling ladders of the English, and tried to drag them over the walls: whereon Ralf Telli, Humphrey de Velli, Robert de la Lande and Roger Glanville mounted the ladder and put out the Greek fire which had been thrown on it." †

† Dansey's Crusaders. "Till after 1190, the use of heraldic devices was most capricious and rarely hereditary."

Several of the crusader-knights of the HUMFREY name, which we have just mentioned, were of that branch of the family which had remained in France.*

The English branch were not unrepresented in the same stirring and martial times. One, "LE SIRE D'UMFRAVILLE," said to be a descendant of Robert de Umfreville, (of the line of barons of Prudhoe and Earls of Angus, ante 20), accompanied Richard Cœur de Lion, who arrived in Palestine in the Spring of 1191, in time to vigorously press the siege of Acre. "The arms of Umfraville are given in the Harleian MS.†: gu.; 5 fleurs-de-lis; crusule, or. The representatives of this family are Sir Carnaby Hagerston, Bart., the family of Lambert (who derive from Joane Umfraville), and that of Lodington."‡ [See CHART I.]

Of this valorous crusader there is a handsome monumental effigy remaining, in Hexham Abbey Church, which was built by Wilfrid in the latter part of the seventh century. It is thus described by Hewitt, in Hand-book to Hexham and its Antiquities: "In the south aisle of the choir are two table monuments; from one the effigy has been removed, and on the other is the recumbent figure of a knight of the holy banner—supposed to be a member of the baronial family of Umfraville. When Dr. Johnson, of Pontefract, visited Hexham about two hundred years ago, he found this monument in the same aisle, so that probably this was its original position. According to Hutchinson's account, the particular spot where it stood was a little above the inlaid slab of Sir Robert Ogle. It is now (1879) laid without any base of masonry in the aisle of the north transept. The head of the effigy rests on two cushions, the one placed like a lozenge on a square, without supporters. The lower part of the crossed legs is broken off, and there is no trace of an animal or other object against which they may have rested; in fact the requisite space does not seem to be afforded. There is nothing peculiar about the costume, which exhibits a suit of link mail, partially covered with a sleeveless surcoat strapped round the waist. The sword is suspended from an undecorated belt, and the shield, which has a narrow guige, is charged in relief with a cinquefoil, surrounded by a number of crosses much battered, but it is to be remarked, that which remains uninjured is not a cross crosslet, as is subsequently borne in the arms of Umfraville, but a cross patee. In Ralph Brooke's "Catalogue and Succession," etc., he blazons the arms of Gilbert Umfraville, Earl of Angus, Lord of Prudhoe, Otterburne, Harbottle, and Redesdale, whom this effigy probably commemorates 'Guculles a une quinkfoile. et le champe croise le patee d'or'; and in a Roll of Arms, of the time of Edward the Third, 'Le Conte de Angesse porte de goutes or un quintefoil d'or et croisslets d'or.' The effigy rests on a slab, the chamfer of which is decorated on the south,

* Other members of the French family of Humphreys, and in some instances probably connected with the Honfroi Crusaders, are mentioned in O'Gilvy's Nobiliaire de Normandie, viz:

NICOLAS ANFRAY, Sieur du Cardonnet, in the bailiwick of Rouen, had the title of nobility conferred in 1594.

N. ANFRAY, of Orbec, the title of nobility having been conferred in 1682, was taxed for this, 40 livres.

N. ANFRAY, of Bayeux, having been ennobled 1682, was taxed for this, 20 livres.

In a catalogue of Norman noblemen (1666 and later) in De Magny's Nobiliaire de Normandie:

WILLIAM ANFRIE, Lord of Chaulieu, a native of the Election of Vire, and member of Parliament of Rouen, 1592. Arms: Azure, three triangles or; on a chief gules, charged with three unicorns' heads or, two crosslets of the same.

ONFROY,—Election of Bayeux, held in 1666; Argent, a chevron gules, accompanied with three trestles vert.

ONFROY,—Generalite-District of Caen, held in 1666: Or, a bande azure.

ONFROY,—Esquire, (in the Earldom of Eu): Argent, a lion or; a rising sun of the same.

ONFRAY, JEAN,—Argent fesse az. surmounted with three stars of the same. Ennobled, 1705. (In chronological list of letters patent of nobility conferred).

or right side, with two semi-globular objects at the upper, and two at the lower end, but so much worn down as not to be positively identified with the 'ball flower ornaments.' At the east end of it is the crouching figure of a dog; the rest of the design, if any, being lost through a corner of the slab having been broken off. On the chamfer, at the head of the stone, are three objects, but only one, apparently a dog with something before its mouth, is tolerably well-defined. In a particular light, another seems like a squirrel with a sprig of foliage. On that of the left hand side of the figure are three animals, probably dogs or wolves—(for their present situation, close to the wall of the aisle, forbids an accurate examination by the eye). This chamfered slab rests on another boldly embattled, but at the head, foot, and right side only, as if the figure had originally been placed against some object on the north side. It is, I think, extremely probable that these animals introduced on the chamfer may have some allusion to a very peculiar tenure, by which the Umfrevilles held lands, in grand serjeanty, of the Crown. Madox, in his "Baronia Anglica," p. 244, says that the castle of Harbottle and the manor of Otterburn were held of the king, in capite, by Robert Umfreville, in 1428, by the service of keeping the valley of Redesdale free from wolves and robbers.

"This effigy appears originally to have been covered with a herse, or certainly with some kind of canopy; for there still may be seen on the surface of the chamfered bed of the figure four pieces of iron soldered into it, a portion of the stone around being also cut away to form a firmer footing for the shaft which rested upon it. * * *

"Gilbert de Umfreville, Earl of Angus, whom this effigy may be supposed to represent, died in the year 1307, and before the 8th of November, when his son Robert was designated by that title." It seems probable, on examining the account of "Le Sire D'Umfraville"†† given by Mr. Dansey, that Mr. Hewitt was mistaken, and that the monument is of an earlier date than he supposed.

Mr. Wallis, in his "Antiquities of Northumberland," mentions, as in Hexham Church, a "sepulchral memorial of a Knight Templar, with his effigies, and the usual symbols of his order, cut in stone. By the shield, it appears to have been one of the baronial-family of the Umfranvils, eminent benefactors to the priory [of Hexham]; their arms, gules, a cinquefoil between eight cross mollins, 3. 2. 3." (See Arms, page 29.)

"On the same side of the quire, a little lower down, is a monument to the memory of Sir Robert Ogle, of Ogle Castle."††

"As will be observed the word builded is varied in the spelling on the two sides, and also the heading is a little varied, probably for want of space. The name WM FOIRA is supposed to represent Humphrey [Umfoira]; Errington is intelligible enough, and this good Humphrey was probably of the Sandhoe or rather Beaufront family, who, we believe, once owned the land here, and who were always liberal and generous public benefactors. The date has entirely gone from the west face, and the figure '3' has but recently disappeared from the east one."*

HUMFREYVILLES OF PENMARK CASTLE, GLAMORGANSHIRE, WALES.

HENRY DE HUMFREYVILLE is mentioned in the grant of Lantmenthin. Of this family were the lords of the Castle of Penmark, near Lancavern, Glamorganshire, 1090. They, or their ancestor, came at the Conquest.

HENRY UMFREVILLE, of Penmark, probably living about 1300, is supposed to have been a descendant. The barony of Torrington belonged to an ancient family who took their name from this the place of their residence. After five descents, the barony was divided between the co-heiresses of Matthew, Baron de Torrington, married to Merton, Wales, Tracy, Sully and Umfraville. * * * Sully's was inherited by Guy de Brian and Umfraville's by St. John. The whole eventually came to the crown, and was possessed, under royal grants, by the Hollands, Dukes of Exeter, and by Margaret, Countess of Richmond, who is said to have resided at Torrington.†

THE UMFRAVILLES OF DOUN UMFRAVILLE, CO. DEVON, ENGLAND.

In the fourteenth century a family bearing this name resided in Devonshire.

"GILBERT UMFRAVILL of Doun Umfravill, kt.; WILLAM UMFRAVILL, of Combpyne, his sonne, kt.; WILLAM UMFRAVILL, of Combpyne, kt. sonne of Willam," are mentioned among those who held lands in the time of King Edward III. (1327-1377.)*

UMFRAVILLE.—"The manor of Haccomb-fee was held, at the time of the Domesday Survey under William Chievre, as of the manor or honour of Bradnesse. It afterwards belonged to the Haccombcs, from whom it passed successively to the families of Coliford, Upton and Umfraville." †

UMFRAVILLE of Lapford, Devonshire, is in the list of ancient families extinct, or removed, before 1620. ‡

DOUNE UMFRAVILL.—Among "Noblemen and knightes y<sup>t</sup> have no dwellings, but have great lands in this countye of Devon" are included "John lo. Peter & Willam lo Petre his sonne after hym, the mannors of Uphaye, Haccombfee, Shute, Combpyne, Doune Umfravill," &c. ** Sir Thomas Pine, of Shute, left two daughters and heirs who carried their portions to their husbands, one a Bonville of the parish of South Leigh, the other a Humphreyville of Down Humphreyville in Combe-Pine.

From another source we have the statement that "Down Umphraville, in Axmouth parish, with the farms of Pinney and Whitelands, belonged to the Lords Petre. †† These estates were sold by the present Lord Petre to J. M. Howe, Esq. Down Umphraville now (1822) belongs to the Rev. J. Howe." †††

"LE SIRE D'OMFREI was in the Holy Land, temp. Richard I. The Baronet of the name of Homfray claims descent hence." *** As Homfray was derived from the French words homme and vrai, the h being silent in homme it would not be sounded in speaking the name and might therefore come to be omitted in the writing thereof. †††

Mr. Burke, in his account of "Homfray of Penllyne Castle," states that "the Homfrays were distinguished amongst the soldiers of the Cross." The relationship of the branch of the family just mentioned, of "Homfray of The Place," and of "Sir John Homfray," 1390, to the crusader, Le Sire D'Omfrei, is made quite apparent by comparing their arms, found in this work, with his, which are here given. †††

SIR JOHN HOMFRAY seems to have imbibed the spirit of his kinsman, the Crusader, for he is described as a "gallant warrior." We regret that we have no history of his valiant deeds, but we know that, although living as early as 1390, he was sufficiently distinguished to have his portrait preserved in the British Museum. For a copy of the same we are indebted to the "Perlustration of Great Yarmouth,"* and, probably, also to the Rev. John Homfray of that place, who took great interest in antiquarian, heraldic and genealogical pursuits.

In ancient times a knight, or person of note, wore over his armor a surcoat having his arms blazoned thereon. In some cases these appeared instead on the trappings of his horse, as in this instance. For Arms of Sir John Homfray see Plate above.

* In 1209, Yarmouth became a Free Borough. The port of Yarmouth attained its greatest relative importance in the reign of Edward III., (1327-1377), when it furnished the King with 43 ships and 1,083 mariners, being a much larger number than could be obtained from any other port in the kingdom.

In 1382, King Richard II. "hearinge," says Manship the elder, "goode reporte of the towne of Greate Yermorthe, came in his own proper person unto the said towne, and did vewe the same, and likinge verie well thereof, did graunte such privileges as before that tyme had been by himself revoked uppon the slanderous report of the men of Leistofte." Perlustration of Great Yarmouth, pp. 25-6.

MEMORANDA OF THE HUMPHREYS OF SUSSEX COUNTY, ENGLAND.

1500-28. In History and Antiquities of Lewes, we find a JOHN HUMPHREY who was probably born not long after 1500, as his daughter's husband was born in 1528 (unless she was much the younger):

Chart of "Jefferay of Chiddingly," * &c.—Richard Jefferay, of South Malling, died 13th Dec., 1600, aged 72. He married Margery, widow of Richard Keyme, and daughter of JOHN HUMPHREY.

In Berry's Pedigrees of Families in Co. Sussex, p. 156, we find that Jone [Joan], daughter of —HUMFRIES, and widow of Richard Rayne or Keyme, married Richard Jefferay, who was son of Richard Jefferay who died in 1554, and grandson of John Jefferay, of Chittingly Manor, who died May 28th, 1513.

(Although there are some discrepancies between these two preceding statements, it seems from the dates, and some of the names, that there must have been an allusion to the same marriage; but whether this John Humphrey is the same as the one mentioned by Rev. F. Spurrell in his account of Cornelius Humphrey we cannot determine. He might belong to a preceding generation.)

An interesting article is found in the Sussex Archæological Collections † relating to CORNELIUS HUMPHREY, the inventory of his Estate, and the family to which he belonged. This document was prepared by the Rev. F. Spurrell, and read, January, 1853, at the Quarterly meeting of the Sussex Archæological Society, held at Lewes, a town about seven miles from Newhaven, ‡ which will be mentioned hereafter, and fifty from London. We have copied portions of this article which seemed to be of interest, but not the inventory, as it is too extended, occupying several pages of the work:

"This inventory, apparently made for the purposes of taxation, is here printed, not because of its rarity, but because it gives a very good idea of the household property of a substantial yeoman land-owner or small country gentleman 156 years ago. * * * To have had such a large sum of money in his purse and so many "desperate debts," together with so valuable an amount of property in "stock and good debts," proves that Mr. Cornelius Humphrey was at least of some standing, and certainly importance, at Newhaven. The house in which he lived, and where these goods were, was the best house at Newhaven, and is still standing, having been built some one hundred years before the time, 1697. The family of Humphrey can be shown, from various parish registers, to have lived in Sussex the last three hundred years. Mention of the name more or less connected with Lewes (the Humphrey town-house being yet there, like as the country house is at Newhaven) repeatedly occurs in the marriage and burial registers of Worth, Bodiam, Brighton, as well as Newhaven; and it is known that also at Hartfield and Lingfield, as well as at Laughton and Cuckfield, the family held landed property.

"There have not been sufficient data collected to connect all the names of the Humphreys in these different parishes, so that, even if properly part of this paper, to draw up a pedigree is at present impossible. But after stating that the earliest mention of the name is John Humphrey of Linfield, who married Anne, daughter of Richard Gratwick of Cowfold, and whose marriage settlement is dated 6 Edward VI. (1553), it may be justly interesting to trace the descent of our Cornelius Humphrey, whose [Newhaven] house and estate, together with this inventory, have come down to their present owner, grandson and third of the name of Counsellor Humphrey's heir, Mr. William Elphick.

‡ Newhaven is situated near the mouth of the river Ouse, at about half a mile from the sea. It is the nearest sea-port to the capital of England, and the nearest English port to the capital of France. Hist. and Antiq. of Lewes and its Vicinity, by Rev. T. W. Horsfield, F. S. A.; 2 Vols., pub. 1824, Lewes.

"It is not known in what year Cornelius Humphrey was born, but it seems probable that he died at the close of the year 1696-7. * * *

"The inventory is a roll, six feet six inches long by five inches wide, of sheets of paper sewn together, bearing no maker's name but a water-mark of fleur-de-lys. * * It was formerly amongst the papers of another member of the family, who received some Laughton property of the Counsellor Humphrey; but it may be well to remark that, besides this inventory, it is believed no other papers of public interest of the Humphrey family are now in existence.

This is the heading or beginning of the document: "A True and Perfect Inventory of y<sup>e</sup> Goods and Chattels of Cornelius Humphrey late of Newhaven als [alias] Meeching in the County of Sussex," &c.

In the list of "Uncertaine debts" is "A part of the Isabella Fflyboate, John Humphrey master." In the list of "Desparate Debts" is "One Bond of Thomas Humphrey 293-00-00," also "A Judgment upon John Humphrey, 70-00-00."

[As Cornelius is the only son given in the chart as surviving his father, and was probably aged about ten in 1697, we think John and Thomas may have been brothers, or other relatives, of the elder Cornelius.]

NOTES AND MENTION OF HUMPHREYS (not placed).

1073. At the storming of the Castle at Le Mans, a city in the province of Maine just south of Normandy, in 1073, "HUMFREY, the King's Seneschal," was killed; "of the other Normans, some shared his fate, others were put in bonds or driven out of the land."*

About the same date, possibly a little earlier, "ONFROY, Squire of a foreigner," married a daughter of Simon Thorn, proprietor of the two manors of Elreton and Todewick.†

1100. In the list of "priors of St. Mary Overy in Southwark," (perhaps 13th century) is the name "HUMPHRY."‡

1180-95. JOSLIN ONFREY, or ONFROY, was of Normandy.**

1272, (circa) ROGER, WALTER and THOMAS HUMFREY, of England.††

1300. PETER HUMFREY was Mayor of Leicester.

1320. RICHARD UMFREY was dean of Humble-Yard Deanery, Archdeaconry of Norfolk.‡‡

1365. WILLIAM HUMFREY was the Vicar of Lowestoft, Co. Suffolk; patron, the Bishop of Norwich, pleno jure patronus.—History of County Suffolk, by Rev. Eaton, and others, and obtained the marriage also of the daughter and heiress of Thomas de Bumpstede; and in 1389, the Countess of Norfolk granted, to Jeffry Massingham, the marriage of Maud, daughter and heiress of Thomas son and heir of Adam Humfry, and Maud his wife, of Refham."†††

1413. Under the 1st of Henry V., before William-Chanewe, bailiff, and the jurats, a conveyance was attested by SIMON HUMPHREY of New Romney, parish of the Cinque Portes, to Richard White, daughter and heir of Simon Makeyt. JOHN HUMPHREY was chamberlain of the corporation at that date.‡‡‡

1425. JOHN UMFRAY. In 1425, clocks were extremely rare, and the keeping them in order was a work of much cost and trouble. John Humphry, who was ejected for his non-conformity."‡

He is probably the one to whom allusion is made in a letter from Samuel Petto to Increase Mather, dated "Mon. 11. d. 21, 1678-9." He writes: "Mr. Humfreys is an ingenious man; the same who formerly did write for large admissions to the Lord's table, and who since the late Conformity here did write a book for re-ordination (and is still, I suppose, of the same mind) yet himself being re-ordained or submitting to Episcopal ordination, hoping thereby to continue his liberty of publick preaching. This his own re-ordination (in some matters referring to it) so disquieted his spirit, as it was like a heavy rugg upon him, that he could not (without sweating) lye under it, nor cast it off, till he had made a recantation even in print, so tender a thing is conscience, if God setteth home anything upon it, how small soever it may seeme to be in itselfe. So that he is not a Conformist. The same man hath written other small pamphlets as a midde way, —1. Of Election; 2. Of Justification, introducing workes into it; 3. 1674. "PELHAM HUMPHREY was brought up with Blow and Mich. wife, in the Chapel Royal, under Captain Cook, who was appointed Master of the children at the Restoration. When Humphrey lost his treble voice, he was admitted, in 1666, a gentleman of his Majesty's chapel, and, on the death of Captain Cook, 1672, was appointed Master of the children. He did not, however, long fill this honorable station, as he died, very much regretted, at the early age of twenty-seven, in 1674.

"His choral compositions are numerous for so short a life; as besides his seven full and verse anthems, printed by Dr. Boyce, there are five preserved in score by Dr. Aldrich, in Christ Church, Oxford; and six in Dr. Tudway's collection, British Museum, that have never been printed.

"As French music was much better known in England, during the reign of King Charles II. than Italian, there are in the melody of this composer, and in that of Purcell, passages which frequently remind us of Lulli, whom King Charles pointed out to his musicians as a model. Indeed, it is said that Humphrey was sent to Paris by the King, in order to study under Lulli; and that besides his merit in composition, he was an excellent performer on the lute. Indeed, he seems to have been the first of our ecclesiastical composers who had the least idea of musical pathos in the expression of words implying supplication or complaint.

"His anthem for three voices, 'Have mercy upon me, O God,' has great merit on the side of expression, for the time in which it was composed, as well as harmony, in which there are several combinations that seem new and boldly hazarded for the first time, at least in church music.

"In his verse anthems many new effects are produced by modulation and notes of taste and expression.

"The favorite interval in the melody of this composer is the false fifth, and, if it be true, as related by Dr. Boyce, that Humphrey studied under Lulli at Paris, he probably acquired his partiality for this interval there, as it has long been in great favor in the serious French opera.

"It is somewhat remarkable, that all the seven-verse anthems, which Dr. Boyce has inserted about forty, Mr. Samuel Humphreys. 'He was,' says the Daily Post, 'a gentleman well skilled in the learned languages, and the polite among the modern. Though he was very conversant in and fond of history, and every part of the the Belles Lettres, yet his genius led him chiefly to poetry, in which (had Fortune been as indulgent to him as Nature) he would have left such compositions as must have delighted late posterity. The admired Mr. Handel had a due esteem for the harmony of his numbers; and the great Mæcenas, the Duke of Chandos, showed the regard he had for his muse, by so generously rewarding him for celebrating his Grace's seat at Canons. Some disappointment Mr. Humphrey met with forced him to appear as a translator, on which occasion the graceful ease and other beauties of his versions gained him no little applause; but his too intense application (for he sometimes wrote the whole night) and his never taking any exercise, greatly impaired his health; and at last brought him into a consumption which proved fatal to him. His corpse was buried, in a private but decent manner, in Islington Churchyard. He wrote Ulysses, an opera; translated Spectacle de la Nature; also wrote Canons, a poem, and several other pieces.'* (This is the same Samuel mentioned on page 41, year 1728: and corrects the title of the poem there given as "Cannons.")

HERALDIC NOTES AND DEFINITIONS

WITH REFERENCE TO THE HUMPHREY ARMS.

HERALDRY, in its present state, has just claim to be ranked among the sciences; and, to be fully understood, must be carefully studied, so technical are the terms used and so various the discriminations made. With our limited space we can only consider its origin and early history, and give a few explanations which will assist our readers in understanding the descriptions of Humphrey arms.

As to its origin there have been various conjectures. "Diodorus Siculus is cited as an authority, asserting that armorial distinctions were first adopted by the Egyptians, Anubis and Macedo, sons of Osiris, under the emblems of a wolf and dog." Others find in the descriptions of the delineations on the shields of heroes, made by Homer, Æschylus and Virgil, a reason for tracing the earliest use of such devices to the Greeks. But it must be borne in mind that these embellishments were made according to the fancy of the artist, illustrating some exploit of the chief, past or predicted; and that his arms, if they should be so called, were not hereditary. Philpot derived the introduction of heraldry from ancient mythology, and regarded the hieroglyphics and emblems of Greece and Rome found on the reverses of their medals as the originals or models of modern armories. Dallaway thinks that "much must be attributed to those ensigns which were first adopted by the stipendiary bands of German soldiers," and that after the invasion of England by the Saxons in the tenth century, the use of arms increased.

These devices seem to have been first employed for military regulation, to distinguish one man or band of men from another, and to have been painted or embroidered on rich stuffs in the forms of BANNERS, as the earliest mode after the personal use of arms. The art of blazoning is unquestionably the property of the French, and received a fresh impetus towards the end of the tenth century, from the tournaments held with such magnificence under the auspices of Hugh Capet.

Arms were engraved on SEALS for the purpose of ratifying deeds and charters. Selden states that "there were Golden Seals of the French Kings and Wax ones of the subjects, between the years 600 and 700, fashioned with Escutcheons and Coats of Arms."* The use of seals is said to have been introduced into England from Normandy, by Edward the Confessor who was there educated. The intercourse between England and the Norman provinces was such for many centuries that their customs, arts and manners are said to have been the same. The first and second great seals used by Richard I. were of dates 1189, 1195. At this time he is represented as bearing a small SHIELD, fastened to a belt, on which arms are painted; and Mr. Dallaway regards this as the first instance in which arms were so borne in England.

CRESTS were first worn to discriminate the bearer, when the shield was not used, in jousts and tournaments. They were "originally made of light wood carved, or boiled leather pressed in a mould into the form of some animal, real or fictitious, set upon a wreath, coronet, or chapeau, placed above the helmet." Some of these were quite large, representing a lion, swan, dragon, &c. The crest was sometimes called a cognizance, but they were distinct devices, the former being worn only by heroes of great valor, and by those of high military rank, while the latter were badges which subordinate officers and followers might bear, not being entitled to a crest.

MOTTOES are not considered of very great importance, as they may be changed or relinquished at the pleasure of the bearer. They are doubtless, however, in some instances connected with the family history.

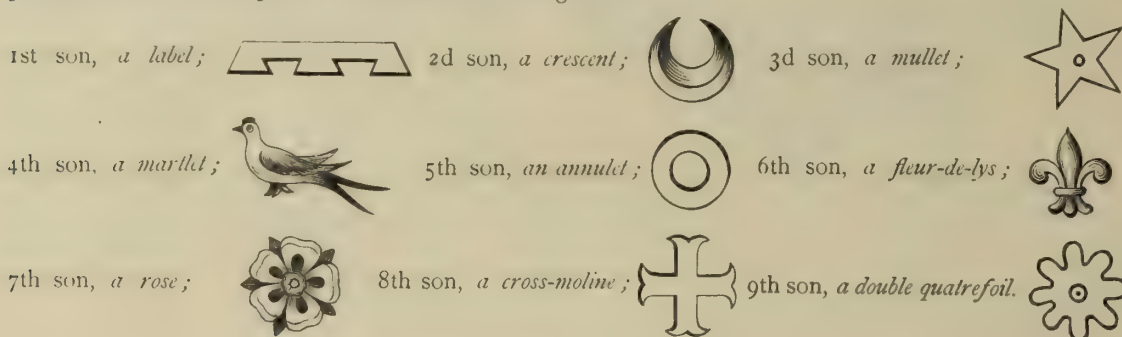

There are very interesting records showing the progress made in the science of Heraldry from century to century.

* Titles of Honour.

Those chiefs who returned from the crusades to their own country were naturally desirous of calling forth the highest admiration of their martial exploits, and in this they were encouraged by Richard I. who had also been to the Holy Land. For this purpose they procured every external embellishment. "The bannerols* of this era were usually of the richest manufacture of silk stuffs, on which the device was embroidered; and the shields of metal enameled in colors, and diversified with flourishes of gold and silver." At this time arms were personal, their hereditary use not being established until the reign of Henry III. (1216-72). Prior to this date, therefore, they cannot be considered as showing descent or alliance. Richard II. (1377-99) laid the foundation of a College of Arms, by empowering the Earl-Marshal to constitute a Court of Chivalry. At first, all the sons of an Esquire were allowed to appropriate their father's device. To avoid the confusion of persons which resulted from this indulgence, specific marks were incorporated with the patrimonial bearings. Besides making a variation from the simple ordinary by adding different charges, collateral branches often relinquished their patronymic and assumed the name of an acquired seignior; yet in some instances the affinity is still to be discovered by the armorial bearing, after it has ceased to be known by identity of surname.† The heralds of the seventeenth century decided upon the following arrangement:—The sons of an armiger, or esquire, were to use the paternal arms, but to place "in chief" these charges:

THE ELEVEN CLASSES OF ARMS NOW IN USE.

1. Adoption. Those of another family, borne either singular or quartered with those of the paternal coat. If a person, by will, adopt a stranger to possess his name and estates, the person so adopted applies to the Sovereign for a special warrant to empower him to carry out the will of the adopter, and thereby assumes his name and arms.

2. Alliance. Those arms taken by the issue of an heiress or co-heiress, quartered with those of their father, thereby showing their descent by the mother's side from a family of which the male heir is extinct.

3. Assumption. Such as might, by the consent of the Sovereign, be legally assumed by one who had made captive any gentleman of higher degree than himself. A coat thus obtained was considered more honorable than hereditary bearings.

4. Canting, Allusive, or Parlantes. Contain charges hinting at the name, character, office or history of the original bearer, and are very numerous in English armoury; such as for Armiger, three helmets; for Butler, three covered cups; for Camel, a camel; and for Pine, a pine-tree.

5. Community. Those of bishoprics, cities, universities, etc.

6. Concession. Augmentations, granted by the Sovereign, of parts of his ensigns or regalia, to such persons as he pleases to honor therewith.

7. Dominion. Belong to sovereigns, princes and commonwealths, and are borne on coins, standards, seals, etc.

* A small banner carried on military weapons.

† Dallaway.

8. Paternal and Hereditary. Such as descend from father to son, from generation to generation.

9. Patronage. Two kinds. First, they consist of parts of the arms of lords of whom the persons bearing them held them in fee; either added to the paternal arms of the person assuming such additions, or borne as feudal arms, to show the dependence of the parties bearing them on their particular lord. Secondly, they are such as governors of provinces, lords of manors, etc., add to their family arms.

10. Pretension. Borne by sovereigns, who, although they have not possession of certain dominions, claim a right to them. Thus the kings of England quartered the arms of France from 1330, when Edward III. laid claim to that kingdom, till the year 1801, although long before this England had laid aside all pretensions to France.

11. Succession. Taken by those who inherit certain fiefs or manors, etc., by will, entail, or donation, the arms of which they quarter with their own.*

In comparing the arms of the different Humphrey families we find evident relationships existing where, without their aid, his ancestor, was in one of being the cross-bottony,  Cross-bottony. In this instance the number would seem to point to antiquity, as it is stated that Louis VII. (1180-1223) chose the colour azure, and the fleurs-de-lis d'or of the royal mantle for the national shield, and that before his reign they were not used on coats of arms in France. Many were formerly employed to denote royalty, but in the fourteenth century the number was reduced to three on the shield of France.††† There was a house (1533) near the church of St. Malo, parish of St. Malo, Bayeux, where the facade was adorned with fleurs-de-lis and ermine, and in the midst was a genealogical tree in relief, charged with several escutcheons, among others those of France, Brittany, Dauphiny, and of the Medicis of Tuscany.†††† Three fleurs-de-lis are on the arms of Evreux, near which city is Amfreville, the seat of the Umfreville family in Normandy; Humfrey of London, 1562, bore two, azure; and another of the same name bore three, sable.* With regard to the cinqfoil we find the following:—"Gilbert de Umfrevile, son of the Earl of Angus, and grandson of Robert de Bellemont (alias Beaumont) Earl of Leicester, in the reign of King Henry III. (1216-1272) bore for his arms, gules, semee of crosses-patonce and a cinqfoil or; which device evidently points out, both his descent from the Earls of Leicester, and also his having served under them in the Crusading Wars for the establishment of the Christian kingdom of Palestine. Many other instances might be given of the bearing of cinquefoils, derived from feudal dependence upon the ancient Earls of Leicester."† This charge is on the arms of the Umfrevilles of Middlesex, Langham in Essex, Farnham Royal, Buckinghamshire, Lincolnshire, and of several others. In the arms of the Hunfranvils on the rectory-house in the parish of Elsdon, Redesdale, six cinqfoils are given. In one case the cinquefoil is described as "pierced."‡ Horse-shoes are borne by one family of Umfrevilles and one of Humfreviles, and the rose or by several.** The rose gules borne by the Humfreys of London, 1562, may have reference to the Wars of the Roses, or of York and Lancaster (1455-85), as the Lancastrians chose the red rose as their emblem and the Yorkists the white rose, and they were afterwards used as charges to denote these wars. This family may therefore have been originally Umfrevilles, it being stated that they suffered much during these contests. [See p. 24.]

The escallop was a badge of pilgrimage, and the bearing thereof very ancient and honorable. The Knights of the Honorable Order of St. Michael in France wore a collar of gold in the form of escallop-shells. This was borne by the Humfreys of Barton, Northamptonshire, and of Leicestershire; also by those of Truro, Cornwall.

The chase, in ancient times, being the favorite amusement of Nobility and Knighthood, many devices of animals are found. The lion is regarded as one of the earliest and most frequent, and is the emblem of royalty. There are two lions on the shield of William the Conqueror, and six young lions on that of Humphrey de Bohun (1300). It was also a charge on the shield of Sir William Humphreys, Bart., Lord Mayor of London, 1715; Humfrey of Wroxham House; Humphreys of Ballyhaise House; Humfrey of Holbroke and Drinkstone, Suffolk; Umphrastoun in Scotland, and Onfroy, Esquire, of the Earldom of Eu, Normandy, etc. In the description of arms borne by Lord Onfroy and his descendants, Supports: two lions, are given. This right of supports belonged only to high nobility.††

One of the Humfrey families of Ireland bore three leopards' heads; Humfreys of London and Wales, three nags' heads; Humphery of Penton Lodge, three gryphons' heads; William Anfrie, Lord of Chaulieu, three unicorns' heads.‡‡

The eagle was adopted very early, and was borne by Peter D' Amfreville, the crusader; also by the Humfrestones of Hampshire and of Salop. It occurs several times as a crest.***

Finding a similar device on the arms of several branches of the Humphreys family does not render it certain that they had a common ancestor. There is a much stronger proof where two or more devices correspond, and the colors employed are the same. The relationship of the various families of Umfrevilles is thus shown in a very satisfactory manner. There is a family of Humfreys in Ireland evidently related to Sir John Homfray, as they bear sable two pales ermine. Homfray of Penllyne Castle bears four pales ermine, which are the arms of Sir

ARMS OF ST. MALO.

John.* The ermine is used on the arms of several branches of this family. Breton nobles placed ermine on their shields, and it came to be employed in England to denote connection with Brittany.† The arms of the town of St. Malo are: De gueules a une herse de porte de ville d'or, soulenant une hermine passant d'argent au naturel. (Gules with a portcullis of the city gate-way or, bearing an ermine passant argent au naturel.) This city of Brittany, in the north-western part of France, was the home of Samuel Humphrey, brother of Michael Humphrey who was living in Windsor, Connecticut, in 1643.

HERALDIC TERMS.

ESCUTCHEON, from the old French escusson, was originally the shield with the arms painted thereon, in opposition to the Ecu which was a shield without device. The surface of the shield is called the FIELD because it contains those marks of honour acquired in the field. The shield may be of any shape, and no significance is attached to the various forms, restriction now being that ladies must bear their arms in a lozenge. The two sides of an escutcheon are respectively designated as dexter and sinister, and the different POINTS by the following names: A, dexter chief point; B, middle chief point; C, sinister chief point; D, honor or collar point; E, fesse or heart point; F, nombril point; G, dexter base point; H, middle base point; I, sinister base point.

The shield, and all divisions of it, and charges placed thereon, are represented as made of metal or fur, or as painted in colors. These are all included in the general term of TINCTURES, and are named and depicted as follows:

Or, gold, represented by dots.

Argent, silver, represented by a blank.

Vert or sinople, green, represented by diagonal lines, (dexter to sinister side).

Purpure, purple, represented by diagonal lines, (sinister to dexter side).

Tenne, or orange, represented by diagonal and perpendicular lines crossed.

Murrey, or sanguine, represented by diagonal lines crossed.

Ermine, consists of a white field with black spots. There are, however, variations.

Vair, is a parti-colored fur of blue and silver (unless other colors are specified) in which the pieces are cut in the form of a shield, and placed in rows alternating the position in each. Variations in this also.

FORMS OF SHIELDS.

POINTS OF SHIELD

* Page 1, and List of Humphrey Arms.

† De Magny's Science des Armoiries.

The shield may be divided by lines in various ways, the nine simple charges being termed ORDINARIES :

1. The chief, occupying the upper third of the shield.

2. The fesse, occupying the centre third horizontally.

3. The bar, occupying the centre fifth horizontally.

4. The pale, occupying the centre third perpendicularly.

5. The bend, occupying one third of the shield diagonally.

6. The bend sinister, occupying one third of the shield diagonally.

7. The cross, being the fesse and pale conjoined, usually occupying one fifth of the field, but when charged one third.

8. The saltire, composed of the bend and bend sinister.

9. The chevron, which resembles the lower half of the saltire, with the upper lines brought to a point.

DEFINITIONS.

Accosted, or accostee, side by side.

Annulet, a ring or roundle pierced.

Barry, is formed by dividing the field into an even number of bars, the number to be specified.

Baton, a bar on an escutcheon.

Bezant, a roundle depicted gold.

Billet, a bearing in the form of a long square.

Billetty, or billettee, represents the shield, crest, etc., all strewn over with billets.

Bordure, a border extending around the shield, and one-fifth of its width. It is often charged.

Brochant, passing or crossing over.

Canton, a square placed in the dexter-chief.

Chapeau, a cap of maintenance.

Componnee, compounded, or componed.

Cottise, a diminutive of the bend, being one half the width of the bendlet; generally borne in couplets, with a bend or charges between them.

Couped, or coupy, a term to express the heads or limbs of men, animals, or any charge when evenly cut off.

Crined, said of the hair or mane when of a different color from the body of the man or animal.

Crusily, indicates that the field or charge is strewn over with crosses.

Displayed, the wings of a bird expanded.

Embattled, having the outline resembling a battlement, as an ordinary.

Embrued, represented as covered with blood.

Endorsed, the wings of a bird drawn up over the back.

Engrailed, indented with curved lines, as a line of division or an ordinary.

Fascies, a lictor's rod.

Fretty, any even number of pieces, crossing the escutcheon, bendways, and sinister and interlacing.

Garb, a sheaf of wheat.

Gardant, or guardant, signifies full-faced when applied to animals.

Gemelle, or bar-gemelle, signifies a double bar or two bars placed near and parallel to each other.

Gorged, or collared, the plain collar upon animals.

Indented, as

Label, a riband with short pendants.

Langued, a term to express the tongue of beasts and birds when of a different tincture to the body.

Levant, rising.

Pellet, a roundle depicted black.

Proper, contracted ppr., applied to anything depicted in its natural color.

Quarree, or carre, signifies square.

Quarterly, the field or charge divided into four equal parts.

Rampant, in an upright position standing on the near hind leg.

Saltier, a cross in the form of an X, called St. Andrew's cross.

Sejant, sitting.

Trefle, the trefoil.

Wavy.

ADDENDA.—In relation to the Marshalling of the six coats of Humphreys Arms which forms the Frontispiece of this Volume, and to the Book-plate of Ozias Humphry, R. A., given on page 59, I would state that, while in London, Eng., in Dec. 1881, I was shown, by Col. Joseph L. Chester, the eminent genealogist, another engraved book-plate of Ozias Humphry, Esq., in which the positions of Nos. 2 and 3 in the Frontispiece are transposed: and 3 additional quarterings are placed at the bottom of the shield: viz., (1) Ar. betw. 3 boars passant, a chevron gu. charged with 3 roses or.; (2) upon a quartering divided into 8, alternating or. and erm., a castle or.; (3) sa. a chevron engr. or. betw. 3 bezants or, on a chief of the second 3 roses gu.,—nearly similar to No. 8, of this List. ## ADDITIONAL NOTES.

In elucidation of the nature of this office of Grand Sergeancy, we may refer to the following extracts from the Supplement to the Hist. and Genealogy of the Davenport Family, which family held, in olden times the charge of the forests of Leek and Macclesfield.

"The powers of this office were the highest which the Earl could bestow, as it placed, in several cases, at the disposal of the Sergeant and his itinerant subservients, the lives of his subjects, without delay, and without appeal. * * * There is now in the possession of the family at Capesthorpe, a long roll (without date, but very ancient,) containing the names of master robbers who were taken and beheaded in the times of Vivian, his son Roger, and grandson Thomas de Davenport, and also of the fees paid to them in right of this Sergeancy. From this it appears that the fee paid for a master robber was 2s, and one salmon, and for their companions 12 pence each. There is also an account of the master robbers, and their companions slain by the Sergeants, and the fees thereon." The Rev. Walter Davenport (afterward, by royal license, Rev. Walter Davenport Bromley), says in 1850. "Though the office of Grand Sergeancy, since the time of Queen Elizabeth has been comparatively obsolete, yet Waifs, Estrays and Mortuaries were claimed as late as when my father succeeded to the estates; and I remember the old steward." And Bromley Davenport, Esq., M.P., the present proprietor of the joint estates of Bromley and Davenport says, in a letter as late as Feb., 1877:—"The old 'robber's roll' still exists, and was an object of great interest to the person employed by the Historical Commission to examine my Mss. and papers, but besides losing the practical right of putting anybody we pleased to death, (for theoretically it still exists, and in all legal documents I am described as the hereditary Grand Sergeant and Chief Forester of the forests of Macclesfield and Leek—with the formidable powers belonging to that position) we have, by disuse, also lost the advantages, whatever they were, of claims on Waifs, Estrays, and Mortuaries."

When the Rev. John Davenport, afterwards one of the principal founders of the Colony of New Haven, in Connecticut, was obliged to flee to Holland, to escape the malignancy of Archbishop Laud, whose agents were upon his track, his arrival there was thus announced to the archbishop, by one Goffe, the chaplain of an English regiment then stationed at the Hague, under date of Dec. 16, 1632. "We have another Bishop come, * * * and to be short it is Mr. Davenport, who landed here above a month ago. He came over in one Humphrey his ships, by the conduct and contrivance of Mr. Stone, a merchant in Coleman Street [London]," &c., &c.

If, either with or without Mr. Humphreys' knowledge, his ships were made the vehicles of conveying out of England any of the Puritans who were then turning to Holland as a place of religious freedom, it is not at all surprising that he was under suspicion of the archbishop, and the Church party; and this may sufficiently account, in those troublous times, for his ships being detained and hindered, as he complains before the President and Council.—(See pp. 75, 76, 77, 78.)

It is worthy of note, also, that Mr. Davenport's principal coadjutor in the gathering, conduct, and settlement of the New Haven Colony, was Gov. Theophilus Eaton. And it was "Eaton and his party" (see p. 88) to whom Mr. Humphreys endeavored to sell Nahant and Lynn as a site for their colony; Humphreys (see p. 78), also, was one of the Patentees of the Colony of Connecticut.

THE USE OF COATS OF ARMS IN CHURCHES, &c.

It is difficult to establish the date of the introduction of coats of arms in churches. Dallaway says that amongst other pageantries, on the return of the most noble and wealthy crusaders, "was the dedication of these trophies to some propitiatory Saint, over whose shrine they were suspended; and which introduced armorial bearings in the decoration of churches, frequently carved in stone, painted in fresco against the walls, or stained in glass in the windows. The avarice of the Ecclesiastics in thus adding to their treasures, conduced almost as much as the military genius of the age, to the more general introduction of arms. * * It is observable, in sculptured shields, that they are affixed by a bandage to hooks, or suspended upon branches of trees. *

* In one of the oratories in the Cathedral at Gloucester is a specimen of two shields so placed on either side a crowned head, which supports the pedestal of a niche. The most ancient mode of the introduction of sculptured escutcheons into the internal decoration of churches was under the brackets of the cross springers of vaulted roofs, upon the spandrils of the subsellia or stone benches near the altar, and on the compartments of fonts surrounded by rich tracery and foliage."

Dugdale, in his Antiquities of Warwickshire Illustrated, has many copies of coats of arms found in churches,—some cut in stone and others stained in glass. In the windows and roof of the church at Astley, in this county, are arms of several families, among which are included those of VMFRAVILE,—a pierced cinquefoil and eight cross-crosslets. [See page 29.] He also gives arms found in the windows of ancient Halls. The west window in the Chapel of the UMFREVILLES, at Holm-side Hall, according to Surtees, was "of two lights under a square label, with the cinquefoil and two blank shields in the spandrils." [See page 24.] Dallaway thinks that coats of arms came to be employed as internal embellishments of Castle Halls because that, in ancient times, the shield of each knight was suspended behind him, during feasts and other pacific solemnities. He also gives the following:—

"At what period heraldic devices were introduced into pavements cannot, I believe, be ascertained with precision; but it is probable that when they were carved or painted upon escutcheons, or stained in glass, the floors received them likewise, as a new ornament. The arms of founders and benefactors were usually inserted, during the middle centuries, after the Conquest (though doubtless there are earlier instances), when many of the greater abbeys employed kilns for preparing them: from which the conventual and their dependent parochial churches were supplied." There is an armorial pavement at Caen in Normandy, France; also before the high altar and in the library of the Cathedral at Gloucester. These furnish fine illustrations of the modes of marshaling coat armor in the fifteenth century. There are represented "single escutcheons of Beauchamp, Beauchamp impaling Hastings, and Talbot quartering Furnival and impaling quarterly Beauchamp and Newburgh. Gilbert, the second Earl of Shrewsbury, was a benefactor to the Abbey of St. Peter in Gloucester." [See foot-note ***, page 22, for Talbot.]

"It became the fashion to ornament the most splendid household furniture with the armorial bearings of the family to whom they belonged. Richard, Earl of Arundel, in 1392, gives, by his will, to his son Richard, 'a silk bed with a half tester or canopy embroidered with the arms of Arundel and Warren.'"

OZIAS HUMPHREY, F. R. A.

This eminent artist was born at Honiton* in Devonshire, 8 Sept. 1742, and was educated at the grammar school in that town under the direction of Rev. Richard Lewis, M.A., until he had completed his fourteenth year. His passion for drawing had been early and ardent, and his parents yielding to his earnest importunity, sent him to London, where he frequented the drawing school of Mr. Wm. Shipley, and profited by studying the plaster casts from the antique statues, &c., then recently imported from Italy, and made public for the benefit of students, by the liberal munificence of the late Duke of Richmond. He prosecuted these studies about three years, when the death of his father rendered it necessary for him to return to Devonshire. He was at that time particularly desirous of being placed with Sir Joshua Reynolds; but circumstances did not permit the gratification of his wishes, and he was engaged with Mr. Samuel Collins, a miniature painter of some eminence at Bath, with whom he resided two years, when his instructor removed to Dublin and Mr. Humphrey succeeded him in his professional situation in that city. In the year 1763, he was encouraged and invited by Sir Joshua Reynolds to settle himself in London near him, which he accordingly resolved upon, and accomplished the following year.

In 1766, he exhibited, at Spring Gardens, a portrait in miniature of John Mealing, the old and well-known model of the Royal Academy, which was universally noticed and admired, and was purchased by his Majesty, who was graciously pleased to reward him for it by a present of one hundred guineas; and as a further encouragement, he had the honor to paint a large miniature of the Queen, with other branches of the royal family. He continued to practice this line of art, with almost unexampled success, until the year 1772, when a fall from his horse gave his head so violent a shock and impaired his whole nervous system so much that he was unable to pursue his profession of miniature painting with the same efficacy that he had hitherto done. By the advice of his friends, he was induced to endeavor to extend the scale of his practice, and with this intention he resolved to pass a few years in Italy, not only for the reason just stated, but with the hope of general improvement in his profession. He left England in 1773, accompanied by his friend Romney, and proceeded to Rome where, and in the neighborhood, he resided four years. In this situation, though surrounded by advantages, he had still many difficulties to contend with, for his time had been so entirely engrossed by miniature painting that he had little or no practice in oil, and had the whole process to discover.

* HONITON, in county Devon, is 148 miles west south-west of London. It is a borough, market-town and parish, in the hundred of Axminster, and is situated in a delightful vale on the south side of the river Otter. It consists mainly of a broad, handsome street running from east to west, crossed by another at right angles. Through the former flows a stream of excellent water, from which the residents are supplied by a dipping-place opposite almost every door. The roofs of the buildings, which are mostly modern, are usually covered with slate, an improvement which originated from several fires, 1672, 1747, 1754 and 1763, that nearly destroyed the town. The streets are well paved and lighted. "The church, which is dedicated to St. Michael, is situated on a bold eminence, a short distance from the town; it was originally a small chapel for mendicant friars, but was enlarged, about the year 1482, chiefly at the expense of Courtenay, Bishop of Exeter, who also gave the curious screen which separates the chancel from the nave; it contains several ancient monuments. The chapel-of-ease, which is dedicated to All Saints, was erected by subscription, and is built of flint, with a tower and cupola, with six bells, a clock and chimes. There are also (1833) three meeting-houses for Protestant Dissenters, an endowed free-school and a hospital." The population is 3,296. "Near the town is a hill, which commands one of the most beautiful views in the kingdom." (Gorton's Topographical Dictionary of Great Britain and Ireland.)

In 1777, Mr. Humphrey returned to his native country, where he established himself, painting generally in oil, until the commencement of the year 1785, when he embarked for India. It was suggested to him, on his arrival at Calcutta, that the field was most open to him in miniature, and that it would be advisable for him to confine himself to that branch of his profession. He visited the courts of Moorshedabad, Benares, and Lucknow, where he painted several large miniatures of princes, nabobs, rajahs, and many other persons of high distinction. He was chosen one of the first members of the Asiatic Society, and was held in much esteem by Mr. Hastings and Sir William Jones.

His ill state of health, however, obliged him to return to England in 1788, where he resumed his original line of miniature painting, and the following spring exhibited several pictures which were greatly admired, and confirmed his former reputation. He was employed by the Duke of Dorset in reducing to a miniature size the portraits in his collection at Knowle.

In the year 1790, Mr. Humphrey was elected a member of the Royal Academy. His sight was now so much affected that he was obliged to relinquish miniature painting, and he had made some experiments in crayons, to which his studies in Italy were eminently conducive, and in which he succeeded to the utmost of his wishes. To this line of painting he now devoted all his attention, and was for some time considered at the head of that province of the art. Having completed the portraits of the Prince and Princess of Orange, in the year 1797, his sight completely failed him, and these were his last productions. The remainder of his life was passed at Knightsbridge, till within a few months of his death, which took place on the 9th of March, 1810, when he had nearly completed his 68th year.

As an artist, Mr. Humphrey possessed considerable genius, which he improved by the most exemplary assiduity and an attentive study of the best models. His design is tasteful and correct and his coloring, especially in miniatures and crayon paintings, is universally rich and harmonious.*

Boswell, in his Life of Samuel Johnson,† says of Ozias Humphrey:—

“The eminent painter, representative of the ancient family of Homfrey (now Humphry) in the West of England; who, as appears from their arms which they have invariably used, have been (as I have seen authenticated by the best authority) one of those among the knights and esquires of honour who are represented by Hollingshed as having issued from the Tower of London on coursers apparelled for the justes, accompanied by ladies of honour, leading every one a knight with a chain of gold, passing through the streets of London into Smithfield, on Sunday, at three o'clock in the afternoon, being the first Sunday after Michaelmas, in the fourteenth year of King Richard II. (1391).‡ This family once enjoyed large possessions; but, like others, have lost them in the progress of ages. Their blood, however, remains to them well ascertained; and they may hope in the revolution of events, to recover that rank in society for which, in modern times, fortune seems to be an indispensable requisite."

‡ The following is from Grafton's Chronicle, Vol. I., p. 457:—"And in the xij. yere of the kings reigne, he kept a Marciall Iustes, in Smithfield in London, in the month of Nouember, where all such persons as came in on the kings partie, their Amour and apparell was garnished with wyhte hartes, and crownes of Golde about their neckes. And of that sorte were xxiiij. knyghtes with xxiiij. Ladyes also apparaled, as aboue-sayde, and their horses were led with xxiiij. Cheynes of Golde, and so conueyed from the Towre thorough the Cite of London vnto Smithfield." In a note is added: "The Badge of King Richard the Second were white hartes with chaynes of Golde about their neckes."

It will be noticed that the date of this pageant, 1391, is nearly the same as that recorded on the picture of Sir John Humphrey, 1390, see p. 33, and, quite probably, this painting of Sir John, had some connection with the occasion. (H.)

In the same work is a copy, from the original, of a letter, dated 19 Sept. 1764, written by the artist to his brother Rev. William Humphrey, Rector of Kensing* and Seal, in Kent, and Vicar of Birling.

"The day after I wrote my last letter to you I was introduced to Mr. Johnson by a friend: we passed through three very dirty rooms to a little one that looked like an old counting-house, where this great man was sat at his breakfast. The furniture of this room was a very large deal writing-desk, an old walnut-tree table, and five ragged chairs of four different sets. I was very much struck with Mr. Johnson's appearance, and could hardly help thinking him a madman for some time, as he sat waving over his breakfast like a lunatic.

"He is a very large man, and was dressed in a dirty brown coat and waistcoat, with breeches that were brown also (though they had been crimson), and an old black wig: his shirt collar and sleeves were unbuttoned; his stockings were down about his feet, which had on them, by way of slippers, an old pair of shoes. He had not been up long when we called on him, which was near one o'clock: he seldom goes to bed till near two in the morning; and Mr. Reynolds tells me he generally drinks tea about an hour after he has supped. We had been some time with him before he began to talk, but at length he began, and, faith, to some purpose! every thing he says is as correct as a second edition: 'tis almost impossible to argue with him, he is so sententious and so knowing.

"I asked him if he had seen Mr. Reynolds' pictures lately. 'No Sir.' 'He has painted many fine ones.' 'I know he has,' he said, 'as I hear he has been fully employed.' I told him I imagined Mr. Reynolds was not much pleased to be overlooked by the court, as he must be conscious of his superior merit. 'Not at all displeased,' he said, 'Mr. Reynolds has too much good sense to be affected by it: when he was younger he believed it would have been agreeable; but now he does not want their favour. It has ever been more profitable to be popular among the people than favoured by the King: it is no reflection on Mr. Reynolds not to be employed by them; but it will be a reflection forever on the court not to have employed him. The King, perhaps, knows nothing but that he employs the best painter; and as for the queen, I don't imagine she has any other idea of a picture, but that it is a thing composed of many colours.'

"When Mr. Johnson understood that I had lived some time in Bath, he asked me many questions that led, indeed, to a general description of it. He seemed very well pleased; but remarked, that men and women bathing together, as they do at Bath, is an instance of barbarity, that he believed could not be paralleled in any part of the world. He entertained us about an hour and a half in this manner; then we took our leave. I must not omit to add, that I am informed he denies himself many conveniences, though he cannot well afford any, that he may have more in his power to give in charities."

In 1784, Mr. Johnson wrote to Mr. Humphry, requesting that a young painter, his godson, might be allowed to attend him from time to time in his painting-room, to see his operations and receive his instructions.†

The late Colonel Joseph L. Chester, of London, gives the following:—

"WILLIAM HUMPHRY (the brother of Ozias) matriculated at Oxford University, from Magdalen Hall, 9 April, 1767, aged 23, as son of George Humphry, of Honiton, Devonshire, paying the fees of a Gentleman's son. He took his degree of B. A. 12 Feb. 1771, and that of M. A. 21 June, 1773. In the latter year he must have obtained the livings which he held until his death. I have not the record of his burial, which probably took place at Kensing, but on a white marble tablet on the wall of the south aisle of the church at Seal, is the following inscription:—

‘TO THE MEMORY OF THE

“His wife’s name was ELIZABETH. They had two sons buried at Seal, viz.: George-Upcot, 19 May, 1803, aged 18, who was then a student at Jesus College, Cambridge, and William-Ozias, 2 June, 1826, aged 46.”

Mrs. Sophia D. Ware, 4 Brook Place, 116 Lee Road, Lee Green, Kent, (formerly of Malvern House, Honiton, Devonshire), daughter of John Humphry, Esq., who was born in Honiton, 1801, and residing there in 1875, has furnished a copy of the inscription on a tomb-stone in the ancient church-yard at Honiton:

“IN MEMORY OF
MR. GEORGE HUMPHRY, AND ELIZABETH HIS WIFE:
BOTH OF THIS PARISH.
HE DIED, FEB. 19TH, 1759. AGED 45 YEARS.
AND SHE, JAN. 30TH 1790. AGED 80 YEARS.

AND BIRLING IN KENT,
BY WHOM
THIS STONE WAS ORDERED TO BE ERECTED.”

The grandfather of Mrs. Ware, and eight of her brothers and sisters, lie buried near the tombstone of George and Elizabeth Humphry.* It is possible, if not probable, that the two families have a common Humphry ancestor.

* In the History of Devonshire, Beauties of England and Wales, Vol. IV., note to page 301, we find the following: “Ozias Humphry, Esq., F. S. A. Royal Academician, and member of several foreign Societies, was born at Honiton, where this branch of his family has resided ever since the reign of Edward the Sixth, 1547. John Humphry, one of his ancestors, was an officer of the army assembled in Dorsetshire, under the first Lord Russel, in order to suppress the insurrection occasioned by the pulling down of images in the Western counties.”

In confirmation of the above statement with regard to the residence of the family, we learn that “Thomas Humphrey, of Honiton, laceman, willed, in 1658, 201. towards the purchase of certain tenements,” for the benefit of impoverished lacemakers, “which benefaction is recorded on a painted board, above the gallery, in the old parish church.”

“Elizabeth Humphrey died in 1790, whose family had been in the lace manufacture one hundred and fifty years.” Her name is placed in a list of lacemakers said to be of Flemish origin.

“Lace-making is said to have been introduced into Devonshire by sundry Flemings who took refuge in England during the persecutions of the Duke of Alva (1567-73). Whether the art was first made known to the inhabitants of the county at that period it is impossible now to say.”—History of Lace, by Mrs. Bury Palliser; pub. London, 1875.

DR. LAWRENCE HUMPHREYS.

LAWRENCE HUMPHREYS was born at Newport Pagnell, in Buckinghamshire, about 1527, and educated at Cambridge; after which he became first a demy, then a fellow, of Magdalen College, Oxford. He took the degree of M.A. in 1552, and about that time was made Greek reader of his college, and entered into orders. In the year 1555, he obtained permission to travel for improvement for a year, on condition that he should avoid heretical company and places. This licence furnished him with means of withdrawing from the reach of Queen Mary's persecution, and of pursuing his religious enquiries in company with men whose opinions were congenial with his own. He therefore wisely staid abroad till the death of the Queen rendered his return safe. Upon his arrival in England, he was restored to his fellowship in Magdalen College, which had been taken from him for his disobedience to the injunctions of the licence which had been granted him.

In 1560, he was appointed the Queen's professor of divinity at Oxford; and the year after he was elected president of his college. In 1570 he was made dean of Gloucester, and in 1580 was removed to the deanery of Winchester. He would probably have been promoted to a bishopric, if he had not been disaffected to the Church of England, in consequence of the principles which he had imbibed at Zurich, during his sojourn there. Several divines used to call him and Dr. Fulke, of Cambridge, standard-bearers among the Non-conformists. The Oxford historian says "he was a moderate and conscientious Non-conformist, and stocked his college with that sort of men that could not be rooted out in many years. He was certainly a strict Calvinist and a bitter enemy of the Papists. He was a great and general scholar, an able linguist, and a deeper divine than most of his age."

His letter to Zurich, in which the learned Dr. Sampson united with him, giving his reasons against the lawfulness of wearing the habits, then being very vigorously enforced by the High or Church party, was considered as a most timely and masterly discussion of the subject. Subsequently, Archbishop Parker cited them before him, and, upon their appearance, urged them with the opinions of Bucer and Peter Martyr; but the authority of these divines not being sufficient to remove their scruples, they were ordered not to depart the city without leave. After long attendance, and many checks from some of the council for their refractoriness, they framed a supplicatory letter in a very elegant but submissive style, and sent it to the archbishop, and the rest of the ecclesiastical commissioners, who were very much divided in their opinions how to proceed with these men. Some were for answering the reasons, and for enforcing the habits, with a protestation that they wished them taken away. Others were for connivance, and others for a compromise; accordingly, a pacific proposition was drawn up, which Humphreys and Sampson were willing to subscribe with the reserve of the apostle, "All things are lawful, but all things edify not." But the archbishop, who was at the head of the commission, would abate nothing, for on the 29th of April, 1561, he told them peremptorily, in open court, that they should conform to the habits; that is, to wear the square cap, and no hats, in their long gowns; to wear the surplice with non-regents' hoods in the choirs, according to ancient custom; and to communicate, kneeling, in wafer-bread, or else they should part with their preferment. To which our divines replied that their consciences could not comply with these injunctions, be the event what it might. Upon this they were both put under confinement; but the storm fell chiefly upon Sampson who was detained in prison a considerable time, as a terror to others, and, by special order from the Queen, was deprived of his deanery. Humphrey's place was not at the Queen's disposal; however, he durst not return to Oxford, even after he had obtained his release out of prison, but retired to Berkshire, from whence he wrote her a most excellent letter, in which he protests his own and his brethren's loyalty and then expostulates with her Majesty why her mercy should be shut up against them, when it is open to all others. * * He earnestly beseeches her to consider the majesty of the glorious Gospel, the equity of the cause, the fewness of the laborers, the greatness of the harvest, the multitude of the tares, and the heaviness of the punishment." This appeal, so full of ardent piety, tenderness and elegant sensibility, secured him many friends at Court, so that at length he obtained a toleration; but had no preferment in the Church till several years later, when he was persuaded to wear the habits. For although the Bishop of Winchester presented him to a small living within the diocese of Salisbury, Jewell refused to admit him, and said he was determined to abide by his resolution till he had good assurance of his conformity. If this treatment occasioned any bitterness of feeling on the part of Dr. Humphreys, it seems to have been removed. In the Biography of John Jewell, D.D., Bishop of Salisbury, as given in the History of Devonshire,* by Rev. Thomas Moore, it is stated that he died in 1571, in his fiftieth year, and was buried in the middle of the choir of Salisbury Cathedral. Two years after his death, Dr. Lawrence Humphrey, the author of his Life, laid a marble slab on his grave, with an inscription abridged from the longer one prefixed to that work.

Some of his other writings are: 1.—Epistola de Græcis Literis, et Homeri Lectione et Imitatione; 2.—De Religionis Conservatione et Reformatione, deque primatu Regum; 3.—De Ratione interpretandi Auctores; 4.—Optimates, sive de Nobilitate, ejusque antiqua Origine; 5.—Joannis Juelli Angli, Episcopi Sarisburiensis, Vita et Mors, ejusque veræ Doctrinæ Defensio; Two Latin Orations spoken before Queen Elizabeth, one in 1572, another 1575; in Sermons; and some Latin Pieces against the Papists, Campian in particular. Wood quotes Archbishop Tobias Matthew, who knew him well, as declaring that "Dr. Humphrey had read more fathers than Campian the Jesuit ever saw; devoured more than he ever tasted; and taught more in the University of Oxford, than he had either learned or heard."

The Biographie Universelle, published in Paris, 1818, in an article, evidently written by a good Roman Catholic, informs us that the first of the works in this list was printed at Basle in 1558, the second in 1559, also the third, the fourth in 1560, and the fifth, at London, in 1573. It states that Dr. Humphreys is severely censured for having accepted, too blindly, certain calumnies against the Romish Church. "He died in February, 1590, the father of twelve children." According to the Oxford historian "he died in his College, in the sixty-third year of his age, in 1589, having had the honor of seeing many of his pupils Bishops, while he who was every way their superior was denied preferment for his puritanical principles."†

JOHN HUMFREY.—1600.

The name of JOHN HUMFREY is mentioned in records relating to the East India Company:—

1600, Dec. 31. Westminster.—Charter of incorporation of the East India Company by the name of the Governor and Company of Merchants of London trading into the East Indies. "A privilege for fifteen years granted by Her Majesty to certain adventurers for the discovery of the trade for the East Indies; that is to say to Geo. Earl of Cumberland, and two hundred and fifteen knights, aldermen and merchants."—In the list of names that follows is "John Humphrey."

1601, March 21, to } —Names of those to whom "Bills of Adventure" have been sealed in 1602, April 26. } the East India Company, with the date of the bill of adventure and the amount.—John Humphrey subscribes 240 l. which includes the bill and supplies.

1607, Oct. 5-21. Court Minutes of the East India Company. * * * "Interest due by And. Bannying, Executor of John Humfrey."

1609, Jan. 27. Court Minutes of the East India Company. * * * "[Wm.] Ad-derley, Bartholomew Hollande, and John Humphrey to be charged 10 per cent. interest for money they owe the Company; the suits against them to be given up."*

In Purchas' Pilgrims is quite an extended account of the incorporation of the East India Company, which is very quaintly set forth: "The merchants of London, in the yeare of our Lord 1600, joined together and made a stock of seventy-two thousand pounds, to be employed in ships and merchandises, for the discovery of a Trade in the East India, to bring into this Realm spices and other commodities." Queen Elizabeth's patent for the East Indies fills a number of pages, and commences thus: "A Priuiledge for fiteene yeeres granted by her Maiestie to certaine Adventurers, for the difcouerie of the trade for the East Indies, the one and thirtieth of December, 1600.

Elizabeth by the Grace of God Queene of England, etc.:

Whereas, Our most deare, and louing Cofin, George Earle of Cumberland; and Our welbeloued Subjects."† Here follow many names, among them that of JOHN HUMPHRY.

These "Adventurers" bought "foure great Ships to bee employed" in this the first voyage, viz.: the "Dragon," "Hector," "Ascension," and "Susan." The ship "Guest" was added as a victualler. They returned to England in September, 1603; James Lancaster was Master.‡

The second voyage was undertaken in the early part of 1604, Sir Henry Middleton being General, and four ships employed: the "Red Dragon," Admiral; the "Hector," Vice Admiral; the "Ascension," and the "Susan." Returned May, 1606.**

There seem to have been ten other voyages made, the twelfth in 1612, ships returned in 1614, when it is stated: "After this twelfth voyage the order of that reckoning is altered, because the voyages ensuing were set forth by a joint stock."††

The question naturally arises, could JOHN HUMFREY who was a member of the East India Company in 1600 have been the same as the one who became of such importance to the Colony of Massachusetts Bay? If he was, he must have been born 30, or at least 25, years prior to that date. How does this harmonize with his later history? Supposing his date of birth to have been 1575, he would be in 1628, the time of his engaging in the New England enterprise, 53 years of age; while, on his embarkation to America, he would be 59, rather advanced in life for such an undertaking; in 1641, when he was made the first Major-General of the Colony, and was a member of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company, 66 years old. We should hardly conclude, from his letter, dated July 21, 1642, to John Winthrop, Jr., who was born in 1605, that he was thirty years his senior.

† For continuation see Purchas' Pilgrims, Vol. I., pp. 139-147; ‡ Idem, pp. 147-164, for a long account of this voyage; ** pp. 185-187; †† p. 500.

This point must also be considered. What is meant by the expression under date 1607, "Interest due by And. Bannyng, Executor of John Humfrey"? Was the latter deceased; and is the allusion, under date Jan. 27, 1609, intended to be to the estate of John Humfrey. We know that words were sometimes used in, what seems to us with our modern ideas, a rather singular manner, and with an unnatural signification. Is it possible that "executor" was employed in the sense of transactor of business, and if so, how came there to be such a necessity seven years after the incorporation of the company, if JOHN HUMFREY was still living?

How shall we explain the silence between the years 1609 and '25, if this connection with the East India Company was but the commencement of the career of such a prominent man as JOHN HUMFREY, the Assistant of the Colony?

It seems more probable, although this is only conjecture, that JOHN HUMFREY of 1600 may have been the father of the JOHN HUMFREY of 1625, and that from him the latter may have inherited a taste for enterprises connected with other and distant lands.

JOHN HUMFREY.—1625.

The earliest authentic record which we have been able to obtain of JOHN HUMFREY, who became an Assistant of the Colony of Massachusetts Bay, and, at a later date, its first Major-General, is very brief; but associates him at once with New England and its interests. In Hubbard's Narrative* it is stated that, in 1625, Mr. White "engaged Mr. Humfrey, the treasurer† of the joint Adventurers, to write to Mr. Roger Conant in their names, and to signify that they had chosen him to be their governor at Cape Ann, and would commit unto him the charge of all their affairs, as well fishing as planting." But who were these Adventurers? Palfrey informs us that Mr. John White, who, since the second year of King James' reign, had been rector of Trinity Church in Dorchester, a man widely known and greatly esteemed, had interested himself with the ship-owners to establish a settlement where the mariners might have a home when not at sea; where supplies might be provided for them by farming and hunting; and where they might be brought under religious influences. The result of the conferences was the formation of an unincorporated joint-stock association, under the name of the "Dorchester Adventurers," which collected a capital of three thousand pounds.‡ "They sent over sundry persons, in order to the carrying on a Plantation at Cape Ann,** conceiving that planting on the land might go on equally with fishing on the sea, in those parts of America."†† But everything seemed to go amiss, and an attempt was made to retrieve affairs by putting the colony under a different direction at the end of one year. Hence this letter to Mr. Conant, who is described as "a most religious, prudent, worthy gentleman," and a Puritan,‡‡ but not a Separatist. He accepted the office assigned him, but "not liking the present site, transported his company to Naum-

* Young's Chronicles, pp. 23-4.

† Palfrey criticises the assertion that he was treasurer at this time, although he himself makes use of the expression, "a man of consequence, Humphrey * who was already, or very soon after, Treasurer of the fund."—Hist. of New England, Vol. I., p. 287. There is one argument, at least, in favor of Hubbard's statement. He was doubtless personally acquainted with Conant, and we find in Young's foot-note "that we may consider that in this chapter of Hubbard's Narrative, giving an account of the first settlement at Cape Ann and Salem we have Roger Conant's own narrative, as taken down by Hubbard in the conversations which he held with him when collecting the materials for his History."—Young's Chronicles, p. 35.

keag,* some five leagues distant, to the southwest of Cape Ann."† "But neither removal, nor Conant's energy, saved this venture from financial collapse; and the brave pioneer" soon "found himself deserted by most of his companions, and without an occupation, in the midst of the tenantless huts of frustrated trade."‡ "Being grieved in his spirit that so good a work should be suffered to fall to the ground, Mr. White wrote to Mr. Conant not so to desert the business, faithfully promising that if himself with three others (whom he knew to be honest and prudent men, viz: John Woodberry, John Balch and Peter Palfrey, employed by the Adventurers) would stay at Naumkeag, and give timely notice thereof, he would provide a patent for them, and likewise send them whatever they should write for, either men or provisions, or goods wherewith to trade with the Indians."** Surprised and re-invigorated, Conant prevailed on his companions, though not without difficulty, to remain with him, and they all "stayed at the peril of their lives."††

The next record we find of Mr. HUMFREY seems to be almost an outgrowth of the first. We can only judge of what influences had been at work during the time that intervened, by studying the results. As he lived "about Dorchester,"‡‡ he had probably conversed with Mr. White many times regarding the new plantation in which he was so deeply interested, and Mr. Conant, who was awaiting re-enforcements.

"March 19th, 1627-28, the Council for New England," established at Plymouth, "sell to sir Henry Roswell, sir John Young, knights, Thomas Southcoat, John Humphry, John Endicot, and Simon Whetcomb, gentlemen about Dorchester in England, their heirs and associates, that part of New England between Merrimack river and Charles river, in the bottom of the Massachusetts Bay; and three miles to the south of every part of Charles river and of the southernmost part of said bay; and three miles to the north of every part of said Merrimack river; and in length within the breadth aforesaid from the Atlantic ocean to the South Sea,"*** &c.

After some time, "Mr. White," "the main promoter and chief organizer of this business," brings the Dorchester grantees into acquaintance with several other religious persons in and about London, who are first associated to them, then buy their right in the patent, and consult about settling some plantation in the Massachusetts Bay, on the account of religion; where nonconformists may transport themselves and enjoy the liberty of their own persuasion in matters of worship and church discipline."†††

"By the Massachusetts Colony Charter and Records, it seems the three first-named grantees wholly sold their rights, the other three retaining theirs in equal partnership with the said associates."†††

It was highly important that men of the right stamp should be the first to emigrate under the authority of this new Company. "Inquiry was made whether any would be willing to engage their persons in the voyage. Thus it fell out that at last they lighted, among others, on John Endicott, a man well known to divers persons of good repute. He manifested much willingness to accept of the offer as soon as it was tendered, which gave great encouragement to such as were still doubtful about setting on this work of erecting a new colony on an old foundation."††† So he was sent over as agent, being fully instructed with power from the Company to order all affairs in the name of the Patentees, until themselves should come over.**** "It has been well said that he was just the man to lead this venture; firm, rugged, hopeful, zealous, devout, he knew no such word as fail."* On the 20th of June, 1628, he with his wife and children, and those who had consented to engage in this perilous undertaking, † commenced their voyage towards the unknown land, ‡ and arrived safely on September 6th.** The "instructions" of Mr. Endicott were dated May 30th, previous to his departure, and signed by John Humphry and others. In the Company's general letter of instructions, dated Gravesend, the 17th and 21st April, 1629, allusion is made to his letter of 13th September, by which they take notice of his safe arrival; his first commission is also mentioned.††

"At once fraternizing with Conant's sentinel squad * * the new-comers proceeded to put up additional cottages; and they called the nascent hamlet Salem, 'for the peace which they had and hoped in it.' †† They immediately began to explore the surrounding country, and stumbling upon Thomas Walford's hermitage in Mishawam, the locality seemed to them favorable for a settlement. The explorers returned to Salem with their report, and ere long "a portion of the colonists established themselves around the forge of the sturdy blacksmith; and with the old patriotic feeling, which neither wrongs nor sufferings could altogether root out, they named the new settlement Charlestown, in honor of a king whose severities had driven them from the land of their fathers." ***

But means and influence must be employed unsparingly, at home, by friends of the cause, lest the good work, so nobly begun, should prove a failure. We find the name of JOHN HUMFREY in the list of Adventurers, May, 1628, when he subscribes £50, ††† probably a small part of the money advanced by him at various times for this enterprise. Owing to his position and surroundings he was also able to induce others to give of their substance, which they became the more willing to do, when the report of Endicott's successful colonization reached England early in 1629.

Mr. White was now encouraged "to plant the adventure on a broader, firmer foundation. The original company was but a voluntary, unincorporated partnership. ††† This was now 'much enlarged' by recruits from the Puritans, 'disaffected to the rulers in church and state.' **** The next step was to get a charter and an incorporation. This was solicited, and after some little difficulty and delay obtained." ††††

† There seems to be a difference of opinion regarding the number that sailed. Elliott states that Endicott went into the New World at the head of the company numbering nigh one hundred souls.—Hist. of New England, Vol. I., p. 140. He refers to Johnson's Wonder-working Providence, Belknap's Biography, Prince, and Hubbard's History. But in Planters' Plea we find: "Master Endicott *

* arriving in safety September, 1628, and uniting his own men with those which were found planted in the country into one body, they made up in all not much above fifty or sixty persons."—Young's Chronicles, p. 13. assistants chosen out of the freemen of said Company; that Matthew Cradock be the first and present governor; Thomas Goff first deputy governor; and the eighteen printed in italics be the first assistants."*

"The patent passed the seals a few days only before Charles I., in a public state paper, avowed his design of governing England without a Parliament.† It was cherished by the colonists for more than half a century as a most precious boon; and the old charter‡ is the germ of that 'bright, consummate flower'; the later constitution."**

Preparations were now hastening for the embarkation of fresh emigrants. We find on the Company's Records the following:

Feb. 26th, 1628-9. Necessaries conceived meet for our intended voyage for New England to be prepared forthwith.

For our five pieces of ordnance, long since bought and paid for, Mr. JOHN HUMPHRY is entreated and doth promise forthwith to cause them to be delivered to Samuel Sharpe, who is to take care for having fit carriages made for them.††

March 10th, 1628-9. This day order was given to the Treasurer for payment of twenty pounds more to Mr. JOHN HUMPHRY, towards charges of our patent; and this to be his warrant for the payment thereof.†† He was not present at this meeting, nor at several held before the 23d of March, at which date his name appears in the list, and also in connection with business transactions: "At a meeting of the Massachusetts Company this day at London, Mr. Nowell giving intimation, by letters from Mr. Johnson, that Mr. Higginson of Leicester, an able and eminent minister, silenced for non-conformity, would be likely to go to our plantation, who being approved for a reverend and grave minister, fit for our occasion, it is agreed to entreat Mr. Humfrey to ride presently to Leicester;*** and, if Mr. Higginson can conveniently go this present voyage, to deal with him, first if his remove may be without scandal to that people, and approved by some of the best affected among them, with the approbation of [the reverend and famous] Mr. Hildersham, of Ashly-de-la Zouch. Mr. Higginson††† being addressed both by Mr. Humfrey and White, he looks upon it as a call from God; and in a few weeks is, with his family, ready to take his flight into this savage desert."†††

Young states that part of the Company's Records were torn off, but Prince and Hubbard both appear to have had them. The former gives: "March 23, 1629, eleven assistants sworn," names not mentioned; the latter, "Mr. JOHN HUMPHRY was sworn in as Assistant."****

"By the middle of April, 1629, six ships were ready to sail; and under license from the Lord Treasurer, these were freighted with 'eighty women and maids, and twenty-six children, and two hundred men, with victuals, arms, tools, and necessary wearing apparel.'†††† They also took on board, 'one hundred and forty head of cattle, and forty goats.'"††††

Higginson and his future parishioners landed at Salem on the 24th of June, 1629.*****

In alluding to this emigration Elliott writes: "England did not regret the departure of these Christian heroes, because she did not know her best men. What nation does? To materialists and politicians, these Pilgrims seemed to be visionaries and idealists; impracticable and in the way. Yet this class is always the life of a nation. We can look back upon them, and surfeit them with praise; but we cannot easily see their mates walking amongst us, treading our own sidewalks, and so learn to cherish, and not kill the prophets."*

At a General Court, April 30th, 1629, Capt. Endicott was chosen governor. "Mr. Walgrave, Mr. Pelham, Mr. HUMPHRY, and Mr. Nowell are entreated to frame the form of an oath for the Governor, Mr. Endicott, and also for his Deputy, and for the Council, which shall be sent over and be administered to them in New England."

May 7th. A form of an oath for the Governor† beyond the seas, and of an oath for the Council‡ there, was drawn and delivered to Mr. HUMPHRY (who was present) to show the Council.

May 11th. Mr. HUMFREYS was present.

May 13th. "Mr. JOHN HUMPHRY chosen Assistant, and confirmed, and was one of those who took their oaths appertaining." (First election by the royal charter).** This record was also made: "It is this day ordered that whensoever any Court of Assistants shall be summoned, whosoever of the Assistants comes not, twixt 25 March, and 29 of September, before eight of the clock in the morning, and from 29 September to 25 March, before 9 of the clock in the morning, shall forfeit twelve pence for every such offence," &c.

May 18th, Monday, Court of Assistants held. "Mr. HUMPHREYS and Mr. Adams are desired to meet and consider what provisions are fit to be now sent over to Captain John Endicott and his family, and to provide the same accordingly."

May 21st. Mr. Eaton took the oath of Assistant, * * * "and he is desired to accompany Mr. HUMPHREY to Mr. Whyte, the counsellor, to be satisfied concerning the administering oaths to the Governor and Council in New England. Mr. Whetcombe is also desired to be with them."

May 22d. Mr. HUMPHREY was present at a meeting which was held at the Governor's house.†† It is probable that another "letter of instructions," which was to be prepared for Gov. Endicott, was discussed at this time. It was dated London, 28th May, 1629. * * * "We have sithence our last (17 and 21 April), at a full and ample Court assembled, elected and established you, Capt. John Endicott, to the place of present Governor in our Plantation. * * * If any of the savages pretend right of inheritance to all or any part of the lands granted in our patent, we pray you endeavor to purchase their title, that we may avoid the least scruple of intrusion."†† This certainly shows an excellent spirit, and one worthy of imitation to a more general extent, at the present day. Martyn describes this letter as "unique, and highly illustrative of the benevolent spirit of these builders of states, to whose brotherhood Lord Bacon, in 'the true marshalling of the sovereign degrees of honor,' assigns the highest place."***

June 11th. Mr. HUMFREY present at a General Court.

A little later, "the success of Endicott and the supplementary success of the detachments despatched to re-inforce him—success which at the very outset had left the older settlement at Plymouth, plodding on under a heavy load of debt and odium, far behind—stirred English Puritanism as with the blast of a trumpet. So intense was the interest in the new colony, throughout the realm, that a tract descriptive of New England, written by Higginson, and sent over to England in manuscript, was printed, and ran through three editions in as many months.††† * * * Soon this stir had an effect. Some of the purest, wealthiest and best-educated men in England agreed to embark for America. One thing only had made them hesitate: the colonial government resided in England, and was only sifted into New England by delegation. The charter empowered the company, and not the colonists, to transport persons, establish ordinances, and settle government. It was a chrysalis; it had the face of a commercial corporation, but was pregnant with the essence of an independent provincial government." *

August 28th. A General Court was held to consider this subject, and Mr. HUMFREYS was present. "Only two days before, namely, on the 26th of August, a mutual agreement † had been made and signed, at Cambridge, by Saltonstall, Winthrop, Johnson, Dudley, Humphrey, Nowell, Pynchon, Thomas Sharpe, William Vassall, and others, that they would embark with their families for the Plantation in New England, by the first of March next, to inhabit and continue there, provided that before the last of September next the whole government, together with the patent for the said Plantation, be first, by an order of Court, legally transferred and established to remain with them and others who shall inhabit upon the said Plantation." ‡

"Who should utter the talismanic words fit to set free the hidden spirit of self-government? Matthew Cradock, the governor of the company, pronounced the 'open sesame.' He saw, as did other sagacious men, that the residence of the corporate authority in England embarrassed emigration, barred prosperity, and opened the door to discord. * * So, with generous self-abnegation, he himself proposed the transfer of the charter to such of the freemen of the company as should themselves inhabit the colony." **

August 29th. A General Court was held. Mr. HUMFREY present. "By erection of hands, it appeared by the general consent of the Company, that the government and patent should be settled in New England, and accordingly an Order to be drawn up."

October 15th. A General Court. Mr. JOHN HUMFREY present, and member of a committee.

October 16th. A Court of Assistants. Mr. JOHN HUMFRY present. This court was appointed to treat and resolve upon the transferring of the government to New England, &c. ††

"Then came an obstacle. The crown lawyers said, 'It is not so nominated in the bond; you have no right, standing under this corporation charter in London, to transfer your power.' Our fathers replied: 'King Charles has granted us certain authority, but our charter does not bind us to exercise that authority in England; locality is not specified. We choose to vote that emigrants shall be freemen, and to summon a meeting beyond the Atlantic.'" ‡‡

October 20th, Tuesday. A General Court at Mr. Goff's, the Deputy's house. "Mr. JOHN HUMFRY" present, and on committee for the planters. "The governor represented the special occasion of summoning this court was for the election of a new governor, deputy, and assistants; the government being to be transferred to New England; the court having received extraordinary great commendation of Mr. John Winthrop, both for his integrity and sufficiency, as being one very well fitted for the place, with a full consent choose him governor for the ensuing year, to begin this day; who is pleased to accept thereof; with the like full consent choose Mr. HUMPHREY deputy governor, and for assistants sir R. Saltonstall, Mr. Johnson, Dudley, Endicott," &c. ***

Because of the very friendly relations existing, in later years, between John Winthrop, Jr., and Mr. Humfrey, we have concluded to give his noble reply to his father, when informed of his decision to remove to New England: "I shall call that my country where I may most glorify God and enjoy the presence of my dearest friends. Therefore herein I submit myself to God's will and yours, and dedicate myself to God and the Company, with the whole endeavors both of mind and body. The conclusions which you sent down are unanswerable; and it cannot but be a prosperous action which is so well allowed by the judgment of God's prophets, undertaken by so religious and wise worthies in Israel, and indented to God's glory in so special a service." †††

"And now preparations for an extensive emigration were ardently pushed. The finances of the Company were put on a new basis. All contributors to the fund were ipso facto entitled to a share in the profits of the colonial trade and to a grant of Massachusetts land. 'The outlay was distributed in such proportions that it was not burdensome in any quarter. The richer emigrants submitted to it joyfully, from public spirit; the poorer, as a panacea for existing evils.'"*

Nov. 20th, Friday. A Court of Assistants was held at Mr. Goff's house. Mr. JOHN HUMFREY, Deputy Governor, present.

Nov. 25th. A General Court was held, when he was also present; and on Monday, the last of November, when it was at Mr. Goff's house.

Dec. 15th. A General Court at Mr. Goff's house. Mr. John Humfry, Deputy, presided; was also present at one held February 10th, at the same place.

March 18th, 1629-30. Mr. Humfrey was present at a meeting of Assistants held in Southampton. This is the last record of the Massachusetts Company in England.†

Early in the Spring of 1630, ten vessels were ready to weigh anchor, among them the "Arbella,"‡ in which Gov. Winthrop was to sail. Just before his departure with his company, Rev. John Cotton delivered a sermon on "God's Promise to his Plantation." This was afterwards printed, and, in the Preface, I. H. (supposed to be John Humfrey by Young**) announces:—"Ere long (if God will) thou shalt see a larger declaration of the first rise and ends of this enterprise, and so clear and full a justification of this design, both in respect of that warrant it hath from God's word, and also in respect of any other ground and circumstance of weight that is considerable in the warrant of such a work, as (I hope) there will easily be removed any scruple of moment which hitherto hath been moved about it."

The Planters' Plea, published in London, 1630, and supposed to have been written by John White of Dorchester, corresponds to this description, and Mr. Young has no doubt is the work which the writer intended to announce.††

March 23d, 1630. At a Court of Assistants held on board the Arbella, "Mr. HUMFREY being to stay behind is discharged of his deputyship, and in his place Mr. Dudley chosen deputy governor."†††

We will here allow Mr. Martyn to bring before us, in his vivid manner, some of the passengers in whom we are most interested.*** As Mr. Winthrop holds such an important position, and hereafter is so intimately associated with Mr. HUMFREY.††† and Mr. Dudley takes his place as deputy, because of his detention in England, they are both included in this number.

"Let us descend into the little cabin of the Arbella, and scan the faces and take the hands—if we are worthy—of some of the most famous personages of this august Company of devout voyageurs. The cabin is long, and low, and dark. But 'tis lighted now, somewhat dingily, indeed, yet still sufficiently to enable us to discern a table covered with maps and legal parchments, round which are ranged a score of deeply-interested talkers.

"That tall, handsome, gentlemanly man, who sits at the head of the table, is John Winthrop, the new governor. See what an easy grace there is in his every movement; he has the port of one habituated to command, yet he is very gentle withal. His hair is just touched with silver, and he is in the prime of life—just forty-two, ripe and mellow. Winthrop is not a needy, sour adventurer; he comes of an ancient family long seated at Groton, in Suffolk, where he has a property whose income yields him six or seven hundred pounds a year. Evidently he quits England from some higher motive than to fatten his exchequer. This is he whom Cotton Mather terms 'the Lycurgus of New England;' 'as devout as Numa, but not liable to any of his heathenish madnesses; a governor in whom the excellences of Christianity made a most imposing addition unto the virtues wherein even without these he would have made a parallel for the great men of Greece and Rome whom the pen of Plutarch has eternized.* * * *

"At the right of Winthrop, and chatting pleasantly with him, stands Thomas Dudley. He is short and thickset in stature, and stern in expression; a man fit to lead a forlorn hope. Quick and irascible in temper, uncompromising when he esteems himself in the right, every word he utters has the ring of authority. * * * His head is grayer than Winthrop's, but he is still robust, and he walks with a martial air—and no wonder, for he is a soldier. † * *

"But who is this that glides up to Winthrop, and, touching him upon the shoulder, speaks a word in his ear. It is JOHN HUMPHREY, 'a gentleman of special parts, of learning and activity, and a godly man. ‡ He does not sail now, but is here to bid his friends God speed.

"See, yonder, leaning with graceful negligence against the wainscot of the cabin, lounges a pale, thoughtful, intellectual young man, with a fine head, and a face whose expression is that of lovable seriousness. This is Isaac Johnson, the wealthiest of the Pilgrims, a land-owner in three counties.** But profoundly impressed with the importance of emigration, and aware of the necessity of an example, he has risen from the lap of artificial and patrician life and flung away the softness of a luxurious home to battle with the rigors of a wilderness. Like Humphrey, who now approaches to shake hands with him, he is a son-in-law of the Earl of Lincoln, the head, in that day, of the now ducal house of Newcastle, and also, like his relative, he has been the familiar companion of the patriotic nobles.† Johnson now goes out as one of Winthrop's assistants.

His wife, the Lady Arbella Johnson, was one of those noble women whose unshrinking devotion still further hallowed the enterprise. "Her heroism has thrown a halo of poetry around a venture which needed no additional ray to make it bloom in immortal verse. The daughter of Earl Lincoln, the idol of her associates, she was yet a Puritan. Married to Isaac Johnson, she was indeed a helpmeet, sharing in his feelings, and animating him to loftier exertions. When her husband resolved to emigrate, she determined to share his peril, and though ill-fitted to brave the rigors of an inclement wilderness by her delicate nature, she answered all objections by saying, 'God will care for me, and I must do my duty.' An exile voyage was her wedding tour; †† and so touched were the Pilgrims by her devotion, that they named their vessel after her, the 'Arbella.'" ††

"On the 29th of March, 1630, the 'Arbella' sailed from Cowes, off the Isle of Wight, and stopped at Yarmouth to join her consorts, the 'Talbot', the 'Jewel', the 'Ambrose' and the rest.*** Here the self-banished devotees penned a farewell to their brothers in the faith who remained in England. * * * This done, all was done; then 'on the 8th of April, favored by the breath of budding spring—fit season in which to sail—the flotilla lifted anchor and left Yarmouth, where the feet of these Pilgrims pressed the soil of their dear England for the last time." †††

Nine weeks the Arbella tossed on the Atlantic, not reaching her destination until June 12th. ††† They found disease stalking among the settlers, and provisions were nearly spent. "Daily the sickness increased, and haunted Salem as well as infant Cambridge. In August there was a large mortality; but September was the most dreary month. * * * The Lady Arbella Johnson's fragile frame, coming 'from a paradise of plenty and pleasure into a wilderness of wants,' ††† succumbed shortly to the dread epidemic, to the infinite sorrow of her loving friends." ***** "She was buried with expressions of general esteem and grief," †††† for she had been "generous and strong in her love and sympathy for those with whom she lived." †††† Mr. Johnson, sorely afflicted, "accompanied the band of emigrants who abandoned Salem, and selected Charlestown, the colonial seat of government, for their place of settlement; and he again joined the survivors who hastily deserted it, when a death plague seemed to threaten the destruction of all. He lived long enough at Boston ***** to aid in the distribution of its first lands, and to build a house on the lot appropriated as his own share of the soil. * * * The Court-house now appropriately occupies the site of his dwelling, and his grave was the first which consecrated the burying-ground, where it is still pointed out as one of the memorials of the founders of the State. The esteem in which he was held among the companions of his toil and the sharers in his trials is shown by the terms in which his loss is mentioned by the early historian of the settlement: 'He was endowed with many precious gifts, and a chief pillar to support this new erected building, so that at his departure there were many weeping eyes and some faltering hearts, fearing the failure of the undertaking.'* The following notice of his death is found in Gov. Winthrop's History of New England: "September 30, 1630.—About two in the morning, Mr. Isaac Johnson died; his wife, the Lady Arbella, of the house of Lincoln, being dead about one month before. He was a holy man and wise, and died in sweet peace, leaving some part of his substance to the Colony."†

He made several wills. One commences as follows: "This is the last will and testament of mee Isacke Johnson of Boston in the Com. of Lincoln esquier made the twentieth day of Aprill in the Third yeare of the raigne of our Soueraigne Lord Charles Kinge of England Scotland Franncce and Ireland &c [1628] beinge in some distemper of body But in good and perfect vnderstandinge and memory," &c. In this will he mentions his wife, his father Abraham Johnson, "the right honourable Theophilus Earle of Lyncoln brother of my said wife," his grandfather "Mr. Doctor Chader-ton," Mr. John Cotton, minister of Boston, Lord Viscount Say and Seale, &c. Richard Bellingham of Boston in the Com. of Lincoln esquier and Thomas Dudley of the same Towne and Com. gent are made executors. "Wyttnesses of the publishing hereof"—John Humfrey and three others.‡

"In the name of God Amen I Isaack Johnson beinge by the Grace of God forthwith to undertake a voyage into New England in America and well weighing the uncertaine condicon of al earthly things and especially of the life of man," &c. Mentions "the right honorable the Lady Arbella ** my wife." Gives a portion of his estate "to the Governor and company of the Massachusetts Bay in New England aforesaid to and for the benefitt of their plantacons there." * * * "John Hampden of Hampden in the countie of Buckingham Esquire, John Winthrop of Groton in the countie of Sufk. ISA JOHNSON."

"Signed sealed and published thees two sheets to bee my last Will in the presence of Ric Fitche Philip Johnson Edward Greene."††

Hutchinson refers to a will of Johnson "uncancelled and which remains on the Massachusetts files, executed April 28th, in the fifth of King Charles." It has been searched for in vain, however, since Hutchinson described it.‡‡

When intelligence of the death of Lady Arbella reached England, Mr. HUMFREY, being still in ignorance of Mr. Johnson's death, wrote him a letter of condolence, which was followed by several others manifesting a deep interest both in him and the affairs of the Colony.

Allusion has already been made to the lack of provisions in the colony, when the Arbella arrived. An effort was put forth to obtain relief.

Sept. 29, 1630. Petition of Samuel Aldersey, Matthew Cradock, Nath. Wright, Jo. Humphrey and others on behalf of the Governor and Company of the Massachusetts Bay in New England to the Privy Council. By letters patent of 4 March 1629 they were privileged to carry over men and provisions to begin and settle a plantation in those parts, and freely to import commodities from thence for seven years. The ships freighted this year for the plantation, carried more passengers than were expected, "many poor people pressing aboard," with cattle but no provisions; and the petitioners depending too much upon the industry of their servants, sent less victuals than were requisite. Through slothfulness and neglect in planting of corn many have died, and the rest, about 1,000 persons, are afraid of being surprised by the savages, who have been supplied with guns, powder, and shot, by a most pernicious trade with interlopers. Pray for licence for one year, to transport necessary provisions for the sustenance of those residing on the plantation. The country cannot supply them until the end of next summer. And that the proclamation of 6 Nov. 1622, for the prevention of disorderly trade, may be renewed.*

Sir Ferdinando Gorges states that "In the year 1621, after the Parliament that then sat brake off in discontent, I was solicited to consent to the passing of a Patent to certain undertakers who intended to transport themselves into those parts [New England], with their whole families, as I showed before. The liberty they obtained thereby, and the report of their well doing, drew after them multitudes of discontented persons of several sects and conditions, insomuch that they began at last to be a pester to themselves, threatening a civil war before they had established a civil form of government between themselves. And doubtless had not the patience and wisdom of Mr. Winthrop, Mr. Humphreys, Mr. Dudley, and others their assistants, been the greater, much mischief would suddenly have overwhelmed them, more than did befall them."†

"The reasons why no more come to the Massachusetts in 1631 and 32 seem to be these. 1. The undertaking being so hazardous over so great an ocean, of three thousand miles, to a hideous wilderness possessed with barbarous Indians; many in England then oppressed for their pure scriptural religion and breathing after liberty to enjoy the same, were willing to see how the first grand transportation with the power of government fared, before they were free to venture themselves and their families. 2. The grievous sickness and mortality, with the extreme straits of the people for want of food and convenient housing, who came in 1630, which they in England had intelligence of, was very discouraging."‡

Mr. HUMFREY is still in London. On the 18th August, 1631, he dates a letter from there to his "worthily respected and assured loving friend Mr John Winthrop at the Dolphin Mr Humphries house in Sandwich;"** November 4th, to his "worthy and much beloved Mr Jo: Winthrop Junior at Boston;"†† June 21st, 1632, to his "worthily respected good freind Mr. John Winthrop junior at Boston or elsewhere in Mattachusetts Bay;"‡‡ and Dec. 3<sup>d</sup>, to his "worthily respected Mr John Winthrop Junior."***

Edward Howes, in a letter to John Winthrop, Jr., writes: * * " I knew not of Mr. Wilson's going over till within this two dayes, soe that I had delivered a packett of letters unto Mr HUMFRIES to be sent by this ship unto you. Letter dated "30 April, 1632, 12 hor: noctis."†††

May 3, 1631. A servant of Mr. HUMPHREY was ordered to be "severely whipped" at Boston and Salem for striking an overseer "when he came to give him correction for idleness in his master's work."‡‡‡ Probably some one sent here to perform work for Mr. Humfrey, or some one belonging in New England employed by him previous to his arrival.****

"In 1631, only ninety persons came over. But in 1632 the sluggish current quickened, and again set westward."†††† We find the following in the minutes of the Council for New England:

from the Council of New England, referred to the next meeting, and he requested to bring Matthew Cradock and any others with him. Lord Thurles, Sir James Bagg, and Sir Kenelm Digby admitted councillors.

June 28th. Minutes as above. Lord Chamberlain Lindsey and James Montague admitted councillors. Mr. Humphreys and Matthew Cradock reproved for falsely accusing Sir Ferd. Gorges, at the last meeting, of not suffering any ship or passenger to pass to New England without licence. Mr. Saltingstall desired to make a map of Salem and Massachusetts Bay for the Council.

Mr. HUMFREY is mentioned on the records in connection with another subject:

August 31st, 1632, Bristol.—Thomas Wiggin to "Master Downing." * * Hopes one Lane, a merchant tailor, who has been in the West Indies, will talk with Mr. Humphreys concerning a certain staple commodity which he desires to plant in New England. "Staple commodities are the things they want there." Need not declare the happy proceedings and welfare of New England. It is a wonder to see what they have done in so small a time.*

Mr. HUMFREY, who had been unavoidably detained in England, was now making arrangements to embark for America.

May 8th, 1632. "JOHN HUMFREY Esq. was chosen assistant, also Mr. Coddington [because these two are daily expected]." In parenthesis, after date, is "Tuesday, rather 9 Wednesday."†

Palfrey accepts the date May 9th. "A General Court was held and Winthrop and Dudley were placed again in the highest offices, the Assistants re-elected, adding to them JOHN HUMPHREY and William Coddington, their ancient associates who were expected from England, and John Winthrop, the Governor's son, who had lately arrived."‡

Prince gives us also the following records:

April 10th, 1633. Arrives at Boston Mr. Hodges, one of Mr. Peirce's mates, in a shallop from Virginia; and brings news that Mr. Peirce's ship was cast away on a shoal four miles from Feak Isle, ten leagues to the north of the mouth of Virginia Bay, November 2; twelve were drowned. Mr. HUMFREY lost fish.**

May, 1633. The William and Jane, in six weeks from London arrives (at Boston) with thirty passengers, and ten cows, or more.††

1633. The Mary and Jane, [or Mary and John] in seven weeks from London, arrives (at Boston), brings one hundred and ninety-six passengers.

By these ships we understand that Sir C. Gardiner, T. Morton and Philip Radcliff, who had been punished here for their misdemeanors, had petitioned the king and council against us; being set on by Sir F. Gorges and captain Mason, who had begun a plantation at Piscataqua, and arrived at the general government of New England, for their agent here captain Neal. The petition was of many sheets of paper, and contained many false accusations: "Accusing us to intend rebellion, to have cast off our allegiance, and to be wholly separate from the Church and Laws of England." * * * Upon which such of our company as were then in England, namely, sir Richard Saltonstall, Mr. Humfrey, and Mr. Cradock, were called before a committee of the Council, to whom they delivered an answer in writing. Upon reading whereof, it pleased the Lord, our most gracious God and protector, so to work with the lords, and after with the king * * * that he said he would have them severely punished who did abuse his governor and the plantation.‡‡

It must have been a matter of rejoicing to the colony that Humfrey was still in England to assist in framing a reply to the charges of its enemies.—But they continue to hope for his speedy arrival in New England.

May 29th, 1633. General Court at Boston. JOHN HUMFREY, Esq., is chosen one of the Assistants for the year ensuing.*

Mr. HUMFREY was one of the original patentees of the Colony of Connecticut,† of which his friend John Winthrop, Jr., became the governor, returning from England in November, 1635, bearing a commission from Lord Say and Seal, Lord Brook and others. The first English settlement was at Windsor, 1633.‡ Mr. Hubbard thus alludes to it: "And, indeed, all the places on the sea-coast being already preoccupied, there was no place left free, capable to receive so many hundred families in the year 1633, 1634, and 1635, if this River of Connecticut had not been possessed immediately after their first discovery thereof. That very year when that discovery was made came over into New England several persons of note, amongst whom was Mr. HUMPHRY, who, though he was formerly chosen Deputy Governor, came not over till the year 1634 [in July,** probably in the Planter††] bringing along with him his noble consort, the Lady Susan, daughter to the Earl of Lincoln. He came with a rich blessing along with him, which made way for his joyful reception by all sorts, for he brought along with him sixteen heifers (at that time valuable at £20 per piece) sent by a private friend to the Plantation; sc. by one Mr. Richard Andrews;‡‡ to every of the ministers one, and the rest to the poor: and one half of the increase of the ministers' part to be reserved for other ministers. Mr. Wilson's charity so abounded, that he gave not only the increase of his, but the principal itself, to Mr. Cotton. By Mr. Humphry's means much money was procured for the good of the Plantation, and divers promised yearly pensions."***

Palfrey gives us the following: "Tidings came from England of a nature to impress the minds of the rulers in Massachusetts, more seriously than ever before, with a sense of the magnitude of the task they had undertaken. On the one hand, new cause for encouragement appeared. Mr. HUMPHREY, who came over with a quantity of arms and ammunition, presented by friends of the Colony in England, reported that 'godly people began now to apprehend a special hand of God in raising this plantation, and their hearts were generally stirred to come over.' Intelligence to the same effect came from Scottish settlers in the North of Ireland: and Mr. Humphrey brought certain propositions from some persons of great quality and estate, and of special note for piety, whereby they discovered their intentions to join the Colony, if they might receive satisfaction therein. On the other hand Mr. Humphrey brought tidings of serious danger impending abroad. The jealousy of the royal government, carried on for the last five years without a Parliament, and growing every day more despotic in church and state, had been revealed in the Order of the Privy Council to detain ten vessels about to sail from London with passengers for New England. The attempts against the charter, baffled a year before, were renewed, and an order had been obtained from the Lords of Council for its production at their board."†††

Here is a record of some of the proceedings:

June 26th, 1634. Mr. HUMPHRY this day complained to the President and Council for not permitting ships and passengers to pass from hence for the Bay of Massachusetts, without licence first had from the President and Council or their deputy, they being free to go thither and to transport passengers, not only by a patent granted to them by the President and Council of New England, but also by a confirmation thereof by his Majesty, under his Majesty's great seal. Hereupon, some of the Council desired to see the patent which they had obtained from the Governor and Council, because, as they alleged, it pre-indicted former grants. Mr. Humphry answered, that the said patent was now in New England, and that they had oftentimes written for it to be sent, but as yet they had not received it.*

"But though the court, frightened at the prodigious extent of an emigration which threatened to depopulate the kingdom, had fulminated a decree against colonization, the departure of Pilgrims was only hindered, not stayed. They continued to cross the water until, in 1640, this pattering emigration had rained four thousand families and upwards of twenty thousand settlers into New England."†

Mr. Humfrey was compelled to spend much of his time in London while transacting business for the colony, although he seems to have been formerly from "about Dorchester," which was 120 miles distant. In 1631, he had a house, called the "Dolphin," in Sandwich.‡ We cannot positively determine where his family were residing just before their departure for America. Savage states that with him came his wife Susan,** daughter of the illustrious Thomas Clinton, 3d Earl of Lincoln, and their children: Ann, Dorcas and Sarah. Perhaps they had a son John "older than any."††

They were heartily welcomed by those who had been so long expecting them; and according to Mr. Lewis, went to reside on the farm at Swampscot (the eastern extremity of Lynn) which had been laid out by order of the Court. It consisted of five hundred acres, "between Forest river and the cliff." The bounds extended "a mile from the seaside," and ran "to a great white oak by the rock," including "a spring south of the oak." The spring is on Mr. Stetson's farm (1844); and the "old oak" was still standing when Mr. Lewis published his first edition of the History of Lynn, but has since been cut down. "Mr. Humfrey appears to have owned nearly all the lands from Sagamore Hill to Forest river; his house was near the eastern end of Humfrey's beach, and his place there was called 'Swampscot Farm.'"‡‡

We find various grants of land recorded:

January 11th, 1635.—"It is also voted by the freemen of the towne that these men under-written shall have liberty to plant and build at Nahant, and shall possess each man land for the said purpose, and proceeding in the trade of fishing."—Mr. Humfrey and eight others.***

In 1657, there was a dispute as to the ownership of Nahant.—Thomas Dexter brought a suit against the town of Salem "for laying out lands to settlers, in a place called Nahant, he having purchased it from Indians previously."

"June 3d, 1657. The Deposition of Daniel Salmon, aged about 45 years, saith, that he

** The Countess of Lincoln, her mother, was Elizabeth, the daughter of Sir Henry Knevet, and the dowager of Thomas, the third earl of that noble house, who died Jan. 15, 1619. Arthur Collins calls her "a lady of great piety and virtue." She was the mother of eighteen children. [Young's Chronicles, foot-note to p. 75]. Frances, one of her daughters, married John Gorges, son of Sir Ferdinando Gorges, proprietor of Maine. [Felt's Annals of Salem.] The family of the Earl of Lincoln "had a more intimate connection with the New England Settlements, and must have felt a deeper interest in their success, than any other noble house in England."

†† Savage's Genealogical Dictionary.

‡‡ Mr. Newhall Hist. of Lynn, p. 147, says: "It seems beyond dispute, that Mr. Lewis was wrong in locating Mr. Humphrey in what is now Swampscot. He owned an extensive tract of land there, but resided, I am satisfied, on the east side of Nahant St., having, in that vicinity quite an extensive farm, his windmill being on Sagamore Hill." And again, [p. 201].—"There is an essential error in locating Mr. Humfrey at Swampscot. * * * My attention was first drawn to the point by Mr. Josiah M. Nichols, * * * and subsequent investigation furnished what falls little short of conclusive evidence. It is certain that he had a house on Nahant Street, and that his adjacent lands were known as his farm. I find in no deed, will or inventory evidence that he had a house at Swampscot; and is it probable that, during his brief sojourn here, he would have erected more than one? Lechford speaks of his farm Swampscot; not his farm at or in Swampscot. And it may have been only a name by which his estate on Nahant St. was distinguished, a name which was afterwards applied to the territory, now known as Swampscot, where he had a large tract of wild land. * * * No doubt the name is Indian, but it is very questionable whether if it was thus territorially applied at all, at that time, it did not, in a loose way touch any of the coast lands, from the east shore of Lynn harbor, or Beach Street, to the Salem line. There is much reason for the belief that the old house which many will remember as the Samuel Newhall house, (and which had previously been known as the Hood house) which stood on the east side of Nahant St., between Baltimore and Ocean, was the identical one in which Mr. Humfrey lived, the one in which Lady Deborah Moody dwelt, and the one which Mr. Humfrey's daughter Ann, in 1681, sold to Richard Hood.

being Master Humphrey's servant and about 23 years ago, there being wolves in nahant, commanded that the whole traine band to goe drive them out,* because it did belong to the whole towne, &c.

"June 3d, 1657. I, John Legg, aged 47 years or thereabouts, doe testifie, that when I was Mr. Humphrey's servant, there came unto my master's house one Blacke Will, as wee call him, an Indian, with a compleate Suit on his backe, I asked him where he had that Suit, he said he had it of ffarmer Dexter, and he had sould him Nahant for it.

"The Testimony of Rev. Samuel Whiting, senior, of the Towne of Linne, Saith, that Mr. Humphries did desire that Mr. Eaton and his company might not only buy Nahant, but the whole Towne of Linne, and that Mr. Cobbett and he and others of the Towne went to Mr. Eaton to offer both to him and to commit themselves to the providence of God; and at that time there was none that laid claim to or pleaded any interest in Nahant save the town, and at that time farmer Dexter lived in the Towne of Linne."†

The person to whom Lynn was thus offered for sale was Theophilus Eaton, afterwards Governor of Connecticut. He came to Boston June 26, 1637, and went to New Haven in August of the same year.‡

May 6th, 1635. "There is 500 acres of land, and a freshe Pond with a little Island, conteyning about two acres, granted to John Humfrey Esqr lying between north and west of Saugus [name changed to Lynn in 1637] provided he take no part of the 500 acres within five miles of any Town now planted. Also it is agreed that the inhabitants of Saugus and Salem shall have liberty to build store howses upon the said Island, and to lay in such provisions as they shall judge necessary for their use in tyme of neede." The land thus laid out was around Humfrey's Pond, in Lynnfield, and was nearly one mile in extent.** This grant is said to have been made by the General Court in fulfillment of the resolve passed November 7th, 1632, by which "it is referred to Mr. Turner, Peter Palfrey and Roger Conant to set out a proportion of land in Saugus to JOHN HUMFREY, Esq."†† This was laid out at Swampscot.

May 6th, 1635. The General Court granted that there should be a Plantation at Marblehead, JOHN HUMFREY Esq. is allowed "to improve the land betwixte the Clifte and the Forest River." But if the necessity of the Marblehead population requires it, he is to part with it "on being paid for labor and cost," provided it does not belong to Salem.‡‡

May 3d, 1636. An application of Mr. JOHN HUMFREY for land in the limits of Salem, was introduced by Gov. Endicott. Among the arguments against it was: "least y<sup>t</sup> should hinder the building of a Colledge, which would be maine men's losse."*** The question was referred to a committee. William Track gave up his farm to Thomas Scruggs, who took it for his beyond Forest River, so that Mr. Humfrey might be accomodated. This was the spirit of kindness for a noble purpose. It seems to have left the lot desired unincumbered, and thus ready for the erection of a college. The location was the beautiful plains known as Marblehead Farms.***

"JOHN HUMFREY's bridge" was at, or near, the head of Forest river. In 1636, he built a windmill on the eastern mound of Sagamore Hill, which was thence called "Windmill Hill."†††

September 6th, 1638. "Mr JOHN HUMFREY sold to Emanuel Downing,‡‡‡ of Salem, the two ponds and so much high ground about the ponds as is needful to keep the Duck Coys, privately set, from disturbance of plowmen, herdsman and others passing by that way, which he may enclose, so as he take not in above fifty acres of the upland round about the same." These two ponds were probably Coy and Deep ponds, near Forest river. In the registry at Salem Mr. Humfrey is called "of Salem," but that is not a copy of the original grant, only an abstract, as deeds were not fully recorded in the early times.*

1640. Freemen "ordered that the range of cattle be limited at Forest river head, at a line southward up to Mr. Humfrey's farm."

But what has Mr. Humfrey accomplished for the good of the colony since his arrival in New England? We know that his desire for its welfare must have increased, rather than diminished, now that he has crossed the ocean and joined the little band of settlers. What a change from London, even then, to this quiet village! Here he is regarded with great confidence, and as one who can assist in all times of danger and difficulty, for has he not been advocating their cause in England, and with success; and has he not given of his substance to the good work.

When the first Court of Elections was held at Boston, May 18th, 1631, "That the body of the commons might be preserved of good and honest men," it was ordered "that for the time to come no man be admitted to the freedom of the body politic, but such as are members of some of the churches within its limits;" and subsequently it was resolved "that none but such should share in the administration of civil government, or have a voice in any election."† But such was the respect in which Mr. HUMFREY was held, that an exception was made in his favor; and that of "the old planters." He continued to be elected to the office of Assistant as long as he remained in the colony, although he was admitted to the church at Salem, Hugh Peter,‡ pastor, as late as January 16, 1637-8. In 1636, John Cotton writes to "Lord Saye and Sele": "Mr. HUMFREY was chosen for an Assistant (as I hear) before the Colony came over hither: and though he be not as yet joined into church fellowship (by reason of the unsettledness of the congregation where he liveth) yet the Commonwealth do still continue his magistracy to him, as knowing he waiteth for opportunity of enjoying church fellowship shortly."**

We find that in 1634, when there was such serious apprehension of a rupture with the Home Government, and the Captains were authorized "to train the men so often as they pleased, so it did not exceed three days in the week," Dudley, Winthrop, Hayes, HUMFREY and Endicott were appointed to consult, direct and give command for the managing of any war which might befall for the year next ensuing, and till farther order should be taken therein."

In 1635, "of the eleven remaining original patentees of the colony, HUMPHREY, Endicott, Nowell, Bellingham, Pyncheon and William Vassall were then in New England."††

"Jo: HUMFRAY" signs a document at "Newtowne,‡‡ Octo<sup>r</sup> 9, 1635," in which it is stated that "the courte hath joyntly expressed their willingness to assist you with men & munition, for y<sup>e</sup> accomplishing of your desires upon y<sup>e</sup> French."—History of Plymouth Plantation, by Gov. Bradford.***

This project of fortifying the place was afterwards abandoned, and the frame of the governor's house removed to Boston, which now became his permanent residence.—Hoyt's Antiquarian Researches, p. 33.

††† It must not be supposed that the title of "Mr." was used as freely then as now. "Sept. 27th, 1631, Josiah Plaistow, of Boston, for a misdemeanor, was sentenced by Court of Assistants "hereafter to be called by the name of Josias and not Mr. as formerly used to be." This title was applied to captains and sometimes to mates of vessels; to military captains; to eminent merchants; to school-masters, doctors, magistrates and clergymen; to persons who had received a second degree at College, and who had been made freemen. This was a time of great anxiety. The Privy Council had commanded Cradock to order the colonial charter home, to be "regulated." The ex-president of the Massachusetts Company did write for it in 1634, but the provisional authorities, while answering his missive, declined to return the charter.‡ Then a "Quo Warranto" was issued:

CARCLUS REX, &c.

To the Sheriffs of London, greeting.

We command you that you take Henry Rosewell, knight, John Young, knight, Richard Saltonstall, knight, JOHN HUMPHREY, John Endicott, Simeon Whitcomb, Samuel Aldersey, John Ven, George Harwood, Increase Nowell, Richard Perry, Rich. Mich. wheresoever we shall then be in England, to answer us, by what warrant they claim to have divers liberties, privileges and franchises, within the city of London and the liberties of the same; whereupon they are summoned; and there you shall have this writ.

THOMAS BRAMTON.

At WESTMINSTER, 17th day of June, in the eleventh year of our reign. (1635).**

"Affairs looked black indeed. Resistance was seriously contemplated; what was called the 'freeman's oath,' which bound the colonists to allegiance to the colony rather than to the king was ordered to be subscribed throughout Massachusetts Bay; and at the same time it was decided to 'avoid and protract.'†† Nothing prevented England from launching her cohorts upon the plantations but the presence of those home troubles which now began to press the royalist party as closely as the serpents enveloped Laocoon."‡‡ The storm was not averted, however, only delayed until fifty years later. In 1684, judgment was entered against the Massachusetts charter,—in the latter part of the reign of Charles the Second. The "Exemplification of the Judgment for vacating the Charter of the Massachusetts Bay in New England" was issued the following year, by his successor, James the Second. In this document the name of John Humfrey occurs many times, as Humfrey, Humphrey or Humphry.***

It is worthy of notice that, at that date, ROBERT HUMPHREYS††† was agent for the Colony of Massachusetts Bay. In a letter from Edward Rawson to Thomas Hinckley, dated Boston, 2d July, 1685, we find: "I received this day a large packet from our agent, Mr. Humphreys, with a letter enclosed to our Governor and Council,—in the whole, a forty-seven sheets of paper in lawyers' lines; a narrative of the judgment against our charter,—which I. presently, after I had opened, presented our Governor with; the judgment wholly in lawyers' Latin."†††

We do not know what relationship may have existed between these two Humphreys.

We find in Pratt's Apology, an evidence of the jealous care and watchfulness exercised in guarding the interests of the colony:

Whereas John Pratt**** of Newtown being called before us at this present Court†††† and questioned for a let-

In 1636, Mr. JOHN HUMFREY and Captain Nathaniel Turner were appointed, by the Court, to lay out the bounds of Ipswich.*

In 1637, JOHN HUMFREY and Edward Howe represented Lynn in Quarterly Court; name of place changed from Saugus to Lynn, at that time, in compliment to Mr. Whiting, who came from Lynn Regis or King's Lynn, Co. Norfolk.† February 25th, 1639, Edward Howes, in a letter written from London to John Winthrop, Jr., sends his "loving salutation to Signior Humfries."

In 1639, Endicott, HUMFREY, Winthrop, Jr., Wm. Pierce and Joseph Grafton were appointed to settle bonds and grant consent for settlement at Cape Ann.

About the year 1638, Mr. HUMFREY, having expended so liberally for others, becomes financially straitened, and his pastor seeks a remedy.

HUGH PETER to the General Court of Massachusetts:—

To the Honored Court now set at Boston.

Whereas it pleased the Lord by diuers occasions to exercise our honored brother Mr. Humfrey so as his condition is generally taken notice of in the Country to bee such that without some helpe his frends feare the Gospell may suffer by his sufferings.

By the aduice of frends I am bold to desire the Counsell, fauor, and assistance of the Court now assembled in his behalfe, and finding the Country so charged already by necessary rates, I have only this way of some succor to present to your wisdomes viz: that whereas he hath some mony in his hands intended to some publike vse, if that may be remitted to his owne being one hundred and odde pounds; and if thereunto you shall aduise I shall pay him what Mr. Geere left to some of vs to dispose of for the Country, I suppose it may answer good part of his necessity, though I perceiue lesse than 700 l besides the sale of much of his estate will not cleere him.

Herin I shall wayt your pleasure and shall euer bee (as I am bound)

Yours

HUGH PETER.

Salem, 10 (7).‡

The "Answer" of the Court to the foregoing petition appears in the margin thereof, in the handwriting of John Winthrop, Esq., Governor, in the words following:

"The Court vpon heareing this Petition, & muche argument & consideration thereof did declare theire tender regard of the gentleman & his condition & their readynesse to helpe to supporte him: but they are not satisfied that his estate is so lowe as it should call for any such public helpe, & if it should appeare so they would then see a faire waye how such helpe may be vsefull to him for the intended ende."

The General Court Records are silent on the subject of this petition; but in June, 1639, "It was ordered that a letter should be sent to Mr. HUMFREY to send in the 100 l which is in his hand to further the college."**

From this we infer that his prospects may have somewhat brightened; but his troubles were not at an end. In 1640, his barn at Swampscot, with all his corn and hay, to the value of £160, was burnt by the carelessness of his servant, Henry Stevens, in setting fire to some gunpowder. At the Court of Assistants, November 1st, "Henry Stevens, for firing the barn of his master, Mr. JOHN HUMFREY, he was ordered to be servant to Mr. HUMFREY, for twenty-one years from this day, towards recompensing him." The Court afterward allowed Mr. Humfrey for his loss and for his good services £250.*

Felt states that, in 1641, he suffered much by fire at Salem.† These losses had a very disheartening effect upon him, and probably made him desirous of returning to England, or trying a new field of action. Hubbard asserts that he had been contriving to leave the country several years previous, "against the advice of his best friends."‡

We here insert a letter, from Hugh Peter to John Winthrop, which is not fully understood:

Honored Sir,—My sudden and humble request vnto you is that you would bee pleased to accompany the deputy in putting your hand and seale to the Testimony will bee presented vnto you for Mr. HUMFREY, now bound for England with his sonne only with him, and a very quiet, contented mynd, purposing to returne in the Spring, hauing left his family and estate in Godly mens hands. I pray, Sir, fayle not herin. I meane the Country's Seale to it. At next meeting I shall giue you better satisfaction about himselfe and his departure. Thus with my humble respects and hartiest loue I leaue you thus hastily saluted & am Yours in all duty HUGH PETER.

Salem vlt: Sept:

"If we interpret the date of this letter to be the 'last of September' it cannot refer to HUMFREY's voyage to England in October, 1641, which is recorded by Winthrop; as Peter had sailed for England the August previous. Does this refer to another visit by Humfrey to England, or to a contemplated voyage never made?"**

Allusions are made to him, in 1640, which show that he was in New England. In a letter dated "Salem, the 15th of the 1 moneth 1640," Endicott mentions his "honoured brother Mr. HUMFRIES."†† In one dated Newport, 22 May, 1640, and addressed to John Winthrop, at Boston, Wm. Coddington sends "due respect to Mr. HUMFREYES."‡‡

In 1640, JOHN HUMFREY "from Lynn" was a member of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company.***

In 1641,††† he was advanced to the new trust of Sergeant Major General of all the military forces of the colony, the first who had ever been appointed to that position in this country. Perhaps it was with a view to provide some check to what was apprehended from Governor Bellingham's overbearing disposition.†††

About this time he decided to go to the West Indies, being "tempted by great offers."**** We find the following entries in Calendar of State Papers:

1641—Mar. 29, London. The Company of Providence Island to the Governor and Council. Take it very well that the inhabitants made so good a defence against the Spaniard's attempt of the island. Complain of the spirit of difference which continues to exist, and which led to the ministers and others being sent prisoners to England. Disapprove of Capt. Butler having deputed Capt. Carter Governor, which was the cause. Previous instructions in that particular should have been followed. Have thought fit to release the prisoners, and send them back to the island, where it is hoped peace and amity may be settled. Have appointed Capt. HUMPHREYS, now or lately resident in New England, Governor; Capt. Fitch, a man of a quiet spirit and approved integrity, Deputy Governor, Serj. Maj. Hunt, Capt. Sam. Axe, Rich. Lane, Capt. John Francis, Capt. Wil. Woodcock, Capt. John Colborne, and Lieut. Andrew Axe, a standing Council for the affairs of the plantation, Admiralty, and Council of War. Do not think it fit to divide these businesses.

1641—Mar. 29. Instructions from the Company of Providence Island to Capt. Thos. Fitch, Deputy Governor. To deliver their letter to the Council. In case Capt. HUMPHREYS is not in the island, to cause his own commission to be read. Not to desert the government but for very important reasons.

1641—Mar. 31, London. The Company of Providence Island to Capt. HUMPHREYS. Are encouraged, by his integrity and worth, to recommend to his acceptance the government of the island. Confess the employment is below his merit, but do not doubt of his readiness to engage in the undertaking. Inclose his commission, being the duplicate of one sent to Providence. Have entrusted the government to Capt. Thos. Fitch until Capt. Humphreys arrival. Leave it to his own discretion to pursue any design upon Cape Gratia de Dios. Hope he may be accompanied with many good families and persons, that the foundation of a considerable colony may be laid. Further undertakings touching the West Indies may shortly be expected. Have not limited his commission, because his wishes are not known there.

1641—Mar. 31. Minutes of letters for Providence Island, signed and sealed on this day; also one for New England to Capt. [HUMPHREYS] with his commission for government of Providence.

1641—June 28, Brooke House. Minutes of a Court for Providence Island. * * Articles signed, in which Emanuel Truebody agrees to send two ships from New England to Providence, with Capt. HUMPHREYS and others.

This voyage probably was never undertaken, if Mr. Humfrey "went home in the same ship with Rev. John Phillips, October 26th, 1641."† But there are some contradictory statements:—

"Upon an invitation from Lord Say, he intended, in the year 1640, to have removed to the Bahama Islands; but the island of Providence being taken by the Spaniards, he abandoned that design."‡

"But the gentleman had the same fate which many others before him have had the experience of, to sow that which others were afterwards to reap: for himself tarried not long enough in the country to enjoy the fruits of his own pious and charitable endeavors; though others have raised goodly fabrics upon the foundation which was laid by him and others." * * "The gentleman forementioned (so strongly bent to remove) did, at last, himself go over into England." ** Hubbard here makes no allusion to his going to the West Indies. Would he not, if this had been the case?

Palfrey states that "many sold their estates here to transport themselves to Providence, among whom the chief was JOHN HUMPHREY, who went out to be Governor. But the scheme proved a failure. The island was soon after taken by the Spaniards, and most of the New England adventurers, who could, came back."* And in mentioning his appointment as Major General the same author adds: "A motive to this step, independent of its public objects, may have been to soothe and gratify Humphrey, who had just now returned disappointed from the West Indies."† He must have made a quick passage, as the articles of agreement, between the Company of Providence Island and Emanuel Truebody, for providing the Sparrow and Salutation, "to be employed in transporting Capt. Humphreys and others," were signed June 28th, 1641; and, provided the date given by Savage is correct, he was constituted Major General in June of that same year.

September 22d, 1642, "Fast was appointed because of contention between the King and Parliament; and plots of the Indians. So gloomy were the prospects of the country at this time many sought other abodes. Some went to the Dutch on Long Island, and others to the West Indies and England. JOHN HUMPHREY who had been a magistrate, and had united with the Church here Jan. 16th, 1638, was among them. He embarked for England."‡ Does "at this time" mean 1642?

In 1642-43, on the Board of Magistrates, Thomas Flint of Concord was substituted for Mr. Humphrey, who had taken his final departure for England.**

We are inclined to accept the statement found in Young's Chronicles, that he returned to England, October 26th, 1641.††

The latest date of his departure, which we have found, is given in the following: "In 1644, Mr. HUMPHRIES left Salem, and Endicott's influence increased, and he was elected governor."‡‡

Lewis thus writes of him and his family: "He was one of the most influential in promoting the settlement of the colony, and the people of Massachusetts will ever regard him as one of their earliest and most efficient benefactors. * * In discharging the duties of an Assistant in the general government, he devoted his time and energies for seven years to the service of the state, and seems not to have been surpassed in devotedness to her welfare. * * But with all his honors and possessions, a shade of dissatisfaction had spread itself over his prospects, which his numerous misfortunes contributed to darken. The disappointment of the Bahamas must have been severely felt, by a mind so ambitious of honor as his appears to have been; and it is not improbable that he experienced secret chagrin at seeing the young and uninformed Henry Vane*** promoted to the office of governor, above one whose years, knowledge and services entitled him to precedence.

"It is probable likewise that his affection for his wife, whose hopes were in the land of her nativity, had some influence in determining his conduct. Living so far removed from the elegant circles in which she had delighted, and having lost the sister who might have been the companion of her solitude (Arbella Johnson), the Lady Susan was weary of the privations of the wilderness, the howling of the wild beasts, and the uncouth manners of the savages, and had become lonely, disconsolate and homesick. She, who had been the delight of her father's house, and had glittered in all the pride of youth and beauty in the court of the first monarch of Europe, was now solitary and sad, separated by a wide ocean from her father's house. The future greatness of America, which was then uncertain and ideal, presented no inducement to her mind to counterbalance the losses which were first to be endured; and the cold and barren wilderness of Swampscot, populated by its few lonely cottages, round which the Indians were roaming by day, and the wolves making their

In a letter, dated "Salem, 29, 7, 48," Emanuel Downing writes "To his honored brother," Gov. Winthrop, expressing his desire that "the last Grant of the Court to Mr. HUMPHRIES of Cosen W." be "fearme"* [confirmed?].

It will be observed that our history of Mr. Humfrey, after his return to England, is very incomplete. The slight glimpse we have of him, reveals to us a man burdened with anxiety for his family and encumbered with debts. We find no further mention of his name in connection with public affairs. He doubtless received a hearty welcome from those who were in sympathy with him in his noble devotion to the cause for which he had sacrificed so much, while those who were opposed to this new enterprise treated him with coldness and indifference, if not with contempt. As for his friends whom he had left this side of the water, they no longer needed that he should fight their battles for them with the King and his Council, as he had so often done in former times.

From a letter written by Roger Williams, we have reason to believe that Mr. Humfrey's death occurred in 1651, or early in 1652. It is addressed: "For my honourd kind friend Mr. John Wintrop at his house at Pequet in New England."

"From Sir Henry Vane's at Whitehall †
20, 2, 52. (so calld.)

"Kind Sir,—Tis neere 2 in the morning, yet a line of my dearest remembrance to your loving selfe & yours, from whom I have receaved so many loving lines continually. Our old friend COL. HUMPHRIES is gone, & lately also Col. Cooke: yet blessed be God we lieue, & through the jawes of death are landed safe, & behold the wonders, the Magnalia and Miracula Dei in England. I have sent a large narration, both concerning Old England affaires & New, to Providence. I hope & desire you may see it,"‡ &c. Probably the death of Col. Humphries was mentioned in this document.

Felt states that "Mr. HUMFREY died before June 25th, 1661, when his son Joseph, and Edmund Batter were appointed administrators (by Quarterly Court Probate) of his estate in New England." We have already mentioned the sale of his "Swampscot Farm" to Lady Moody, and of other land to Emanuel Downing; both made by Mr. Humfrey before he left the country. We find also the following: March 12th, 1648-9. "Agreed by Salem that Marblehead (with allowance of General Court) shall be a town and the bounds to be the utmost extent of that land which was Mr. Humfrey's farme and sold to Marblehead."

The administrators claimed the 500 acres "by a pond of fresh water" in Lynnfield, given him by the Court.

"His lands were chiefly disposed of in 1681, when his daughter Ann sold ten acres to Wm. Bassett, Jr., and twenty acres with a house in Nahant street to Richard Hood. Robert Ingalls bought nine acres of the Swampscot Farm for £280. and Richard Johnson had sixty acres of salt marsh for £30. The windmill of Sagamore Hill was valued at £60."

* Mass. Hist. Coll., 4th series, Vol. VI., p. 69; ‡ p. 286.

† Mr. Williams was now in England, having sailed from Boston in November, 1651. He returned early in the summer of 1654.—See Mass. Hist. Coll., 3d Series, Vol. X., p. 1.—Eds.

"The whole of Mr. Humfrey's lands at Swampscot were about thirteen hundred acres, besides five hundred at Lynnfield. In 1685, we find that Daniel King, Senior, having bought four hundred acres of this land, mortgages the same to widow Elizabeth Curwen, of Salem.* He afterwards married her and thus secured it; but in 1690 it was again mortgaged to Benjamin Burne, of Salem. March 20th, 1693, it was sold by Elizabeth and Daniel King to Walter and John Phillips, ancestors of the numerous and respectable family of Phillips. This tract of four hundred acres is mentioned as beginning at the farther end of the beach beyond Fishing Point, and extending to the west end of the Long Pond. Another description makes it extend to Beaver Brook, which is the little stream next eastward of Phillips Pond, and runs out at the bounds between Lynn and Salem. Henry Mayo bought Fishing Point, which is the point next east of Swampscot, which he sold March 10th, 1696, to Walter Phillips, for £140. Mr. Humfrey's house and land adjacent was bought by Hon. Ebenezer Burrill, in whose family it remained until 1797, when it was bought by Robert Hooper, of Marblehead. In 1842, his daughter Hannah (widow of William Reed) sold it to Mr. Enoch Redington Mudge, of Lynn, who has built, near the old house, a beautiful gothic, stone cottage, worthy of the olden time."†

Very little information has been obtained concerning the sons of John Humfrey.

"JOHN HUMFREY, Jun.," from Lynn, was a member of the Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company in 1641.‡ He was probably twenty or thereabouts at that date. He is supposed to have returned to England. If John was living, we do not understand why Joseph, who was so much younger, should have been chosen to administer on his father's estate in New England, unless it might be because he was in this country.

"Col. Humphreys" is mentioned in a letter dated Ely, July 18, 1653, from the Earl of Bedford and others to Secretary Thurloe.**

"Col. Humfrees' regiment" is alluded to in a letter dated "Jamaica, Torrington, the 25th June, 1656," from Admiral Godson to Secretary Thurloe.††

In the list of names of "Officers and Soldiers engaged in the American Expedition," who, during the year 1657, applied for "Arrears of Pay," or on whose account such applications were made by their "Widows or Representatives," is included that of "Col. John Humphreys," 9th October; and, in the list for 1658, "Col. Humphreys," 12th May.‡‡

In a letter dated "Laus Deo in Dunkirk, 31 July, 1656, N. S.," from Mr. John Arden to Mr. Robert Bostocke, it is stated that "On the 26th of this present month, here is brought up to Dunkirk, by two men of war, three great prizes with sea-coals coming from Newcastle, and bound for London—viz. Mr. JOHN HUMFREY, master of the Primrose of Ipswich," &c. Signed John Arden.

"This inclosed is from poor prisoners,"*** &c.

We are inclined to think that "Mr. John Humfrey, master of the Primrose" may have belonged to the Assistant's family, rather than "Col. John Humphreys," connected in some manner with the "American Expedition." But we have thought best to add all of these records, as they may be of assistance in future researches.

JOSEPH and THOMAS HUMFREY.—Savage gives the following :

"JOSEPH HUMFREY, of Lynn, son, I presume, of the preceding, [John Humfrey, the Assistant of the Colony,] bound on a voyage to England, made his will July 3, 1663, in which he speaks not of any near relatives, but disposes of the 300 acres given him by the General Court. Probably he never came back, but was killed at Lisbon, we may fear without reputable concomitants, for that will was proved October 23, 1672, evidence first being produced here, on the 5th of the same month, that 'about three years since he (deponent) had helped to inter him,' without any elucidation of circumstances, as in the Probate Reg. of Wills, VII., 251."

* See Newhall's Hist. of Lynn, p. 200. He does not corroborate the statement of Lewis of sale of old house to Burrill. Burrill could not have bought a house about 1681, of dau. Ann, for he was not then three years old, pp. 201-2.

‡‡ Calendar of State Papers.

"THOMAS HUMFREY, of Dover, 1660, married, December, 1665, at Hingham, Hannah Lane," bap. 24 Feb. 1639, dau. of George, of Hingham in 1635, and Sarah his wife. "He probably lived at Pemaquid* in 1674, when he swore fidelity to Massachusetts, as Sept. 8th, 1665, he took as good an oath to the Royal Commissioners.†

ANN, daughter of John Humfrey, was born in England, but does not seem to have returned with her parents. Lewis states that "she married William Palmer of Ardfinan, Ireland, and afterward, the Rev. John Miles, of Swansey. I have in my possession a deed signed by her, and sealed with the arms of the house of Lincoln."‡

We have not ascertained the date of her second marriage, but have obtained some interesting facts concerning her husband. "John Myles** was the elder of the first Baptist church in Wales, which was founded at Swansea†† in 1649. This church, although its numbers were small at its commencement, had increased to three hundred in 1662, when he was ejected from his charge for non-conformity. He fled to America, bringing with him his church records written in Welsh, and followed by some adherents. In 1663, he founded the first Baptist church in the Plymouth colony, and older than any one in Massachusetts, at Wannamoisett.‡‡ A more detailed account is found in Barber's Massachusetts Historical Collections:*** In the same year of his arrival, Mr. Myles formed a Baptist church in Rehoboth, the fourth formed in America. It was organized in the house of John Butterworth, and commenced with six members, besides the pastor. These and subsequent proceedings were deemed such an evil by the rest of the inhabitants of the town and of the colony generally, that the Court of Plymouth was called on to interfere. Each member of this new church was fined £5, and prohibited from worship for the space of one month; and they were advised to remove from Rehoboth to some place where they might not prejudice any existing church. They accordingly removed to Wannamoisett, and erected a house near Kelley's bridge, on a neck of land now in the limits of Barrington, R. I. They afterwards erected another about half a mile from "Myles's bridge," on the east side of Palmer's river.

Although Mr. Myles had been punished for contumacy, while an inhabitant of Rehoboth,††† the disposition of the government becoming more tolerant, he was permitted to share in the grant of lands at Wannamoisett.

"Captain Willett and Mr. Myles may be justly denominated the fathers of Swansey."‡‡‡ The last-named was sufficiently liberal, disinterested and anxious for the settlement and prosperity of the new town to declare "that the ministers might take the liberty to baptise infants or grown persons, as the Lord shall persuade their consciences, and so also the inhabitants to take their liberty to bring their children to baptism, or forbear."—He is styled "an enlightened, learned and tolerant clergyman."****

February 7th, 1670-1. It was ordered "that all lots and divisions of land that are or hereafter shall be granted to any particular person shall be proportioned according to the three ranks and written so, that where those of the first rank shall have three acres, those of the second rank shall have two acres, and those of the third rank shall have one acre." "Mr. John Myles, pastor," is in the first rank.††††

††† Swansey was incorporated as a town in 1667. It derived its name from Swansea in Wales, and was so spelled in the earliest records. It comprised within its limits the present town and Somerset in Massachusetts, and Barrington and the greater part of Warren in Rhode Island. Rehoboth was incorporated in 1645, and that part of Swansey which was Wannamoisett was included in it.—Baylies' Memoir of Plymouth Colony, Vol. I., p. 241; Barber's Mass. Hist. Collections.

"The Indian War which broke out in June, 1675, overwhelmed Swansea in the first blast of its rage, and left this thriving settlement, in less than a week, a desolation and a wreck."* At this period the house of Mr. Myles was garrisoned. He retired to Boston: and was instrumental in establishing the first Baptist church there, in 1679.—But the pastor is sorely missed by his former charge: On the 21st of May, 1678, "Mr. John Allen and John Brown were chosen to draw up a letter in the behalf of the church and town, to be sent to Mr. John Myles pastor of the church and minister of the town, manifesting our desires of his return to us." November 26th of the same year, "It was voted for the encouragement of Mr. Myles in the work of the ministry amongst us, to pay to the said Mr. John Myles sixty pounds yearly, thirty pounds in provision at money price, and thirty pounds in current country pay. And whereas Mr. John Myles desires to be accomodated with a servant, horses and cart, and other conveniences for his comfortable subsistence, the town doth promise to give to the said Mr. Myles the sum of four pounds in money, which may procure the said conveniences, which four pounds is to be paid at the end of the year after the coming of Mr. Myles amongst us." As Mr. Myles receipts for this sum, March 13th, 1681, it is probable he returned to Swansea early in 1680.

September 30th, 1679, It was voted to build a meeting-house.—The former one had probably been burnt by the Indians, although no mention is made of it.

Mr. Myles died February 3d, 1683.† "He was a man of learning and of elevated views; there was little in his creed or practice different from those of the other clergymen of the colony, but doubts as to the propriety and efficacy of administering the rite of baptism to infants, and more expanded and liberal principles: yet his conscience was sufficiently scrupulous, as his pilgrimage in the wilderness may testify."

"The wife of Mr. Myles, whose name was Anne, survived him. His son John Myles, the first town-clerk of Swansea, was educated at Cambridge. Samuel Myles the son (or grandson) of the Swansea minister, was the second rector of King's Chapel, Boston, to which office he was inducted June 29th, 1689; and died March 4th, 1729. It is worthy of remark that the descendant of one who was driven to America by the terrors of Episcopacy should have embraced Episcopacy there, where it was disarmed of its terrors, so soon after the death of his ancestor."‡

Savage states that Rev. John Myles "left widow Ann, daughter of John Humphrey, and children: John, Susanna, and Samuel, then, says his will, at college, H. C. 1684."

Should additional records of the descendants of Lt. Gov. John Humfrey be obtained, they will be added in a future number of this work.

* Suckling says of him in Hist. of Co. Suffolk, pub. 1846; Vol. I., p. 181: "In 1517, he gave to the poor of this parish lands, now let at £32. 7s. 6d. The original deed is—or was lately—in the parish chest, and is dated 'apud Metyngham, ultimo die mensis Maij Anno regni Regis Henrici septimo.'"

"As the above Richard Umfrey was also a liberal benefactor to the parish in other ways, I transcribe his short will, which contains many very curious and interesting particulars, illustrative of the manners and customs of his period."

† See pp. 11 and 37, may have belonged to the Humfrey family of Norwich, as the name is found there at a very early date:—

WILLIAM FITZ HUMPHRY was Archdeacon of Norwich, 1124, and 1st Archdeacon of Sudbury, 1126; was living in 1146. [See p. 28.] —Blomefield's Hist. of Co. Norfolk, Vol. III., pp. 638, 646.

Blomefield states that "Ridlesworth is a rectory in Nortolk archdeaconry, and Rockland deanery. This town is called in Domesday Reddefuorda, that is the village abounding with reeds. It belonged to Orgar, a freeman, at the Confessor's survey, and to HUMFRY, son of Alberic, the Conqueror's, who had only this in the county; it always had a carucate in demean, and was half a league long and as much broad, and paid xi.d. ob. geld. [Terre Humfridi filij Alberici. H. Gildecross.] This afterwards became the lordship of Ralf Peverell, of whose honour of Peverell it was held, at the fourth part of a fee."—Vol. I., p. 276.

Suckling gives:—"St. George South Elmham (Co. Suffolk), called also Saint Cross from the armorial cognizance of that saint,—and Sandcroft from the sandy nature of the soil where the church is situated,—is a rectory consolidated with Homersfield in 1767." The rector of St. George, 1329-46, was "OLIV: FIL: JOIS HUMFREY—patron Robert de Sandcroft." [Jois is probably a contraction for Johann's, Latin for John.]

THOMAS HUMFRY was rector of Benacre church (Co. Suffolk., 1554. Patron the King. The date of his successor is 1575.—Vol. I., pp. 207-11; Vol. II., p. 130.

AMERICAN FAMILIES.

PREFATORY.

THE CONNECTION OF MICHAEL HUMPHREY WITH THE HUMPHRY FAMILIES OF THE WEST OF ENGLAND.

What was the relationship existing between Ozias Humphry, (whose purity of blood and respect in arms is vouched for as an unquestioned fact, by Boswell, in his Life of Johnson, as noted on page 60 of this work) and Michael Humphrey, the ancestor of the American Family?

This is a legitimate question, requiring a candid and considerate answer. It is, however, a less important question than it would have been did we seek to deduce a lineage direct from Ozias Humphry. This, however, is not attempted; we seek only to show that Ozias Humphry, of Honiton, Devonshire, and Michael Humphrey, of Lyme Regis, Dorsetshire, belonged to collateral branches of one and the same family, having a common ancestor.

It is less important, again, from another fact, fully disclosed in the preceding pages, which very clearly establishes the great antiquity and former renown of the family; so that, the history and prominence of Ozias Humphry, and the formal indorsement of his blood and lineage by so respectable an authority as Boswell, might be entirely obliterated without prejudice to the ancient renown or respect of the family on the claim of relationship.

The facts and considerations tending to establish this relationship are, briefly:—Descendants of Michael Humphrey find themselves in possession of these six coats of arms, the marshalling of which forms the frontispiece of this volume, and which are also noted, being Nos. 1. 3. 4. 5. 6 and 14 of the forty-two of the several arms depicted on pages 52 to 57. The description of these arms, as will be seen, bears the written signature of Ozias Humphry, R.A. They came into the possession of the family in this manner: When Col. David Humphreys, of whom presently, was in London on one of his many journeys to Madrid and Lisbon, while Minister Plenipotentiary to Spain and Portugal, at the close of the Revolution, he made the acquaintance of this Ozias Humphry, then in the zenith of his renown as a Member of the Royal Academy and painter to the King and Royal Family. They, doubtless, talked over the connection or consanguinity, and upon the settlement of this question, presumably to their mutual satisfaction, Ozias Humphry furnished

Col. David Humphreys with four different papers referring to the subject, viz:—(1), the Marshalling of the six coats of arms above-mentioned, painted by hand, and a fac-simile of which is given in the frontispiece of this work (except that the “veil” has been thrown over it and the word “Humphreys” introduced beneath); (2), the description of the arms, evidently from the HERALD’S COLLEGE, in London, as made and attested by Shielde, and to which is affixed the attest of “Ozias Humphry, R.A.” (also lithographed in fac-simile); (3), the portrait of Ozias Humphry (also engraved in fac-simile opposite page 59); and finally (4th), Ozias Humphry’s book-plate (of which a fac-simile is given as the heading of his biography, page 59).

It is difficult to see how any unofficial act could well have been more formally attested than was this, between these strangers, whose only apparent bond of interest was a similarity of name. When we reflect upon the jealousy with which all high-bred Englishmen cling to ancestral honors, and the promptness with which they resent any intrusion upon their blood or rank; and when we take into consideration that this event occurred just at the close of a long and bloody war, in which one of these parties had taken a most conspicuous part, and when the entire popular English sentiment towards all Americans must have been one of mingled bitterness and contempt; we realize how utterly impossible such a transaction would have been, had it not been founded in justice and truth. And while, on the one hand, we could not suppose that Ozias Humphry would have lent his name and aid to perpetrate a fraud like this; we must, on the other, invest the character of Col.
 David Humphreys with entirely new attributes in order to believe that he would accept, or for a moment retain, or perpetuate, such a delusion. Yet these several documents were carefully kept and cherished by Col. Humphreys during his life-time, and at his sudden death, were found carefully preserved among his papers, by his nephew William Humphreys, and—by the widow of the latter—having long been preserved and framed, were placed in the hands of the writer.

It should also be remembered that, during his residence abroad, Col. Humphreys became the suitor and married the daughter and sole heiress of a prominent and wealthy English Merchant, residing at Lisbon. Of the particulars of this alliance we are without any intimate data, but the eminent respectability and vast wealth of the family are clearly set forth. In the history of Derby, Conn., the statement is made that the income of Col. David, from the property of Madam Humphreys, was £30,000 per year. If it was even one-fifth of that sum it was a very large income for those days, and is evidence of the standing and influence of the family.
 Whatever the amount may have been, it was clearly sufficient to maintain the Colonel and his wife in a style of affluence and luxury, and to enable him to expend very large sums in travel and in the enterprise of founding the manufacture of wool and cottons in Derby, leaving also a large fortune in the hands of Madam Humphreys at his death. In the prosecution of a suit for the lady’s hand, it must have occurred to him that the establishment of his connection and lineage with a family of respectability and renown was important, and may, in part, account for the formality manifested in the attestation and transfer to him of these heraldic documents by Ozias Humphry, R. A. Quite recently, one of the name, in seeking an alliance with a Spanish lady of wealth and family, met with the same obstacle on the part of the guardians of the lady, and which was also removed by the production of the same evidences of ancient blood and lineage as in the previous instance.

There is, also, presumptive evidence that a knowledge of the locality of the English Kinsfolk, had been preserved among the descendants of the Emigrant Michael, so that Col. David was at no loss where to seek, and to whom to apply, for the information he desired. The father of Col. David—the Rev. Daniel Humphreys, one of the most accomplished clergymen of his day, was only the great grandson of Michael the Emigrant; and it would have been strange if a man of his knowledge and general information should not have known the origin and English connections of the family. The facts clearly point in the direction of such traditionary knowledge.

It will be noted that Honiton, the birth-place of Ozias Humphrey, and Lyme Regis, the place whence the letter from the parents of Michael was dated, are but a few miles apart; and also, that Dorchester, from whence Gov. John Humfrey and his associates in the founding of the Colony of Massachusetts Bay originated, was in the immediate locality. This, I think, confirms the position, that the efforts and prominence of Gov. John Humfrey in the founding of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, was known to Michael and his father's family, and may have served as an inducement to his venture. The argument from locality is less conclusive or important in the case of a family like the Humphreys, where an enterprising, self-reliant disposition, urging them to new fields and new enterprises is paramount, than it would be if applied to a family of the usual, or different habits and characteristics. But, in this case, it is not without its value as confirmative evidence.

There is a strong probability that during the turbulent times from 1640 to 1660 in the course of which England, and notably the country about Lyme Regis and the town itself, was the scene of frequent conflict between the Loyal and Parliamentary forces, and the consequent insecurity of the persons and property of the people, that Samuel Humphrey may have removed with his family and property to St. Malo, just across the Channel. This would be the more probable, if, as we conjecture, he may have been in trade, and that this removal to St. Malo, at first adopted as an expedient to save his goods or property, was found to be so satisfactory that this old seaport ultimately became his permanent residence. This removal would account for the shipments of goods, and business subsequently conducted between Michael Humphreys, at Windsor, and his brother Samuel and his partner Henry Rose, at St. Malo, Brittany. This mercantile connection, at first possibly between Samuel Humphrey the elder and his son Michael, in 1643, between Lyme Regis, England, and Windsor, Connecticut, may have been continued after the removal of the parent to St. Malo, and after the death of the latter was in like manner continued by his son Samuel. Fifteen years later a difficulty occurring in the settlement of accounts between them, leads to a judicial decision which becomes a matter of record, and so these business transactions are preserved and brought to light.

It will, finally, also be noticed that the physiognomy and traits of character of the older Humphreys, as observed in their history, has a family resemblance which will be readily recognized by those who are acquainted with the subject.

The portrait of Ozias Humphry is a very distinctive Humphrey face and profile, as we know it in these days. It finds its exact counterpart in numerous individuals, and is so frequently met with and recognized as to require only calling attention to the likeness. The mental characteristics are the same, without even considering the change of times and institutions under which the ancient and the modern Humphreys have lived,—the love of enterprise, the self-reliant spirit and contempt of danger and disaster, which made itself known and felt in the Crusades, the Conquest, the wars of the Plantagenet Kings of England; the founding of the East India Company; the founding of the Colony of Massachusetts Bay and Connecticut. The religious vein, from the old Humfredus Sanctus in Normandy, in 860, the Archdeacons of Salisbury,* and Humphrey de Basingborne, Humphrey of Dorset and Humphrey of Wilts; the musical genius and poetic temperament noted in the life, habits and manner of thought, of the historic Humphreys—are all, in sometimes painful exactness, reproduced here in the Humphreys as I have known them. A perusal of the biographies, as they will appear in the farther progress of the work, will fully sustain and confirm the intimation or assertion made above. We could mention several remarkable instances illustrative of this observation, were it not to anticipate what will, hereafter, be made clear; or, if it did not seem to savor of ostentation.

My conclusion is that Michael Humphreys is of the branch of the family who settled in the "West of England" soon after the conquest, and that Michael, Gov. John, and Ozias, were of collateral branches of the same historic family.

Sussex Arch. Collections.—Richard de la Wych, Bishop of Chichester, commonly called "Saint Richard," who died A. D. 1253, made numerous bequests in his will, which was written in Latin. Among others:—"Item Fratri Humfredo incluso de Pageham XI. Solidos; (Also to Friar Humphrey, the recluse of Pageham, 40 shillings.) The recluse, when once inclosed within his cell, was locked in for life, and frequently even walled up. This could only take place by the special licence of the diocesan bishop, who put his seal upon the cell with certain solemnities. The probability of the recluse receiving sufficient nourishment from the alms of the pious was always taken into consideration on permitting a cell to be devoted to this purpose, and it was therefore usually fixed in populous towns, commonly near a church, and sometimes, if not generally, so placed that the altar might be seen from it." In Subsidy Roll for County Sussex, Brightehelmston, Whalesbone Hundred, 1621, occur the names; "THOMAS HUMFREY, in goodes, £3. 5s. od. JOHN HUMFREY, in landes, £20. 2s. 8d."—(Vol. IX., p. 78.)

* In the paragraph upon Archdeacons of Salisbury, page 99, it will be noted that "The Bishop of Evreux was present," at the first service held in the Cathedral of Salisbury, after its renovation, in 1225. Attention is called to the fact, stated on page 17, (line 5, note), that "at Amfreville, near Evreux, which is a very ancient city, and capital of the department of the Eure on the Iton, (Normandy) at a later date [than 896] was the seat of the Umfreville family," etc.:—which intimates a connection between the bishop of Evreux in Normandy, and Humphrey, the Archdeacon of Wilts.

MICHAEL HUMPHREY.

The first known appearance on American soil, of this emigrant ancestor of one, and the largest, branch of the Humphreys Family, is at Ancient Windsor, Connecticut.

Concerning his settlement there, several circumstances require to be taken into consideration in fixing the date and probable mode of his arrival. The settlement at Windsor was made by emigrants from Dorchester, Mass. ;* who, attracted by the better land and climate of Connecticut, removed there in numbers sufficient to protect themselves from the Indians en route. After their settlement, lists were made of the several parties who left Dorchester, and of those who arrived at Windsor, but on these lists Michael Humphreys' name does not appear.† We first know of him, in 1643, as engaged in the manufacture of tar and turpentine, with one John Griffin, at Massaco (now Simsbury), then a wilderness a few miles west of the Windsor settlement. These articles being in much demand for the use of the British Navy and Marine, generally commanded a ready sale at high prices; and, with furs, were almost the only articles at that time allowed to be exported by the colonies.‡ A letter from his father and mother—Samuel and Susannah Humphreys, is extant, dated Lyme, Eng., Jan., 1648, in which the latter laments that she has not information from him then for many months and was anxious to know of his health; and, also, how his "passages" go with him; or, as I interpret it, how his "voyages" had turned out. He was then a young man, having married the daughter of a conspicuous Windsor resident, Matthew Grant, in 1647; and the letter manifests the tender solicitude of a mother for a son who has recently emerged from her immediate care and counsels.

* Trumbull states that this "honorable company" was derived from Devonshire, Dorsetshire and Somersetshire.

† "Perhaps he had been at Dorchester," says Savage, (Genealogies of New England,) but gives no grounds for his conjecture. The loss, or destruction, of some of the very earliest records, of both Dorchester and Windsor, throws an obscurity over our investigations as to this point. Of Dorchester records we are informed (Hist. of Dorchester, 1859, preface, p. iv; p. 38.) "Nearly four years elapsed after the settlement began, before the present town organization of Massachusetts was formed; and during the period of plantation existence few records were made except grants of land. * * The early transactions are doubtless much obscured by the removal to Connecticut, in 1635-6, of a large number of the prominent men of the first settlers, taking with them the church records. Diligent inquiry has in vain been made for those memorials. The present town record book probably commenced with the settlement in 1630, but the first two leaves, containing four pages, which may be supposed to have been the record of the first transactions of the plantation, are wanting, and were probably lost before Mr. Blake compiled his Annals, more than one hundred years ago." In giving the list of all the Grantees of Dorchester lands, whose names appear in the Town Records previous to January, 1636, it is stated that it "comprises all the first settlers, excepting such as may have appeared on the missing pages (probably very few) and whose names were not repeated." "The town records of Windsor, or Dorchester, as it was first called, (Stiles' Hist. and Genealogies of Ancient Windsor, Conn. 1839) prior to 1650, having crumbled away under the remorseless tooth of Time, we have undoubtedly lost much which it would be both pleasant and profitable to know. Yet from the Colonial Documents, and such fragmentary manuscripts as have escaped the ravages of time and neglect, we are enabled to trace, in outline at least, the growth and development of the infant town during the first fifteen eventful years of its existence." Yet there is but little doubt that the statement of our opening sentence is correct.

‡ The manufacture, there, of pitch and tar was commenced and carried on at Massaco, now Simsbury, as early as 1643, by Michael Humphrey and John Griffin, then of Windsor, though, subsequently, both of them became inhabitants of Simsbury. At first they had a partner by the name of John Tinker, who afterwards settled as a merchant at New London. An Indian deed of this territory was given, in 1648, by Manahanoose to John Griffin, in consideration that the grantor had kindled a fire which, in its progress, had consumed a large quantity of pitch and tar belonging to Mr. Griffin. It was stated that "he was the first that had perfected the art of making pitch and tar in those parts." Dwight informs us that, in 1646, "the Indians of Windsor were in a very hostile state. They burned a quantity of tar and turpentine, rescued by force one whom the officers had seized, and threatened messengers afterward sent to them; but the commissioners of the United Colonies thought it best only to warn them, against future misconduct of the kind."—History of Connecticut, p. 113.

In 1662, a statement of his affairs is made in the records of the General Court, concerning large invoices of goods shipped to him from St. Malo, in Brittany, by his brother Samuel and his partner—Henry Rose, and which had become the subject of litigation; Humphreys claiming an offset for time and expenses in London, voyage and time in Barbadoes, etc., which should be allowed him. Now the inference seems quite plain that Michael Humphreys came to Windsor, by way of the Connecticut River,—direct from some English Port,—possibly from Lyme, which is only across the channel from St. Malo; and was, all the earlier years of his life, engaged in mercantile operations, bringing goods to Windsor, and taking thence tar and turpentine on his return voyages. This accounts for our not finding his name among those of the emigrants from Dorchester, or upon the very early town records; while it places him in his own sphere as a merchant trading in the commodities of the country; this one only of his (doubtless, many) adventures coming to light through the record of the Court, while it also accounts for his position and influence in after-life as an educated, traveled man of large experience in business affairs.

The next item of interest which we find, concerning MICHAEL HUMPHREY, is his marriage, October 14, 1647, to Priscilla, (born 14 Sept., 1626) the daughter of MATTHEW GRANT, of Windsor. Mr. Grant was one of the original company that came over in the ship "Mary and John, to Dorchester, in 1630; and removed thence among the very earliest to Windsor,* in 1635. He was a man of position and influence in the Town and Church, was the second Town-Clerk, and the compiler of the Old Church Record, "which, in the absence of some of the earliest records of the town, assumes," says Stiles, "a value which can scarcely be over estimated."† Ex-President U. S. Grant is (in the seventh generation) one of his many descendants. Mr. Humphrey's marriage to Matthew Grant's daughter was, therefore, no mean testimony to the social position and consideration enjoyed by the young trader in the new community.

This marriage is alluded to in the following letter (already referred to on page 97), from his parents in the Old Country; a letter alike interesting because of its being the earliest and only family document preserved in Michael's time; and because of the touching maternal love and piety which breathes in its every line.

"Lyme 24 January 1648"

* "The original boundaries of the town were very extensive, being about forty-six miles in circumference, lying on both sides of Connecticut river."—Barber's Conn. Hist. Collections. Concerning the origin of the name Windsor we find:—

March 11th, 1657-8, at a session of the General Court in Hartford, "the plantation at Pequet is named New London, with a preable to bee inserted about the same." Said preamble was as follows:

"Whereas, it hath bene a comendable practice of ye inhabitants of all the Collonies of these parts, that as this Countrey hath its denomination from our deare native Countrey of England, and thence is called New England, soe the planters, in their first setting of most new Plantations haue giuen names to those Plantations of some Citties and Townes in England, thereby intending to keep vp and leaue to posterity the memoriall of seuerall places of note there, as Boston, Hartford, Windsor, York, Ipswitch, Brantree, Exeter,—This Court, considering that there hath yet noe place in any of the Collonies bene named in memory of ye City of London, there being a new plantation within this Jurisdiction of Connecticut settled vpon ye faire Riuer of Monhegin, in ye Pequot Countrey, it being an excellent harbour and a fit and convenient place for future trade, it being alsoe the only place wch ye English of these parts haue possessed by conquest, and yt by a very iust war vpon yt great and warlike people, ye Pequots, that therefore they might therby leaue to posterity the memory of yt renounced city of London, from whence we had our transportation, haue thought fit, in honour to that famous City, to cal ye said Plantation, New London."—Colonial Records of Connecticut, Vol. I., p. 313.

‡ Passages—a common word of the time as applied to "voyages"; or "business affairs."

"heartened, tis he that worketh in us both the will and the deed. God from the scriptures speaks unto us in this" "language and declares himself as followeth: I am God. I change not. I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and" "the end. I am God and change not. I am God and there is none besides me. Oh my son thou art the child" "of mine own bosom. Fear not, God is found of them that sought him not. The tongue cannot express how" "he hath been found by me in all my trouble in so much that I cannot say trouble, but much joy in it." [Here one line is lost and the next continues] "sorrows but joy abundantly. Dear child, I can say but little more; but" "he, who is all, is most properly my God; he declares himself in many expressions, as thus :—I am Alpha and" "Omega, the beginning and the end. Alpha; everlasting, none but him. My dear, the last letter I wrote unto" "you was of the 18th of May* 1648 by a friend, which, if God was pleased to give you life, came safe to your" "hand. In it I advised you of the rect. of your writing six months before, by whom it did take notice of your" "marriage and also that you were gone further."

[Here the last fold of the page, comprising probably about ten lines, is lost and the conclusion is on the top of the reverse page.]

"More than that we are all thy dear affectionate friends to the end of the world.

"Know this that we are all in good health and live very well." †

LYME REGIS is a seaport town 143 miles west south-west of London, and is situated at the south-western angle of the county Dorset, at the mouth of the river Lyme. Some of the houses are built on the side of a steep hill and others at its base, and the neighboring shores are uneven and precipitous. From entries in Domesday Book it is thought that the manufacture of sea-salt was carried on here in the reign of William the Conqueror. This port became one of importance, as is shown by the grant of a charter of privileges to the inhabitants by Edward I. (1272-1307), since which time this borough has sent members to Parliament. During the reigns of both Henry IV. (1399-1413) and Henry V. (1413-1422) the French sacked and burned the town. It was garrisoned for Parliament, in the civil war under Charles I., and, being besieged by the king's forces in 1644, was successfully defended by the governor, Colonel Blake, who withstood the assaults of the royalists for two months, and compelled them to raise the siege.

"The living is a vicarage and a peculiar of the Dean of Salisbury, * * * patron the Prebendary of Lyme and Halstock, in Salisbury Cathedral. The church, dedicated to St. Michael, is an ancient edifice, situated on a rising ground at the east end of the town." (Gorton's Topographical Dictionary of Great Britain and Ireland).

In a list of Archdeacons of Sarum, or Salisbury Cathedral, the name Humphrey appears between 1188-93, and HUMPHREY de Basingborne, 1205. HUMPHREY was archdeacon of Wilts in 1213; was present at the first celebration of divine service in the Salisbury Cathedral, 1225, after its renovation. The Bishop of Evreux was also present. HUMPHREY was archdeacon of Dorset, 1243. This archdeaconry, in 1542, was annexed to the See of Bristol.—(Dodsworth's Salisbury Cathedral).

Mrs. Ware, formerly of Honiton, Devonshire, visited Lyme Regis with her husband, about 1875, and while he carefully searched the parish records she examined the tombstones in the church-yard, but neither succeeded in finding the name of HUMPHREY. The baptismal register commences in 1543, and continues to 1572, from which date there are no entries until 1662. The other records seem also to have been much neglected.

* There is no discrepancy between this date and that of the letter. Both are Old Style—the year beginning in March.

† The foregoing is correctly copied from fragments of an ancient letter believed to have been the original from the parents of Michael Humphrey of Windsor, Ct., and has been preserved as such by one of his descendants. It was written on coarse paper, apparently the leaf of a blank book and not visibly ruled; still the lines run very truly, and the execution is easy and good, without repetitions or changes, or corrections. I have made no changes, excepting to modernize the spelling and add occasional punctuation. The chirography and orthography are those of the time, and at present are not easy to read. The initial capital letters of the letter and of the signatures are done with extensive flourishes, and apparently in the same hand. It is probable that the writer signed both names. Whether this was by the father or mother the style is not of a character to indicate, being of a light, compact but somewhat dashing and easy hand.

The late Col. Joseph L. Chester, of London, wrote in 1881: "I am able to corroborate the statement you already had, that there is no trace of the family in the parish registers of Lyme, in Dorsetshire. If they were of Lyme, their wills, if they left any, if not registered in London, should have been proved at Salisbury, or else in what was called the 'Peculiar Court of Lyme Regis.' I have had the calendars at both of these local registries carefully examined, and the wills of the two Samuels, father and son, and of Susanna, are not in either. Assuming that they may have been, when the letter of 1648 was written, only temporarily at Lyme, and perhaps belonged to the adjoining county of Devon, I have also had the Will Calendars of the registry at Exeter searched, but with the same negative result.

"Their entire disappearance may be accounted for in one of two ways. The period from the date of that letter down to 1660 was one of the greatest possible confusion in this country, when business of all sorts was interrupted, and records very loosely kept. If they died during this period (I mean the elder Samuel and Susanna) their wills may never have been proved; or, if proved, never registered. But, at all events, if they died anywhere between 1650 and 1660, and left wills, they would, if proved at all, have been proved and registered in London, all the local registries throughout the country being entirely closed during those ten years. On the other hand, if the son Samuel settled and lived at St. Malo, he may have taken his parents in their old age to live with him, and they may have died there. In that case, the absence of any trace of them in this country is readily accounted for."

St. Malo is built on a small granite island called the Isle of Aaron (an ancient possession of the church of Aleth) at the mouth of the river Rance, and is situated north-east of Brittany to which it belongs, and not far from the province of Normandy. It is connected with the main land by a causeway nearly three hundred yards in length, called the Sillon, which is twice every day covered with water at high tide. This road running along the frontage of St. Malo forms a broad quay where are ship-builders' yards, vast stacks of timber, stone, coal, &c. Whether approached by land or water, it presents a very imposing appearance with its massive walls and stupendous round towers, some of which were constructed on the plan of the celebrated Vauban, who wished to have all of the inhabitants remove to St. Servan in order that he might make of this place an impregnable citadel. On the walls cannon are mounted, and also on many of the islets in the bay. Conspicuous among these is "Le Grand Bey," the island chosen by Chateaubriand as his last resting-place, because he desired to be buried near St. Malo, the place of his birth. He said of this city that it was smaller than the "Garden of the Tuileries" in Paris, yet in this space of fifty-two acres are crowded castle, cathedral, churches, and elegant mansions of merchant princes, besides many plainer residences, most of which are built of granite. The entrance from the causeway is through stately portals, and the sheathing still remains through which in former days rose and fell the portcullis, a representation of which is preserved on the coat of arms.* Several of the streets are well built, but the principal promenade is on the ramparts, where a magnificent and very extended view is presented, the tide here rising so high that when violent winds prevail the spray dashes over the stone breast-works to the feet of the spectator. On account of these strong winds most of the houses have double windows. In 1845, the population was about ten thousand. Many strangers remain here during the summer months, being attracted by the beautiful beach and the excellent opportunities it affords for sea-bathing. The port is one of the finest and safest on the coast of France, but is difficult of entrance on account of the numerous reefs by which it is defended.

When Samuel Humphrey went to reside in St. Malo, for the purpose of engaging in mercantile enterprises, it had been standing five centuries or more and must have had to him an appearance of antiquity. There were fortifications, although Vauban may not have increased and strengthened them at that date, as the two were contemporaneous. The Castle, which formed a part of these, had even then been built a century and a half, and doubtless often drew his attention, associated as it was with a singular history. The bishopric had been transferred to this city, in 1141, from Aleth (now St. Servan) where it had been founded about 541. The bishop claimed that he was temporal lord of the place, as a convent had formerly stood there, and that he held it of the Pope as a fief of the church, while the Queen-Duchess Anne, daughter of Francis II. the last Duke of Brittany, and wife of Charles VIII. King of France (1483-98), who had constituted her feudal sovereign of St. Malo, felt that her authority should be recognized, and determined to assert her rights by erecting a castle which had been forbidden. This she is said to have accomplished by stratagem. She requested the Bishop to allow her to build a four-wheeled carriage which he could not well refuse. First rose one tower and then another, Briconnet protesting in vain, until four were completed and an outwork of fortification added in a straight line, which received the name Le Timon (the carriage-pole) when the meaning of the whole was fully revealed. Although the Bishop threatened her with all the thunders of the Vatican, she not only persisted in carrying out her project, but caused to be cut on a granite slab in high relief and inserted in the masonry of the tower at the Porte St. Thomas the following: Qui qu'en grogne, ainsi sera: c'est mon plaisir. (Whoever grumbles, thus it shall be: it is my pleasure.) This tower is still called Qui-qu'en-grogne. Queen Anne married 2d, Louis XII. who succeeded her first husband as king of France.

In early times the residents of St. Malo depended not only on the sea and their fortifications for protection, but for many years dogs were employed as night sentinels. Enactments were passed for their maintenance, and they had their keeper who let them out through the little gate at ten o'clock in the evening, (when a warning bell was rung to apprise the inhabitants,) and called them together by means of a trumpet in the morning. There came to be a saying: Il a été à St. Malo, les chiens lui ont rongé les mollets. (He has been to St. Malo, the dogs have gnawed the calves of his legs.) The people believed that these dogs were of the breed trained by the Gauls to fly upon their enemies, the Romans, at the commencement of a battle. The arms of St. Malo formerly were, on a field argent, a mastiff gules. In the latter part of the eighteenth century, a naval officer who undertook to force a passage was killed by some of these dogs prowling between that city and St. Servan, and a few days later they were all destroyed, doubtless much to the relief of the residents. There is a map of St. Malo, or Saint Malo de l'isle as it was then called, bearing date 1662, preserved in the Imperial Library at Paris, on which is given, near the Sillon, a little sentry-box marked Corps-de-garde de nuit pour les chiens, and, near the Tour de la Grande Porte, the Pont aux chiens.

The Malouins (for thus they prefer to be called) are descended from Bretons who sought an asylum among the rocks in order that they might defend themselves from the incursions of the Normans. When Charles the Simple gave Brittany in fief to the Duke of Normandy, the people for a time would not acknowledge him as their sovereign. Those who were shut up in this island home early acquired fearless and self-reliant habits, and were ready to engage in distant and hazardous enterprises. They became noted for their generous sentiments, and their merchants enjoyed a great and just reputation for probity. In 1663, these merchants "exasperated, as were all their compatriots, with the demand that the congress of Geertruidenberg had made on the French monarch, that he should employ his troops to compel Philip V. to abandon Spain, where the will of Charles II. had called him, collected the profits which they had just made in trade with the Spanish colonies in America, and carried to the king thirty-two millions in gold, when the finances were exhausted by a long succession of unfortunate events. This timely distribution of thirty-two millions in the banking-houses, re-animated the war and all payments."*

In 1692, and again in 1695, the English besieged St. Malo, but were repulsed by the Malouins, who revenged these assaults by devastating their sea-board. If Samuel Humphrey was living at this time, he was probably seventy or eighty years of age, and may have returned to England. Although we thus regard him as having been an English subject, it appears possible from our investigations that France was the home of his ancestors. In 837-8, as has been already mentioned, there was in Brittany a Humphrey who witnessed a deed of gift to the monks of the Abbey of Redon;† and there were also other Humphreys residing in different parts of France prior to the conquest, from which time Normandy became a province of England, and so continued for more than a century. Then it must be borne in mind that the education of Edward the Confessor, "St. Edward," in Normandy would tend to the introduction of its arts and customs into England, as would also the settlement there of the Norman followers of William the Conqueror. The last-named is said to have introduced the ringing of the curfew, a Norman institution, into that country in 1068; and the Norman surnames, which were adopted by the nobility in 1100.‡ All this would tend to make such a change of residence seem a less formidable undertaking to those who were considering the subject of removal thither, especially if friends had preceded them. We have records of several families bearing the name Onfroy, or Humphrey, that were living in Normandy before 1600.

The residence of Michael Humphrey was on a "home-lot," purchased by him from Jeffry Baker; ** situated in the north end of a parallelogram of land called "Pound-Close," just outside of the north line of the Palisado, or fortification, which had been set up, on the north side of the Little Rivulet, †† as a defence against surprisal by the Indians during the Pequot War, in 1637.

And, on the 21st of May, 1657, Mr. Humphrey took another—and what, in those days, was an important—step in social advancement; for with others, before "The Generall Court of Elections" he was duly admitted to the rights and privileges of a Freeman, in the Colony of Connecticut. ‡‡

† This abbey was founded about 832, by Convoion, archdeacon of Vannes, and was situated in the eastern part of the bishopric of Vannes, in Brittany, near the confluence of the rivers Oust and Vilaine, in a southerly direction from St. Malo. It became celebrated throughout all Europe, and rivalled in wealth the most magnificent abbeys. It was pillaged and destroyed by the Normans in 866, but was afterwards rebuilt. [See p. 16.] As the Norwegians made invasions into France in the ninth century, so the Danes made frequent incursions into England, continuing them until early in the eleventh century, when, under their king, Sweyn I., they succeeded in becoming masters of the country, although, in 1016, after six battles had been fought between Edmund II., king of England, and Canute, king of Denmark, the kingdom was finally divided between them. It is possible that some of the Humphreys in England were descended from these Danes, just as some of the Humphreys in France may have been descended from the Danes and Norwegians. AMFRID DE TELLOLO, governor of Hastings, Eng., 1068, married Adeliza, sister of Hugh de Grantmesnil, governor of Leicester, and had Robert of Rotholent Castle in Wales, also Ernald and Roger, both monks of Utica in Normandy, and William who was the Abbot of St. Euphemia. HUMFRED OF TILLEUL is the same as the first-named, and is given on page 18 as the son of AMFRID, the Dane, which statement is confirmed by Ormerod in his History of Chester. (Co. Cheshire). Oge of the Earls of Chester, a descendant of Turstain, son of Amfrid the Dane, married a grand-daughter of William the Conqueror. Whether Mr. Humphrey still pursued his early occupation is not apparent, but, from invoices of goods found among the papers in the State Archives, we learn that, in 1662, he was still extensively engaged in mercantile transactions with his brother Samuel Humphrey, and Henry Rose (partners), in St. Malo, France.* Dr. Stiles informs us that Windsor, in the early colonial days, was a leading commercial town and port of entry, there being, at that time, no bridge at Hartford to obstruct the navigation of the river; and West India and other goods were, during a part of the year, landed at the Rivulet ferry. "Prior to and during the Revolution—or, in other words, during Windsor's palmiest mercantile days—the Palisado Green was the 'commercial centre' of Windsor. It was often heaped with goods of all kinds which had been received, or were being shipped."† This condition of affairs may have been at a somewhat later date than that with which we are dealing, but doubtless, in the days of Michael, fine opportunities for trade were offered to the enterprising merchant, of which he was among the earliest to avail himself.

Mr. Humphrey, although so long a resident of Windsor, had not, up to 1664, united with the church there; but styled himself "a member of the Church of England." It will be remembered that he was not of the company who had removed thither from Dorchester with their pastor, and were in close sympathy with him and with each other; nor do his motives for emigration seem to have been of a religious nature: but rather for mercantile purposes. Many years, twenty-one at least, had now passed, since his arrival, and in civil, business and social matters he had evidently affiliated and become identified with the community and its interests. During this long period as a prosperous citizen, he had been rated for the support of the parish; though not being a church communicant, by its rules, he had no vote nor voice, nor the full privileges of its ordinances.‡ Having now been married seventeen years, and having five children requiring Christian nurture, most of all his eldest child John, now nearly fourteen years of age, he doubtless felt that the time had come to take steps towards securing, what seemed to him from his standpoint, his rights and those

It appears from the records that on account of the agreement made, May 8th, 1668, between Henry Rose and Michael Humphrey, the latter made over a certain tract of land "at Massaco" to the former, June 18th, 1668. of his family. While he took this view of the case, the position assumed by the Puritan communion was that every person coming into their fellowship must conform to their rules of admission, in respect to examination in faith and experience; and having, as one of these grounds of dissent, been accustomed to question the genuineness of Episcopal piety, membership in that church was an invalid qualification. We do not know precisely what course was pursued by Mr. Humphrey; but it is possible, if not probable, that he objected to increased church taxes consequent on the election of a ministerial colleague to the now aged Rev. Mr. Warham. In whatever way the difficulty originated, we find the following:

"The Church of Christ at Windsor complaynes of James Enoe and Michael Humphrey, for seuerall things contained in a paper presented to the Court. Mr. Clarke, in behalf of the Church complaynes of James Enoe and Michael Humphrey for a misdameanor in offering violence to an establisht law of this Colony. Mr. Clarke withdraws this charge."

"Although the complaint was withdrawn by the church," says Dr. Stiles, "yet the court saw fit to pass, at the same session, its censure upon the agitators of public peace":

"This Court hauing seriously considered the case respecting James Ennoe and Michael Humphrey, doe declare such practises to be offensiue, and may proue prejudiciall to the wellfare of this Collony, and this Court expects they will readily come to the acknowledgment of their error in the paper by them presented to the Church, whereupon the Court respitts and remitts the sensure due for their offence, provided answerable reformation doth followe, expecting that their lenity therein will winne upon the spirits of those concerned in this case. And this Court doth approue of the pious and prudent care of Windsor, in seeking out for a supply and help in the ministry, Mr. Warham growing ancient; and do order all persons in the sayd plantation to allow their proportion towards the competent maintenance of such a supply in the ministry. And the Court desires a friendly correspondency may be maintayned at Windsor, as if this trouble had never been; this Court declaring their readiness to mayntayne all the just priuiledges of all the members of this Corporation."*

But Michael Humphrey and his party did not rest here. A petition was drawn up "by the skillful hand of William Pitkin, Esq., of Hartford, and was signed by seven persons, four of whom were Windsor men. Indeed, it is probable, from the evidence before us, that Eno and Humphrey were the chief movers in the affair, and that the letter was aimed at the Windsor Church."†

The General Court, "at their October session this year, aroused by the lamentable discord which prevailed throughout the country, and especially, it may be presumed, by the tone of the petition which had been presented to them" by the parties named above, "passed the following resolve":— †

This Court vnderstanding by a writing presented to them from seuerall persons of this Colony, that they are agrieved that they are not intertaind in church fellowship: This Court haueing duly considered the same, desiring that the rules of Christ may be attended, doe commend it to the ministers and churches in this Colony to consider whither it be not their duty to enterteine all such persons, whoe are of an honest and godly conuersation, haueing a competency of knowledg in the principles of religion, and shall desire to joyne wth them in church fellowship, by an explicitt couenant, and that they haue their children baptized, and that all the children of the church be accepted and acco<sup>d</sup> reall members of the church, and that the church exercise a due christian care and watch ouer them; and that when they are growne up, being examined by the officer in the presence of the church, it appeares, in the judgment of charity, they are duely qualified to particpate in that great ordinance of the Lords Supper, by their being able to examine themselues and discerne the Lords body, such persons be admitted to full comunion.

The Court desires y<sup>t</sup> the seuerall officers of y<sup>e</sup> respective churches would be pleased to consider whither it be not the duty of the Court to order the churches to practice according to the promises, if they doe not practice wthout such an order.

If any dissent from the contents of this writing they are desired to help the Court wth such light as is wth them, the next Session of this Assembly.

The Court orders the Secretry to send a copy of this writing to the seuerall ministers and churches in this Colony.

"The measure thus proposed was what is best known as the Half-way Covenant. It failed, however, to convince the heart or to satisfy the conscience of the great mass of the people. *
* And in spite of the wisdom and influence of councils and Synods; the uneasiness of many church members; and the plainly indicated will of the General Court, its introduction into the churches of Connecticut was slow and difficult. linquish, the Half-way Covenant."* For continuation of the church history we must refer those interested to Dr. Stiles' account.

We find records which serve to show that the inhabitants of Windsor believed there were enemies in their neighborhood to be guarded against:—

July 3d, 1667, "Those of the dragoons that have received pouches of Thomas Dibble which he got made, and it is to be paid by the town."—In the list is "Michael Humphrey, one."†
October 10th, 1667, at a General Assembly held at Hartford:—

"The inhabitants of Windsor haueing imroued themselues in building a forte,‡ this Court for there incouragement doe release the Traine soldiers of Windsor two dayes of their training this Michael Tide and one day in the spring."**

Dr. Trumbull states with regard to the Indians that, within the town of Windsor, only, there were ten distinct tribes, or sovereignties. About the year 1670, their bowmen were reckoned at two thousand. At that time it was the general opinion, that there were nineteen Indians, in that town, to one Englishman.†† Dr. Stiles considers this estimate much too large, and gives some very good reasons for his belief; ‡‡ but they were doubtless sufficiently numerous to be a source of great anxiety and dread.

We have already mentioned Massacoe (Simsbury) in connection with this account of Michael Humphrey, and as he resided there for many years, and there left descendants, we will add some of the records relating to it:—

"The Generall Courte for Election of Magistrats, the Second Thursday in Aprill, 1642:—Its ordered that the Gou'nor and Mr. Heynes shall have liberty to dispose of the ground vppon that pte of Tunxis River called Mossocowe, to such inhabitants of Wyndsor as they shall see cause."***

March 9th, 1647, "The Court thinks fitt that Massacoe be purchased by the Country, and that ther be a Comite chosen to dispose of yt to such inhabitants of Wyndsor as by the[m] shalbe judged meet to make improvement thereof,"††† &c.

March 11th, 1662-3, "This Court doth appoint Capt. Nubery, Edward Griswold and John Moore to be as a Committee, and hereby they are impoured to lay out all those lands that are yet vndivided at Massaco, to such inhabitants in Windsor as desire and need it."†††

October 8th, 1668, "This Court doth desire that Massacoe, which hitherto hath been an appendix to the town of Windsor, may be imroued for the makeing of a plantation, & Capt. Benj. Newbery, Deacon John Moore & Mr. Symon Woolcott the present committee for the grant of those lands are desired and impowered by the Courte to farther the planting of the same, and to make such just orders as they shall judge requisitt for the well ordering of the sayd Plantation, so they be not repugnant to the publique orders of this Colony."****

October 11th, 1669. In the list of "stated inhabitants of Masaco, and haue been free men for Windsor," are the names "Micall Houmfery" and "John Griffen."†††† There are in all thirteen names.

May 12th, 1670, At a Court of Election held at Hartford, the "bownds of the New Village Massacoe"†††† are given, and it is ordered that the plantation there be called "Simmsbury."*****

***** "It is probable that the Poquonnoc Indians were owners of Simsbury, as the deed of Simsbury, in 1680," to a town committee, "is given by Nasahegan, Toto and Seacett—and there are other evidences of their being closely allied with the Massaco and Farmington Indians." Nassahegan, or Nassacowen, was the chief sachem of the Poquonnoc tribe, and Toto was his grandson, "the friendly Indian who, during King Philip's war in 1675, having learned the purpose of the savages to attack Springfield, disclosed the plot to the Windsor people," in time to prevent the destruction of the town, with its inhabitants.—Stiles' Hist. of Ancient Windsor, p. 90; see also Idem. "Indian Purchases," pp. 105-109,

October 13th, 1670, Michael Humphrey and John Griffen, who had been associated with him in business, were "Deputies for Simsbury to a Generall Court Holden at Hartford."*

In 1670, the property which Michael Humphrey owned in Windsor, and which had originally belonged to Jeffry Baker, was made over to the Rev. Benjamin Woodbridge, "by deed of gift from certain men 'as agents for the whole company,' which was probably the dissenting party or Second Church in Windsor," over which Mr. Woodbridge was ordained March 18, 1669-70.†

May 11th, 1671, "This Court doth recommend it to the inhabitants and proprietors of Simsbury to rayse the minister's and towne rate this yeare upon persons and land."‡ May 13th, 1669, the Court had granted that the plantation at Massacoe should be rate free to the country "for three yeares next ensuing." This was doubtless for their encouragement as a new settlement. They had much to contend with, however, being in fear, not only of wolves** and other wild animals, but also of the Indians, concerning whom they were compelled to be constantly on their guard.

August 11th, 1673, the "Grand Committee for the ordering of the Militiæ mett in Hartford: The proportion of dragoons for Simsbury was seven." "The Committee for the Militiæ doe hereby appoynt Mr. Simon Woolcott and John Griffen to be those that shall command the Traine Band of Simsbury for the present, and vntill the Generall Court order otherwise or the people there make their choyse."††

July 6th, 1675. At a meeting of the Magistrates "John Griffen was confirmed Sarj't of Simsbury Traine Band, and is impowred to command the Traine Band there upon all occasions, and especially in case of any exigency by the assault of an enemy."‡‡

September 4th, 1675. "For the prevention of danger to travelers upon the road between town and town in this County,"—said towns were ordered to keep scouting parties of mounted men on the roads. "Windsor, each other day, shall send four men to clear the roads to Simsbury, and two each other day, to clear the roads between Hartford and Windsor; Windsor to begin Monday next to Hartford, and Tuesday to Simsbury."***

October 14th, 1675, At a General Court held at Hartford—"This Court orders that the people of Simsbury shall haue a week's time to secure themselues and their corn there, and the end of the week from this date, the souldiers now in garrison at Simsbury shall be released their attendance there."††† But early the following year they met with a serious loss.

In March 1675-6, "the inhabitants of Simsbury, numbering about forty families, were so alarmed at the hostility of the Indians, that they buried their effects and went back to Windsor," Mr. Humphrey, his wife, and seven children with the rest. It must have been a great disappointment to them, after years of hardship and toil, to be compelled to abandon the most of their possessions to save their lives. "The settlement being deserted, the Indians destroyed all the houses which had been erected," forty in number, "by burning them, and blotted out almost every vestige of improvement which distinguished the new-born settlement from the surrounding wilderness; so that when the settlers returned they could not find the place where their goods were secreted."†††† The burning of Simsbury occurred March 26th. "So near an attack, and the destruction of the houses and goods of their friends and neighbors who were dwelling with them, must have vividly brought to the minds of the Windsor people, the imminent danger to which they were themselves exposed,"**** as also those who had fled to them for safety.

March 27, 1676, Meeting of the Council.—Major Treat, who was appointed to pass over Connecticut River and so go to Norwich, was called back on account of intelligence received; and the following order of the Council, without date, is written on a detached slip of paper, in the hand of Mr. Leete, [Doc. 44, a]:

“Major Treat being called back, with his Company, upon the intelligence of Simsbury being burnt, & a man caryed away from Windsor by sculking parties of Indians that seeme to lye near these plantations to doe mischiefe, The Counsell orders the said Maior, or some officer under him, to goe or send forth a party of his soldyers daily, to scout about the woodes adiacent to these townes; one day, one way & another day, another, as their comandrs shall direct or conduct them from time to time, according to intelligence gained, or as they may haue speciall order from the Counsell; not aboue a fourth part of the band ordinarily; and they may return to some of our townes each night, to quarter. The rest are to attend in their armes daily, some to warde, some to guard the people about plowing & sowing or other necessary occasions, for saueing liues, and goodes, or preventing famine, if God will.”*

What a picture is here drawn of those troublous times, as also in the following:—

October 12th, 1676, at a session of the General Court:—This Court considering the enlarged goodness of God to his people in this wilderness, in appeareing so gloriously for their help in subdueing of o<sup>r</sup> enemies in so good a measure as he hath done, and his mercy in remoueing sickness from the land, in the comfortable and plentiful harvest that wee haue receiued, and the continuance of o<sup>r</sup> priuiledges and liberties, ciuill and ecclesiasticall, hath moued this Court to nominate and appoynt the first day of November next, to be solemnly kept a day of Publique Thankesgiueing thorowout this Colony, to bless and prayse the Lord for his great mercy towards vs, with prayer that the Lord would help vs in our liues and wayes to walk answerable to his abundant mercyes. Whereas in these times of God’s awfull dispensations towards his wilderness people, this Court haue had solemne considerations what might be provoaking to God among vs, and some solemne reflections haue been recommended to the severall churches and congregations of this Colony, and lawes made to farther the so much desired and necessary worke of reformation; and the Court obserueing little effect thereof hitherto, but that although through the mercy of God to a poor vnderdeserving people the evils of judgment are in a good measure remoued, yet the euill of abounding sin (the sins lamented) doth yet remayne, which may justly provoake the eyes of the holy and jealous God to greater indignation against vs than euer; who, tho the late judgments of war and sickness be at present taken off and a breathing time, a longer time of patience, afoarded us to consider our wayes and return unto the Lord with our whole heart, yet is he pleased to hold over vs a threatening hand still, by darke cloudes impending farr off and neare; therefore, this Court doe againe recommend it to all and every the elders and ministers of this Colony, to stir up and what they can awaken theire severall congregations to the dutys of serious repentance and reformation, of such solemne concernment in such a day as this; and that all and euery of vs, from the highest to the lowest, be provoked to promote the same in our churches, courts, plantations and famalyes seuerally; to which end this Court haue appoynted the third Wednesday of November next, to be a day of solemne humiliation throwout this Colony, to seek the presence and blessing of the Lord upon his people in the aforesayd worke, and that he would appeare for the help and salvation of his people in this wilderness and other parts of the world as the matter doth or may require.”

Then follow orders respecting the Indians “which have or shall before January next surrender themselves to mercy of this Gouverment.”

Certain men were also “appoynted by this Court to put a value upon all the lands in the severall plantations, how they shall be valued in the list of estates, and make return of the same to the Court for their approbation and confirmation.”

“This Court doe confirme what the Committee hath done in sizeing the lands of the severall plantations, and order that for the future the lands be prized accordingly in the List of Estates.”†

March 21st, 1676-7, Meeting of the Council in Hartford:—“Forasmuch as by order or aduice of the Councill, dated March the 3d, 1675-6, the inhabitants of Simsbury might remoue from that plantation for theire better safety in that time of war, but now the appéarance of that danger being much over, and sundry of the said inhabitants are in necessity to make improvement of their accomadations for livelyhood, which lyes in common fields with others so as that unless the comon fence be proportionably made and mayntained by all and each proprietor the present im-

Michael Humphrey and his son John† do not appear to have been among the “deserters,” but were signers of the following petition :

To the Honoured Generall Assembly now sitting at Hartford.

Honoured Fathers,

Wee whose names are underwritten, the present inhabitants of Simsbury, haueing bin formerly burthened by the inequality of levying of rates (as the case is circumstanced with us) and now through the late afflictive dispensation of God's providence, haueing bin greater sufferers than other plantations in this Collony, and thereby allsoe in some measure at the present incapaistated to rayse rates in the common way that is stated in the country law ; in this our infant state do humbly request and desire of this Honoured Assembly that they would be pleased to graunt us at the present that pruilidge (which wee understand hath been formerly and of late grannted to other plantations in their beginning,) viz. that all rates that shall be raysed for the defraying of publicke charges may be levied onely upon lands ; the farther grounds and reasons of this our request wee haue desired Samuel Willcoxson and Benajah Holcomb to represent to your Honours as our agents in this case : Who are your very humble servants,

At a Court of Elections held at Hartford in May, 1677,—“This Court upon the motion of the inhabitants of Simsbury,† doe grant that the people of Simsbury shall haue liberty to rayse their rates for the ministry and towne charges onely upon lands for the three next yeares ensueing this date, any law to the contrary notwithstanding ; and in regard of the great loss that that town hath received (in the late warr, the Court haue seen cause to remitt to the inhabitants of Simsbury that make there constant abode there, their country rates for the three next yeares ensueing, both for persons, land and cattell ; but those that doe not so inhabit there, there lands onely are freed from country rates, their cattell to be listed and returned according to order.‡

Michael Humphrey, with his family, resided in that part of Simsbury called Weatogue. As early as 1667 we find that “Micah [Mical?] Humphy”** had a grant of land at “Weatague, east.”

March 17th, 1673-4, at a Generall Town-meeting, it was “voted that the Ferry place for the futter shall be at the mouth of hoppe Brook & y<sup>e</sup> there shall be a High way aLowed from y<sup>e</sup> Landing place on the East Syde the River & y<sup>e</sup> by the River Syde in the most Feiziblst place : till they turne on the Southerly Syde of Mich<sup>l</sup> Humphries allotment, and then to turn from y<sup>e</sup> river on the Southerly syde of that allotment to the high way that comes from Windsor, etc.††

January, 1680-1, the town voted to donate a tract of land in the vicinity of Salmon Brook (reserving two lots, one for the minister and the other for Michael Humphrey) to seven persons, on condition that each grantee should take possession of his share and continue to reside on it for seven years. This was done for the purpose of inducing emigration and settlement ; but the distance of these grants from the body of the settlement, and the consequent danger from Indians, prevented the compliance with the terms on which the grant was made. There is probably an allusion to this grant in the following :

Rev. Samuel Stow, of Middletown, was preaching at Simsbury in 1681, and continued there four years. Although he was never settled, he formed the First Church in that town.‡ He seems to have been acceptable to Michael Humphrey, as he was one of the signers of a document presented to the General Court, in which it was requested that Mr. Stow might continue his labors among this people.

The Humble Motion of Simsbury men to the much Honored Gouverneur and Deputy: with ye rest of ye worshipfull Assistance: and worthy Members of this Honnored Assembly is as followeth.

We whose names are vnderwritten having knowledge & tryall of Mr. Samuell Stow in ye labours of ye word & Doctrine of ye Gospel doe hereby manifest so far as we Know our own hearts, our hearty desires of his continuance to be a Pastor & watchman over our Soules & the Soules of ours, and that therefore for his & our encouragements, an addresse might be made to the Generall Court, y<sup>t</sup> is to Set this Instant of May or that the Presentation of this may be instead of an address (by fformal petition) to their Honours, that we might haue their countenance to settle ourselves in gospel order, with the approbation & helpe of approued Elders of Churches among vs. That so we might according to y<sup>e</sup> obligation y<sup>t</sup> God hath layd vpon vs through the application of ye representative blood of his Son, walk more orderly to his praise and the Salvation of our soules in observance of whatsoever he hath commanded us in his Holy worde having ye meanes & Helps.

“Upon the presentation of an address by Mr. Stowe and Michaell Humpheries, on behalfe of the inhabitants of Simsbury, for liberty to gather a church and settlement of a pastor there, with the approbation of this Gen<sup>l</sup> Court, according to gospell order, after the usuall maner in this Colony, we see no cause to discourage, but to allow them so to doe, it being done with the observation and approbation of three or foure of the elders and messengers of the neighbouring churches, advising that their inhabitants doe choose a competent number of the most sober and godly persons to begin that church and call the officer, as is desired by them."*

May 7th, 1683. "Michall Humphris" and his two sons were signers, with twenty-nine others, of an agreement to decide by lot, as to the location of the meeting-house, whether it should be on the East or West side of Hop River. These thirty-two signers were all legal voters at that date.† The church was erected in 1684.

November 2d, 1686, a committee appointed, August 14th, 1685, to procure a minister, was continued. There were nine members, two of whom were "Mich<sup>l</sup> Humphries" and his eldest son John.† This is the latest record we have of Michael Humphrey in connection with church matters, and it leaves him "continued" on the "ministerial committee." If he was about twenty-one years of age in 1643, when we find his name first mentioned on the Windsor Records, then he was about sixty-five in 1686. This is only a conjecture, as he may have been more than four years older than his wife, who was born in 1626.

June 25th, 1688, "Michall Humphry and his son Samuel,† with many others, signed the deed confirming the mill lot to the owner of the mills.

From these records of various transactions relating to Simsbury, we gather that Michael Humphrey was one of the earliest landholders and settlers in that town; and that to old age he was "a leading man in municipal and ecclesiastical matters." The Indian troubles were doubtless a serious hindrance and a source of great annoyance to him in his efforts to subdue the wilderness. This must have been the case during his lifetime, as it is stated that the settlers who returned to Simsbury, after it was burned in 1676, "lived in constant fear, and often suffered from the depredations of the Indians, for more than thirty years after."

The date of death of Michael Humphrey we have not ascertained. There was a division of his estate, March 19, 1695-6, at which time Samuel Humphries of Simsbury sold to his brother John, land which belonged to their father, on the west side of Mill Swamp; "as also his house lott: But now Since Our honord fathers Death hath fallen into Our hands and Possession."†

FAMILY 2.

21. Sergeant John<sup>2</sup> Humphrey, [2] (Michael,<sup>1</sup>) was born 7 June, 1650, in Windsor, Ct. He married Hannah (dau. of Sergeant John and Anna Bancroft) Griffin, b. 4 July, 1649; and settled in Simsbury, Conn., where her parents resided. Sergt. Griffin was a first settler, and the first manufacturer of tar in the Colony, being in partnership or associated with Michael<sup>1</sup> Humphrey. [See his record; also Fam. 7, J.<sup>2</sup>].

He was a prominent and respected citizen; was the owner of considerable land,* and frequently engaged in the town's business.

* In the "Red-Book"—the oldest book of Simsbury Records, in the Town Clerk's office, are the following entries of land to John Humphrey:

"This Indenture Made this 9th of January one Thousand six hundred & Eighty three Between Michall Humphrys of Simsbury in ye County of Harford in the Collony of Conecticut in New england of the one part—and John Humphries of the Tounne of Simsbury in the Tounne, County and Collony above Written on the other part—Witnesseth that I the said Michall Humphries for good Consideration, mee thereunto moueing, have given, granted, enloofed, sold and made over, Unto my eldest son John Humphries; al my right title interest, with all and singularly al the privileges, profits and emmunities to a certain Tract of Land, being scituated on the easterly side the River, being part of said Land of Mill Swamp abutts at easterly and on the cart path that goes to Weatoug; at the Brook; the lyne that goos from the said path to the Rivr beginns at a smal Walnut tree and from the said tree to the Rivr in Length on Hundred and Thirty Rodde: the sd Tract of Land in Breadth is fifteen Rodds, and on Northerly syde abutts on the Range of lotts. in Mille Swamp: westerly at the River: southerly on my proper aLottment: al which Land with ye Bounds hear circumscribed: I give my son ful powr to record and al the premises in the booke of Records. to himselfe, his Heirs executors administrators and assigns for ever: the quantity being Twelve Acres be it more or less to the True performance hereof I have set to my hand, this Ninth of January, 1683.

[The above was probably his house-lot.]

The same year, February 25th, at Town Meeting, John Humphries received a grant of a piece of boggy land lying at the westerly end of his house-lot. "he is to goe from his hous lot to Long meadow fence." December, 17, 1684, John and Samuel Humphries received a grant of land "under the West Mountains:" and on 31st of the same month, 1685, John received another grant of five acres of land, also "under the West Mountains." "At a tounne metting of the Inhabitants of Simsbury, febbry 26, 1685, Giuen to John Humphries six or seuen Acres of land next the mountains at the head of Hoppe Brooke, yt Branch of the Brook that comes behind of Wetauge."

Grant to "John Humphrie senr."

"Decembr. 20th 1693, att a Gen<sup>ll</sup> Towne Meting of the Inhabitants of Simsbury giuen to Sergt John Umphry a certain tract of land lying within the township of Simsbury being situat on the east syd of the Riuer and west syd the mountains between Mil Swamp Brook on South syde said brook, and up the hill on the east syde of the path that leads to Weatoug, and is to goe the whole breadth of his sonn Johns 20 Acres to the brow of the hill."

Samuel Humphries of Simsbury sells to his brother John land which belonged to their father, west side of Mill Swamp; "as also his house lott: But now since Our honord fathers Death hath fallen into Our hands and Possession."—This was when a division of the father's property was made, March 19, 1695-6.

Also, in the Red Book, the following entries of land in Simsbury belonging to John Humphries, viz.:

"one percell of Land on the east syde the Rivr given him by ye Inhabitants of Symsbury on the playne at Weatouge wher his House now stands, which percell of Land conteynes seven Acc<sup>rs</sup> two Rood be it more or less & is thirty perch in Breadth & forty perches in Length; abutts easterly on the High way Northerly on Nicholas Gossard his Lot westerly on the commons southerly on ye commons the Lyn between ye sd John Humphries and Nicholas Gossard runs west and by North. (Page 46).

"one percel more," &c—"which sd land granted was six Acres—the first parcell laid out was by estimation Three Acres one roode and seventeen perches which sd percell of land is situate up ye Hill against Weatoug Houses Northwardly abutts on a certain tract of land laid out to Mr. Samuell Stone, southward it abutteth on a certain parcell of Land which Andrew Hilliard bought of Josiah Clarke; east on ye foot of the Mountains west one the Commons the Breadth Twenty two rodds ye length Twenty-five rodds—the Remynder of the Six Acres was laid out with the six Acres yt is layd out Southerly of Andrew Hilliards land Given him ye sd John Humphries by ye Tounne of Simsbury in company with his Brother Sam<sup>ll</sup> Humphries and layd out March 16th, 1685 or 86. (coppyed.)"

"Land belonging to John Humphry, which is, in quantity, with the remaynder of the first grante of six acres, and the second grant which was according to his Grant six acres being layd in one Intire peace is 9 acres and ten perches be it more or less, the breadth of said nine acres is Twenty one Roddes the length is seventy rodds; the sd land abutts North syd on Elias Gillit south on Sam<sup>l</sup> Humphrey, his six acres lott the westerly end fals on a litl Brook that runnes down the Hill and abutt on ye commons east end abutts on Comons layd out March 16 1685-86." (Page 45.)

"There is one parcell more of land in Simsbury, belonging to John Humphery situated westward of hoppe meadow undr the West

Jan. 14, 1674, the Great Pond was granted to a company, one of whom was "John Humphries," on condition that they should drain it in three years, else it should return to the town.

May, 1677, he was one of ten petitioners, residents of Simsbury, who prayed the General Court that the taxes raised for public charges might "be levied only upon lans," in view of the fact that their town had suffered, in the recent Indian War, more heavily than the other plantations in the Colony; see ante.

Nov. 22, 1682, he was chosen "fence-viewer," and again, Dec. 17, 1684, with John Moses, "whos ranges of fence to view are on both sides of the riuer from Hopp brook to Farmington bounds;" also March 15, 1694-5, "John Humphrie, Sen<sup>r</sup>. was chosen fence viewer for East side."

In May, 1683, he was one of 32 who signed an agreement to "cast lots to see where the meeting-house shall stand."

Dec. 31, 1685, John Slater, Joshua Holcomb, and "John Humphries" were chosen a committee "to run the town bownds." Aug. 14, 1685, he was one of a committee of nine appointed to procure a minister. He was also one of a committee appointed by the town to join a committee of the Gen<sup>l</sup> Court to measure certain town bounds, which they did Dec. 7, 1688.

In 1693, "sergt. John Vmphy" was on the town list; in the town rate for this year appears "Sergt John Humphries, 16s. 6d." 1696, in Dudley Woodbridge's (the minister's) rate, Sergt. John was assessed £1. 10. 5.; in the Town rate the same year, £0. 7. 7. 1.; June 20, 1697, he signed an agreement about the minister's wood.

He died 14 Jan., 1697-8, aged 47. The inventory of his estate, as exhibited by his eldest son John,<sup>3</sup> who, with Samuel,<sup>2</sup> brother of the deceased, was appointed administrator, is dated January 14th,* 1697-8, and amounts to £266. "The Relicss of sergt John Humphry's are Seuen vizt John, Thomas, Nathaniell, Samuell and Joseph Humphryes. His daughters two Vizt Mary and Abigaile Humphrys." (Hartford Probate Records, VI., 12, reverse pp. 30, 31, 32.) Another inventory, (in Simsbury Probate Records, II., 48,) occupies a page, mentioning fifteen acres of land bought of his father, cattle, corn, "3 guns, pistoll & holbard," "carpenter's and cooper's tools in shop," etc., amounting in all to £241-5-6. Samuel Humphries was one of the appraisers.

"John Vmphies, son of John, deceased, of Simsbury, was empowered to confirm a division of land and housing agreed upon between his father and Samuel V. in the life-time of his father, &c., &c., May 12th, 1698.—Conn. Col. Records.

"Mountain also the said land was given to ye sd J. H., by the inhabitants of Simsbury at twice and sd land belongs to him the sd J. H." &c., "the first grant was layd out but the Recorde being lost by fire there being a second grant to the sd J. H. the grants were laid out in one Intire parcell as foloweth. the first buttment was set by ye spruce swamp at the southerly end of said swamp at a whit oak; from wch sd whit oak measured Northwest sixty six rodds to another whit oak—which was sot for the buttment of the first grant then turned the square west and by north and measured to a stooping Tree that standeth on the southerly syd the brooke fifty rodds from which said stooping tree turned the square N. & by E., & measured to ye Mountain forty seven rods. then markt a chesnut Tree from whence turning the squar more eastwardly measured to Saml H's Bounds and found it fifty five rodds seting a stake and stones, at the east end of the lot it butted upon the spruce swamp and from his first buttment at the southerly end of the spruce swamp measured seventy five rods for the breadth where was a small whit oake marked which is a burnt tree that stands for a parting stake between ye said John H. and his brother Samuel which said land thus bounded contaynes by estimation 31 acres and 2 rods, be it more or less." (Page 45.)

"There is one parcell Marsh land on Hoppe brooke given him by the toune of Simsbury, being scituate on the second branch of Hoppe Brook: this sd land being given to ye said John Humphrys, &c."—"the end comes over the southerly branch of sd brook which comes thereabout into the second branch of sd Hoppe Brook, the breadth is seventeen rodd and so it is at the west end of said lot the length of sd lot is 49 rodds—the quantity of said land is by estimation foure acres three Rood and Twenty three perches be it more or less." (Page 45.)

"There is one parcell more belonging to John Humphries, &c. which sd piece of land is scituate on that branch of hoppe brook called the south branch which branch comes from ye west mountains and said brooke was set by the Name of onion Broke, by reason of the many wild onions that grew there the said land being a little distant from the west mountain: the first butments was at the west end measuring over thawrt ye sd Tract of land upon a north Northeast lyne found it fourteen rodds, measured from thence east ward down the brook for the length of sixty rodds the breadth at ye east end is 28 rods and runns from the corner bound on the north syd ye lot south south west ye sd parcel of land and is estimated seven acres three roods & Twenty perches, be it more or less. abutts wholly on ye commons." 29. Deacon John<sup>3</sup> Humphrey, [22] (Sergt. John<sup>2</sup> Michael<sup>1</sup>) was born 18 Nov., 1671, in Simsbury, Ct. He married, 6 July, 1699, Sarah (widow of John Mills, and dau. of John, Sen.) Pettibone.‡ She was born in 1665, and died 3 Apr., 1748, æ. 83 years.** They settled in Simsbury, where he was an esteemed and active citizen; was deacon of the Congregational church in that town. He died 31 Dec., 1732, æ. 61.**

We obtain the following in relation to Dea. John<sup>3</sup> Humphrey from the Simsbury Records: Nov. 14, 1687, "John Humphries Junior had 20 acres granted, under the mountains, north of Mr. Stone's grant." He was then 16 years of age. "John Humphries sold his house lot at Hop Meadow to Sargt. Buel," deed written "in 1695 in the 7th year of the reign of King William," but not signed till May 27, 1700. Town rate for 1696, "John Humphrey, Jr., 0-2-3-3,"; Dudley Woodbridge's rate for the same year (the minister's rate),—"Jno Humphry Jr. 0-9-7." [May 13, 1697, a fine of 40 shillings was imposed on Jno Humphrey, of Simsbury, by the General Assembly, for taking down some part of the common fence.—Conn. Col. Records.] Jan. 26, 1698-9, "John & Thomas Humphries had 30 acres granted on the pine plain between the river and the west mountain." April, 1704, John<sup>3</sup> had land surveyed, also, April 16, 1707,—"land which was laid out long ago." May, 6, 1707, he signed an agreement, with many others, "to carry on the copper mines." [See Fam. 17, S.<sup>2</sup> Also, foot-note to Fam. 2, S.<sup>2</sup>] Sept. 6, 1726, "John Humphris Senr" gave a deed to son Benajah, which was witnessed by "John Humphry, Jr."; also a deed to his son John (date not known); and April 8, 1731, to "daughter Hannah, wife of Joseph Case, Jr."

FAMILY 4.

44. Thomas<sup>3</sup> Humphrey, [24] (Sergt. John<sup>2</sup>, Michael<sup>1</sup>,) was born 1 Sept. 1676, in Simsbury, Ct., and baptized 6 Feb. 1697-8.† He married Hannah (dau. and only child of Andrew) Hillyer, and settled in Simsbury; was a farmer.

The Simsbury Records give the following: Dec. 28, 1698. "Tho. Humphrie had a grant of two acres of land as a home lot, that was formerly giuen to John dibble. he is to build on it within the space of 4 years, or it returns to the towns disposal." It was at "Weatouge, on the east side of the ruer." Thomas<sup>3</sup> was 22 years old at that date. Jan. 26, 1698-9, "John & Thomas Humphries had 30 acres granted on the pine plain, between the ruer and the west mountain." April 28, 1702, "Thomas Humphry witnessed Jere Gyllet's deed to John Humphries." May 6, * "Micah humphris third son of John humphris of Simsbury, was b. Nov. 20, 1703."—Simsbury Records. Probably the name should have been read Mical.

† John Humphrey, of Simsbury, was appointed guardian over Thomas Humphrey, a minor.—Hartford Prob. Records.

1707, he signed an agreement, with many others, "to carry on the copper mines." [See Fam. 17, S.<sup>2</sup>]. June 10, 1710, he "mortgaged land in Simsbury to Elizabeth Wilson, widow and shop-keeper, of Hartford."

He paid rates in 1699, 1700, 1701; held various town offices: Jan. 27, 1700-1, was chosen "waywarden or surveyor of highways" for the East side of the river; Dec. 25, 1706, collector; Jan. 8, 1706-7, constable; Dec. 13, 1709, fence viewer for the south end of the town of Simsbury; December, 1713, was again chosen constable; Jan. 9, 1717-18, the "Town Remitts the heirs of Thomas Humphris from Gathering the Ratts of John Jaxon which was dew to the minister in the year 1712."

In giving the amount of rods of fence on the east side of Farmington river, the Humphreys are mentioned as follows: "Thomas Humphris, 37 1-2 rods; Samuel Humphris sen, 11 rods; Lt. Humphris, 40 rods; John Humphris, 08 rods; Samuel Humphris John's son, 27 1-2 rods; J<sup>o</sup> Humphris, 70 rods." There is no date, but as "Samuel<sup>3</sup> Humphrey, Johns son," died Sept. 20, 1725, it is supposed to have been prior to that time.

He died 23 Oct. 1714, æ. 38 years. The inventory of his estate was taken 17 Nov. 1714, —amount £211-6-5; mention made of carpenters' tools and "the home lot that was his fathers." His widow, who married again after his death,* neglected to take the letters of administration which had been granted to her (April 4, 1715); so that, 4 Feb., 1717-18, letters were granted to her husband, Dea. James Cornish. In the final distribution of the estate, made 25 Nov., 1726, by Joseph Case, Lt. Samuel Humphreys and Samuel Humphreys, Jr., the widow received £38-8-7, the son Thomas, £59-18-6, (being his double portion) and each of the other children, £29-19-3. (Hartford Probate Records, viii., 246; ix., 34, 50; x., 123, 137.)

Children:

45. I. DOSA,<sup>4</sup> b. 14 Jan. 1707; Thomas Humphrey had a son born to him January 14 "& that day dyed."—Supposed to be Dosa.
46. II. THOMAS,<sup>4</sup> d. 13 May, 1765, æ. 57; m. Abigail Collyer. FAMILY 12.
47. III. DAMARIS,<sup>4</sup> m. John Pettibone, Jr., of Simsbury, Conn., 24 Dec. 1723, (Simsbury Records.) Child;
48. Charity<sup>5</sup>, b. 1744; m. 22 Sept. 1763, Sylvanus<sup>4</sup> Humphrey, and resided in Simsbury, Ct. [See Fam. 21, S.<sup>2</sup>] She m. (2) Elisha Cornish, and had several children; one son res. in Onondaga County, N. Y. Giles, son of Elisha and Charity Cornish, was born Apr. 8, 1780.—Simsbury Records. He is said to have resided in Canandaigua, N. Y. Her 3d husband was Dea. Amasa Case; † and in the Hop Meadow Burying-ground is the following inscription: "Charity, Consort of Dea. Amasa Case, d. Oct. 25, 1803, aged 59 years. 'When such friends part 'tis the survivor dies.'"
49. IV. HANNAH,<sup>4</sup> m. (1) William Moses, 20 Nov., 1738, (Simsbury Records) by whom she had a son and two daughters; m. (2) Benjamin (son of John and Sarah Pettibone) Mills, and twin brother of Joseph Mills; resided in Simsbury, Conn.

* Dea. James Cornish and Hannah Humphries, "widow and Relick" to Thomas Humphries, Dec'd, both of Simsbury, were m. April 25, 1715. The Deacon's wife Elisabeth had d. Jan. 25, 1713-14. By his second wife Hannah, he had son Gabriel, b. May 25, 1716; and one dau. Jemima, b. Nov. 20, 1718.—Town Records. James and Hannah Cornish, "for loue and affection to Thomas Humphris," deed him land at Turkey Hills, May 28, 1729. February 10, 1735-6, Thomas Humphrey deeds land to "his mother Hanna Cornish, wife of Dea. James Cornish." January 4, 1743-4, Hannah Cornish, mother of Gabriel, deeds land to him.

† In Goodwin's Genealogical Notes we find the following: Amasa Case, b. 18 Oct. 1731, son of James and Esther (Fithin) Case, of Terry's Plain, Simsbury, Ct., d. 18 Aug. 1824. He married five wives. * * * His fourth wife was widow Charity Cornish, daughter of John Pettibone, 3d. She died October 5, 1803, aged 53. His 5th wife was widow Sarah Graham, dau. of Benajah Humphrey. [See Fam. 9 (104) J.] It will be observed that the date of death of the 4th wife of Dea. Amasa Case, as here given, differs from the inscription in Hop Meadow Burying-ground; and the name is given "widow Charity Cornish." [See foot-note to Fam. 5, S.] This is explained by the statement that widow Charity (Pettibone) Humphrey m. (2) Elisha Cornish; and had a son Giles. Elisha, b. 7 Dec. 1748, son of Elisha and Charity Cornish, Simsbury Records; was he the husband of Charity? Elisha Cornish is mentioned as one of the children of Elisha and Hepzibah (Humphrey) Cornish, who were married 25 Sept. 1740. [See Fam. 5, S.] There may be some confusion of records on account of similarity of names and dates in different families.

50. V. MARTHA,<sup>4</sup> m. Jonathan Pettibone, and resided in Simsbury, Conn. James Cornish was appointed guardian over Martha Humphrey, a minor of Simsbury. (Hartford Probate Records, x., 125). Issue:

56. vi. Abijah<sup>5</sup>, m. (1) Dorcas Cornish; m. (2) Ruth (dau. of Abel) Pettibone; by 1st wife, he had three sons and three daughters.

FAMILY 5.

57. Nathaniel<sup>3</sup> Humphrey, [26] (Sergt. John,<sup>2</sup> Michael,<sup>1</sup>) was born 3 Mch., 1680, in Simsbury, Conn.; and baptized 6 Feb., 1697-8. He married, 14 March, 1708-9 (Hartford Records), Agnes (dau. of Samuel* and Sarah) Spencer, of Hartford, Ct. She died 11 Apr. 1773, æ. 84. He resided in Hartford until his death, which occurred in December, 1711, at the age of 31.

April 13, 1708, "Nathaniel Humphry of Hartford, smith," deeds land in Simsbury, "at Weatogue, East Side," to his brother "Thomas Humphry, carpenter." Said land is "a part of the Home lot of their father, which was distributed to them;" mentions brother "John Humphry."

Nathaniel Humphreys, of Hartford, was one of the creditors ordered to be paid by State, by order of Governor and Council, August 8, 1711, for goods "bought impressed or taken in Hartford County for use of expedition to Canada." His claim was £0-6s.-8d.—Col. Rec. of Conn., 1706-1716.

The inventory of his estate was exhibited 7 April, 1712, letters of administration having been granted to his widow, 7 Jan. 1711-12. (Hartford Probate Records, viii., 44, 68, 100). His widow, in Oct., 1715, married Lieut. John (son of Samuel) Hubbard, of Hartford, born in Aug., 1691, by whom she had several children.†

Children:

58. I. DOSITHEUS,<sup>4</sup>† b. 4 Dec., 1709; d. before 2 Aug., 1763; m. 23 May, 1734, (Hartford Records), Anne Griswold, of Windsor, Conn. She was born 28 May, 1708, dau. of Benjamin and Elizabeth (Cook) Griswold, of W.** See Appendix II., for possible descendants of Dositheus<sup>4</sup> Humphrey.

* Samuel Spencer was the son of William Spencer, one of the first settlers of Hartford. For genealogy of his descendants, see Goodwin's Genealogical Notes, p. 310. It is worthy of notice that Sarah Spencer, sister of Samuel, married, about 1657, John Case, so many of whose descendants have intermarried with the Humphreys family. See p. 275, idem, for record of John Case.

† See Goodwin's Gen. Notes and Stiles' Hist. of Ancient Windsor, for descendants.

‡ His name is found entered on the Hartford Records, as "Dorotheus" in connection with his date of birth. This is evidently a mistake, as in the later entries it is written Dositheus.

** Stiles' Hist. of Ancient Windsor. In Hartford Town Records (v., 610,) is a deed, dated 20 Sept. 1731, from Joseph Cook, of Hartford, to his kinsman Dositheus Humphrey, of the same town, "in consideration of Love and affection." Dositheus Humphrey, also, purchased land, Mch. 27, 1738-9, of Robert Webster (ibid., vi. 298); also, Mch. 12, 1760, of several Hookers and Goodriches, (ibid., x., 11); and (ibid., xi., 309.) Oct. 5, 1761, sells one acre to Daniel Steele—from which it is evident that he was a resident of Hartford. The inventory of his estate, wherein he is described as "late of Hartford," is dated 2 August, 1763, and is large, but not footed; administration was granted to Daniel Butler, Benjamin Payne and George Lord, July 30, 1763, and distribution of estate ordered, 26 May, 1764, to Ann (his widow) of her right of dower, "as should least discommode the creditors." (Hartford Probate Records, xix., 149-79, 112: xx., 16).

The Simsbury Records give the following:—May 19, 1739, "Dositheus Humphrey, Cyprian Nichols Jr., and Agness Nichols, wife of said Cyprian Nichols, all of Hartford, deeded to Benajah Humphrey, of Simsbury, 28 acres of land on Mill Swamp brook." [This was probably land which had helonged to their father Nathaniel Humphrey.] They also quitclaimed, at the same time, an undivided interest in land "surveyed unto John Humphrey of said Simsbury, Long since Deceased & Now Lyeth undivided amongst the heirs of said John Humphrey."

FAMILY 6.

64. Captain Samuel<sup>3</sup> Humphrey, [27] (Sergt. John<sup>2</sup>, Michael<sup>1</sup>,) was born 1684, in Simsbury, Ct. He married Mary (dau. of James) Eno, of Windsor, Conn., and settled in Simsbury. Mary Eno, dau. of James, Jr., and Abigail (Bissell) Eno, was born 5 May, 1691.—Stiles' Hist. of Ancient Windsor.

We find on the Simsbury Records as follows: April 29, 1706, "Samuel Humphreies son of Sargt John Humphries had land surveyed at Weatague;" Jan., 8, 1706-7, deeded land which came to him from his father, deceased; 1707, witnessed a deed; Dec., 29, 1712, had a grant of two acres of land on the easterly side of his house-lot; October, 1717, was made freeman; July 8, 1719, a deed was acknowledged before "me Sam<sup>l</sup> Humphris Johns son Justice a peace;" Dec., 22, 1719, had three acres granted for a home lot.†

He held various town offices; was chosen constable, Dec., 18, 1710, Dec., 13, 1711-12, Dec., 6, 1714, Dec., 15, 1715, and Dec., 18, 1716; lister, Dec., 26, 1717; selectman, Dec., 22, 1719; had ear-mark Jan., 1716-17.

He died 20 Sept., 1725, aged 41 years.‡ The inventory of his estate, taken Nov., 5, 1725, but not footed, mentions lands, carpenters' tools, etc. (Hartford Probate Records, x., 328-330.) Administration was granted to his widow, and subsequently to Joseph Cornish,** whom, on the 5th May, 1726, she had married, (Simsbury Records); the account of administration of estate was accepted Oct. 5, 1731, (Hartford Probate Records, x., 107, 143; xi., 54, 60; xiv., 1.) Simsbury Records give the following:—Joseph Cornish and Mary Cornish, administrators on the estate of Samuel Humphrey of Simsbury, decd, by virtue of Act of Gen. Assembly passed May 12, 1726, sell land to Samuel Smith Apr. 5, 1727; witnessed by Samuel Humphrey.

Receipts (in Hartford Prob. Rec., xiv., 1) dated Mch., 5, 1739-40, show that the estate of "Capt. Samuel" passed into the following hands, viz.: Hekiah Humphrey; James Hillyer, Mary Hillyer; Isaac Pettibone, Hepzibah Pettibone; Joseph Smith, Lucy Smith; James Hillyer, Jr., guardian for Bathsheba Humphrey."

† In order to a proper understanding of these many instances in which grants of land are made to individuals by Towns, in lots of two acres, seven acres, or larger lots, also designating them as meadow, plow or wood, or swamp land, it should be remembered that in the early colonial days, the town or settlement authorities bought the land of the Indians, as a commune, or in common, following the ancient Danish, German or very early English usage. By this custom, each of the original grantees or purchasers became the owner of the town lot, falling to him by lot, and his proportionate part or allotment of all meadow, tillage, swamp, forest, or other outlying portion of land within the original bounds. At first these outlying lands were fenced, tilled, or pastured in common—and the results divided pro rata.—Later, as the fear of Indian disturbances vanished, these outlying lands were conveyed in severalty to the original purchasers or their heirs, or for good and sufficient cause, by the town or borough authorities, as in these instances.

* From the Town Records of Simsbury we have: "Sam<sup>ll</sup> humphris son of John humphris, his first son born January the twenty-third 17-8 [1707-8] and departed this life aprill the seuenth 1718." Other entries are: "Samuel Humphris son of Sam<sup>ll</sup> Humphris deceased. His third daughter Lucia was borne Aprill the Second 1723;" "Hezekiah Humphris second son of Samuell Humphris sene was born January the thirtieth 1718 or 19;" "Mary Humphris the second child daughter to Sam<sup>ll</sup> Humphris, John's son, b. May 3, 1716." On examination of these several records it seems that the name of the son is not given in the first entry, but the name of the father and grandfather. Capt. Samuel is often described as "John's son" to distinguish him from other Samuel Humphreys. But when the date of birth of Lucia is entered "Samuel son of Samuel" is said to be deceased.

† March 29, 1745, Hezekiah Humphrey gave a deed to his brother Isaac Case and Bathsheba his wife, "of land that belonged to our honored father Capt. Samuel Humphrey late of Simsbury, decd." She was not yet 21 years old.—Simsbury Records.

87. Joseph<sup>3</sup> Humphrey, [28] (Sergt. John<sup>2</sup>, Michael<sup>1</sup>,) married Abigail Griffin,† who died 17 Mch., 1760.‡

January 9, 1710-11, Joseph Humphrey had three acres of land granted, "southwest of John Drake's lot & west of the way upon the little brook that runs by Tho. Barber's house; he to build a house on said lot within four years or it to go back to the town."

"Joseph Humphris sold 3 acres & a hous to John Drake, on west side of Riuer at hop meadow on south side of Drake's brook, December 26, 1715-16." (Simsbury Records.)

He had an ear-mark for his cattle in 1712 and 1715. Mr. Humphrey seems to have resided in Simsbury after this date, as records of his children are found there.

92. Esquire John<sup>4</sup> Humphrey, [30] (Dea. John<sup>3</sup>, Sergt. John<sup>2</sup>, Michael<sup>1</sup>,) was born 17 Mch., 1700-1, in Simsbury, Ct. He married, 15 June, 1721, (Simsbury Records) Lydia Reed, perhaps dau. of Josiah and Hannah (Amsdale) Reed, of Windsor; and settled in Simsbury, Conn., where the births of their children are recorded. He was a prominent man in that town; was Justice of the Peace from 1735 to 1760, and many deeds were acknowledged before him about 1740-42; and also witnessed by John and Anna Humphrey; was appointed of the Quorum 1755-1760. He was appointed, by Assembly, 1756, 1st Lieut. of 1st Reg., 7th Company; afterwards became a captain in the Militia; was chosen Town Clerk in 1732; was Judge of the Hartford County Court, from 1758 to 1760 inclusive, and a representative to the General Assembly of the Colony, (with the exception of 1755, '56, '58 and '59) from May, 1733, till his death, at New Haven, Conn.,

† January 1, 1711, Joseph Humphrey joined in an agreement to divide land of "our honored father John Griffin," from which it seems that he married Mr. John Griffin's daughter. The signers were: "John Griffin, Thomas Griffin, Ephr. Griffin, Nath<sup>l</sup> Griffin, Ruth Griffin, Joseph Humphry, Elias Gillit, Mary Hoskins."

Sergt. John Griffin of Simsbury, Ct., (grandfather of Joseph Humphrey) married 13 May, 1647, Anna Bancroft, and had the following children: (1) Hannah, b. 4 July, 1649; m. Sergt. John Humphrey [Fam. 2, J.]; (2) Mary, b. 1 March, 1651; (3) Sarah, b. 25 Dec. 1654; (4) John, b. 20 Oct. 1656. About the year 1760, he removed to Norfolk, Ct., where he was chosen deacon of the church at its organization. He also represented Norfolk in the General Assembly; was selectman, justice of the peace, and Town Clerk from 1760 until his death, which occurred in 1778, at the age of 75 years.

FAMILY 11.

144. Rev. Daniel<sup>4</sup> Humphreys, [43] (Dea. John,<sup>3</sup> Sergt. John,<sup>2</sup> Michael,<sup>1</sup>,) was born in 1707, at Simsbury, Ct.; graduated at Yale College in 1732; and became pastor of the First Church of Christ (Congregational) in Derby, Ct., in 1734, having been given a call December 3d, 1733, and the day of ordination having been "appointed for the first Wednesday of March next." This call was accompanied with the offer of a settlement of four hundred pounds, and one hundred pounds salary. The four hundred pounds was given in order that the minister might purchase a farm, which was supposed to furnish a considerable portion of his living. It is therefore probable that the farm-house formerly owned by Mr. Humphreys and, in 1870, in the possession of Mr. Samuel Sherwood, gr. gr.-son of Rev. Richard Mansfield, D. D., for many years rector of St. James' Church in Derby, was built soon after this date. The first Episcopal church was located almost directly in front of this residence, known in later times as the "Capt. Vose Place." [See Fam. 27, J.<sup>2</sup>] The following entry was made by Mr. Humphreys in the oldest book of church records now belonging to the First Church, having on its first page, "An account of church administration, by Daniel Humphreys, December, 1735."

"March 6, 1734, then the pastoral charge of the Church of Christ in Derby was committed to me." His salary was subsequently raised to one hundred and twenty pounds, and, in 1739, to one hundred and forty pounds, or four hundred and seventy dollars.

During the earlier years of his pastorate, difficulties were encountered which arose from a difference of opinion as to ecclesiastical order, this being a dissenting church at that time.† We are indebted to the compilers of the History of Derby for this explanation of the condition of affairs:

* Rosannah was born 10 Nov., acc. to Simsbury Records; 20 Nov., acc. to Judge H. H. Barbour. [Fam. 67, S.]

† "The dissenters claimed that a change of heart or actual experience was important in order to the reception of the sacraments, while the "New-way" or "Half-way Covenant" administered baptism to all children whose parents assented to the doctrines of the church, and such parents were regarded as in a half-covenant state with the church. — Hist. of Derby, p. 136. See history of Michael Humphrey, the Emigrant, p. 105.

"After the settlement of Mr. Humphreys and the revival excitements of 1740 and '41, the establishment of the Episcopal church became an easy matter and took some of the old substantial supporters of the Congregational church into it. If the records of the Derby church had been preserved, some things more definite might be learned. In Sprague's Annals Mr. Humphreys is mentioned as one with Dr. Bellamy and others who promoted the revival work in 1740, and it was in consequence of this, doubtless, that he fell into some little trouble as indicated in the following record.

"The following complaint against Mr. Humphreys is recorded, but whether it went any further is not known.

'To the Clerk of the Parish or Society in Derby to which the Reverend Mr. Daniel Humphrey doth belong these may inform that the said Daniel Humphrey, contrary to the true intent and meaning of a law of the Colony of Connecticut entitled an act for Regulating abuses and correcting disorders in Ecclesiastical affairs, has presumed to preach in the Parish or First Society of New Haven.

'Dated at NEW HAVEN, Sept. 24, 1742.

'Signed per

SAMUEL BISHOP, Justice of the Peace.

JOHN HUBBARD, Justice of the Peace."

A violent opposition was made in the county of New Haven to the "New Lights," as they were called, and to the religious revival which had arisen in the country. "In 1741, when the Grand Council was to sit at Guilford, the Association drew up several resolutions to be laid before the Council; among which was the following: 'That for a minister to enter into another minister's parish, and preach, or administer the seals of the covenant, without the consent of, or in opposition to the settled minister of the parish, is disorderly; notwithstanding, if a considerable number of the people of the parish are desirous to hear another minister preach, provided the same be orthodox, and sound in the faith, and not notoriously faulty in censuring other persons, or guilty of any other scandal, we think it ordinarily advisable for the minister of the parish to gratify them, by giving his consent, upon their suitable application to him for it, unless neighboring ministers should advise him to the contrary.' Mr. Humphreys of Derby had preached to a Baptist society, and on that account was soon after deprived of a seat in the association."

"In 1744, a church was formed in Salisbury, on the principles of the Cambridge Platform, and the town and church made choice of Mr. Jonathan Lee for their pastor; and, among other gentlemen, made choice of the Rev. Mr. Humphreys of Derby, the Rev. Mr. Leavenworth of Waterbury, and the Rev. Mr. Todd of Northbury, to assist in his ordination. He had received a liberal education at Yale College, and studied divinity under the care of Mr. Williams of Lebanon; was of a good moral character, and a zealous preacher of the Calvinistic doctrines. The association suspended these gentlemen from all associational communion, for assisting in the ordination of Mr. Lee, because he and the church had adopted the Cambridge Platform, and were not on the constitutional establishment of the colony.

"Therefore, Mr. Humphreys was twice suspended from the fellowship of the association, for holding just the views which are now generally entertained by Congregational ministers and churches."

From the records, which consisted of baptisms and the admission of members to the church, made by Mr. Humphreys, we learn that although the church at the time of his settlement was a dissenting church, or opposed to the Half-way Covenant, yet, after 1756, that method of receiving members was practiced until March, 1783, when it was "voted that they would not go on in the practice."

September 16th, 1777, "Rev. Mr. Daniel Humphrey" took the oath of fidelity to the United States, thus declaring his "loyalty to the new nation."

As to slavery the following is recorded: "December 31, 1781. Voted that the selectmen are desired to give the Rev. Mr. Daniel Humphreys a certificate of liberty to manumit his servants Cambridge and Cale his wife."

* "Madam Humphreys, consort of the Rev. Daniel Humphreys, and the mother of the ambassador, was a Riggs, and descendant of Edward Riggs, one of the first settlers of Derby between 1655 and 1660. She often used to speak of it as the family tradition that the judges who sometimes secreted themselves at The Cave and Sperry's Farm, also for some time secreted themselves at Derby, in the house of her [great] grandfather, Mr. Edward Riggs; whose house was fortified or palisadoed, to secure it from the Indians; there being, 1660, perhaps fewer than half a dozen English families there in the woods, ten or a dozen miles from all other English settlements, and they all lodged in this fortified house. They might probably shift their residences, especially in the dangerous summer of 1661, to disappoint and deceive pursuivants and avoid discovery. This tradition is preserved in the Riggs and Humphreys families to this day."—Pres. Stiles' Judges; see, also, Hist. of Derby, p. 24; and pp. 753-6, for history of the Riggs family.

These two records are brief, but sufficiently long to show by what spirit he was actuated—that he himself loved liberty, and desired that it should be enjoyed by his fellow-men. It is stated, in the History of Derby, that the leading men of that town, “including ministers of the gospel, held slaves and thought it no sin, while Connecticut was a slave state;” but, from an early day, they were required by law to teach their slaves to read; and that “the slave-trade was carried on in Derby both for shipping purposes as well as the home market.” It appears from Mr. Humphreys’ course of action that one minister in the town may have had some doubts, if not strong convictions, in relation to this matter.

Mr. Humphreys was very happy in his domestic relations. He married, 18 April, 1739, Sarah (Riggs) Bowers, b. 17 Dec., 1711, youngest child of Capt. John and Elizabeth (Tomlinson) Riggs, of Derby. [See Chart II.; The Riggs Family.] At the time of her marriage to Mr. Humphreys she was the widow of John Bowers, of Derby, to whom she was married 22 Nov., 1732. They had two children: Nathaniel, who died 6 May, 1738; and Sarah, b. 18 Aug., 1736, d. 3 Dec., 1738. Mr. Bowers died 26 Jan., 1738. “During forty-eight years she was known as ‘Lady Humphreys’, and a more perfect ornament to that title was probably not known in the community. Elegant in personal appearance, refined in education and manners, she became, through President Stiles of Yale College, celebrated for her intelligence and knowledge of Derby history. It was at her great grandfather’s house that the Judges were sheltered from the English officers, fifty years before her birth, and yet she was quite familiar, when over fifty years of age, with the minute details of the friendship rendered to the Judges, and with the early history of Derby.”

Moreover, “there exist a number of prominent evidences that the family, among themselves, were warm in their attachments, sympathetic and true-hearted, and the outside style was not an appearance put on, but that it sprung from a true, generous nature. These statements apply not only to General Humphreys in his life-long familiarity with society, but equally if not more emphatically to the other members of the family. There was one minister’s family that did not, by far, produce the worst boys in the community.” Tradition says: that as the Rev. Daniel<sup>4</sup> Humphreys and his wife entered the church on the Sabbath, the whole congregation arose and stood, in accordance with an old-time custom, until he had shown her to their pew, ascended the pulpit, laid aside his hat and seated himself, when they resumed their seats.

In 1783, Mr. HUMPHREYS being quite advanced in years, a colleague was chosen to assist him in his ministerial labors. “The council ‘was convened by letters missive, at the house of Charles French, Esq., in Derby, July 1, 1783, with a view to the ordination of Mr. Martin Tullar to the work of the gospel ministry. Present, the Rev. Messrs. Daniel Humphreys, Mark Leavenworth, Benjamin Trumbull, Benjamin Wildman, David Brownson, Jonathan Edwards, John Keep, David Ely. Delegates: Mr. Isaac Brownson from the First church in Waterbury, Dea. Jonathan Mitchell from the church in Southbury, Dea. Thomas Clark from Oxford, Dea. Daniel Lyman from White Haven, Capt. Stephen Dewey from Sheffield and Dea. Timothy Peck from Bethany. The Rev. Mark Leavenworth was chosen moderator, and Benjamin Trumbull scribe.’ In the services on the next day, the sermon was preached by the Rev. John Keep, and ‘the imposition of hands was performed by Messrs. Humphreys, Leavenworth, Trumbull and Brownson.’” Mr. Humphreys filled the position of senior pastor only four years, as his death occurred in 1787, at the age of 80 years. From the records of his labors still preserved “he was evidently a diligent, faithful, earnest minister and pastor, and served his day and generation very acceptably, according to the style of the times.”

“The following statement was recorded by John Humphreys, the town clerk at the time, and is probably a very faithful, as it is a very interesting, sketch of the character and life of his father:—

'The Rev. DANIEL HUMPHREYS died at Derby on Lord's day morning, the second day of September, A. D., 1787.

'For more than half a century he was the established minister of the First society in said town. His funeral was attended on Tuesday, when, the corpse being carried into the meeting-house, the Rev. Dr. Edwards began divine service with prayer, which was succeeded by singing a favorite psalm of the deceased, the seventy-first. Then the Rev. Mr. Leavenworth preached a sermon from 2 Tim., iv. 6-8, to a numerous and mournful auditory. After which was sung an anthem taken from the seventh chapter of Job. The procession then moved to the grave and performed the interment with every mark of affectionate respect for so pious and venerable a character.

'The Rev. Mr. HUMPHREYS having received a liberal education at Yale College, and devoted his future days to books and contemplation, his mind was embellished with human literature, but the study of theology was his favorite employment. He was possessed of a masculine understanding, particularly calculated to reason and distinguish. His manner, instead of being tinctured with the austere gloom of superstition, exhibited that hilarity which made him the delight of his acquaintances. A consciousness of intentional rectitude was productive of cheerfulness and serenity, a desire of making others happy was the effect of philanthropy and religion. This conspired to give him a peculiar facility and dignity of behaviour on every occasion. The honorable discharge of all the duties of the domestic, the social, the sacred functions, and the undeviating practice of unaffected piety through a long life will be the best comment on his creed and complete his character.

'Mrs. Sarah Humphreys, the affectionate wife of his youth and the tender companion of his advanced age, died the Lord's day, July 29, 1787, A. D.; five weeks before him.'"

Their monument, in the old grave-yard at Up Town, Derby, presents the following epitaph:*

The REVD DANIEL HUMPHRIES died Sept 2 1787 in the 81st year of his age: For more than half a century he was the established minister of the first Society in this town. Mrs Sarah Humphries the affectionate wife of his youth and the tender Companion of his advanced age died July 29 1787 just five weeks before him.

The seasons thus

As ceaseless round a jarring world they roll
Still find them happy and consenting spring
Sheds her own rosy garland on their heads
Till evening comes at last serene and mild
When after the long vernal day of life
Enamored more as more remembrance swells
With many a proof of recollected love
Together down they sink in social sleep
Together freed their gentle spirits fly
To scenes where love and bliss immortal reign.

ground. He probably was afterward settled in Chester, where he died in 1814;* and she returned to Humphreysville to reside. They had no children. We here add the poem to which allusion has been made:†

ELEGY ON THE BURNING OF FAIRFIELD, IN CONNECTICUT;

WRITTEN IN 1779, ON THE SPOT WHERE THAT TOWN STOOD.

Ye smoking ruins, marks of hostile ire,
Ye ashes warm, which drink the tears that flow,
Ye desolated plains, my voice inspire,
And give soft music to the song of woe.

How pleasant, Fairfield, on th' enraptur'd sight
Rose thy tall spires, and op'd thy social halls!
How oft my bosom beat with pure delight,
At yonder spot where stand the darken'd walls!

But there the voice of mirth resounds no more,
A silent sadness through the streets prevails:
The distant main alone is heard to roar,
And hollow chimnies hum with sullen gales—

Save where scorch'd elms th' untimely foliage shed,
Which, rustling, hovers round the faded green—
Save where, at twilight, mourners frequent tread,
'Mid recent graves o'er desolation's scene.

How chang'd the blissful prospect, when compar'd,
These glooms funereal, with thy former bloom,
Thy hospitable rights when Tryon shar'd,
Long ere he seal'd thy melancholy doom!

That impious wretch, with coward voice decreed
Defenceless domes and hallow'd fanes to dust;
Beheld, with sneering smile, the wounded bleed,
And spurr'd his bands to rapine, blood and lust.

Vain was the widow's, vain the orphan's cry,
To touch his feelings, or to sooth his rage—
Vain the fair drop that roll'd from beauty's eye,
Vain the dumb grief of supplicating age.

Could Tryon hope to quench the patriot flame,
Or make his deeds survive in glory's page?
Could Britons seek of savages the fame,
Or deem it conquest, thus the war to wage?

Yes, Britons! scorn the councils of the skies,
Extend wide havock, spurn th' insulted foes;
Th' insulted foes to tenfold vengeance rise,
Resistance growing as the danger grows.

Red in their wounds, and pointing to the plain,
The visionary shapes before me stand—
The thunder bursts, the battle burns again,
And kindling fires encrimson all the strand.

* According to another account they resided in Geneseo, N. Y., where he died in 1803.

Long dusky wreaths of smoke, reluctant driv'n,
 In black'ning volumes o'er the landscape bend:
 Here the broad splendour blazes high to heav'n,
 There umber'd streams in purple pomp ascend.

In fiery eddies, round the tott'ring walls,
 Emitting sparks, the lighter fragments fly;
 With frightful crash the burning mansion falls,
 The works of years in glowing embers lie.

Tryon, behold thy sanguine flames aspire,
 Clouds ting'd with dyes intolerable bright;
 Behold, well pleas'd, the village wrapt in fire;
 Let one wide ruin glut thy ravish'd sight!

Ere fades the grateful scene, indulge thine eye,
 See age and sickness, tremulously slow,
 Creep from the flames—see babes in torture die,
 And mothers swoon in agonies of woe.

Go, gaze, enraptur'd with the mother's tear,
 The infant's terror, and the captive's pain,
 Where no bold bands can check thy curst career;
 Mix fire with blood on each unguarded plain!

These be thy triumphs! this thy boasted fame!
 Daughters of mem'ry, raise the deathless songs!
 Repeat through endless years his hated name,
 Embalm his crimes, and teach the world our wrongs.

Sarah<sup>5</sup> (Humphreys) Mills married (2) as second wife, 8 March, 1819,* Chipman Swift, Esq. He was born in July, 1750, Lebanon, Ct.; was probably son of Zephaniah Swift, whose monument stands in the grave-yard at Wilmington, Vt. Esq. Swift removed to Wilmington, where he was one of the first settlers about 1770; was a farmer and Justice of the Peace. In 1817, a few years after the death of his first wife, he went to reside in Derby, Ct., with his son Rev. Zephaniah Swift; bought part of the old Holbrook place. In 1882, the Swift homestead was occupied by Urbane Hitchcock (son of Rev. Zephaniah,) Swift. With regard to the second marriage of the only daughter of Rev. Daniel<sup>4</sup> Humphreys we add the following, furnished for the History of Derby by Mrs. Ann S. Stephens, daughter of Mr. John Winterbotham, one of Gen. David<sup>5</sup> Humphreys' partners:

"Mrs. Mills, an aged widow lady when I remember her, was a sister to Colonel Humphreys, and lived in a brown house between Judge Humphreys' dwelling and the church which was then, and is now, one of the most conspicuous objects on the hills. She married, in her old age, Chipman Swift, Esq., father of the Rev. Zephaniah Swift of Derby, and I remember seeing her at the Colonel's rooms, during the wedding festivities, in her bridal dress, a silver-gray pongée silk, trimmed to the knees with narrow rows of black velvet ribbon, while her soft, gray hair was surmounted by a lace cap brightened with pink ribbons." Also, from the History of Derby:—"In personal appearance, style and manners, she was a good illustration of the same in her honored mother, Lady Humphreys. She was, for the times, highly educated, and published a volume of her poems."†

Esq. Swift died 8 March, 1825, aged 75. Mrs. Swift survived her husband only

* On her grave-stone the date of marriage is given March 8, 1819, and on his, May 6, 1819.—Hist. of Derby, p. 813: † p. 625.

Camp Fort Ontario 3rd October 1760
Honored Father and mother my Duty to you and Love and Regards to all my Brothers and Sister Hoping the Goodness of God these may find you and all Friends well as from the Goodness of God they now leave me and all our Tent mates Except Brother Elihu who is now Sick with the Small Pox he was Taken in our Journey from Montreal to Oswego at Fort Wm Augustus or the fortified Island near Swago they he was Taken 22nd Sept<sup>r</sup>
I have not heard how he does to Day but heard he was in a fair way to do well yesterday
Day as his Pox began to Turn the Day before yesterday we Recd your Letters at Swagochy the 23rd Sept<sup>r</sup> in which inform me that you and all friends was in good health as usual which I Rejoice to hear of Brother Elihu was well enough to Read the same and that Day he Lett me Desires I would write to you to Let you know that he was Sick &c I have Nothing very Remarkable to write but of our march and Success on Monday morning the 1st Aug<sup>t</sup> we Sailed from Fort Ontario Saturday the 16th Sept<sup>r</sup> within 9 miles of Swagochy on Sunday morn they sent out their vessel to meet us and to show us the way to our batteries we had no vessels with us bigger than a Race Gally that Carried one 12 Pounder of which we had four they went out to meet the french Shoop and engaged her and after firing Sum considerable Guns they Struck to our Pox Gallees they had 101 men on Board and 10 Guns they had no more vessels then but one that was Run a ground which they could not get off Except one that was not finished as soon as we was master of the Shoop we were ordered to Sail in our Batteries Down to the fort it being on a Island in the middle of the River we Land on each Side of it about 3 miles Swagochy being a small Place on the Side of the River about 3 miles above the Island then we mass our Batteries on each Side and sent the Shoop Down to lie against the fort to Draw their fire that way they sent a considerable fire from one to the other the 23rd our Batteries was Ready and fired on the fort and continued firing and throwing bombs shells till the 25th at 4 o'clock in the afternoon then they beat a parley in the fort and surrendered the fort to us on the Generals own terms to lay Down their arms and march out Prisoners and were sent back to Oswego the 31st Aug<sup>t</sup> we Sailed for Montreal the 6th Sept<sup>r</sup> we came to Seder Point and Land where we found a fine Street of houses but the Indians and a ware all fled into the woods for Shelter whom the General sent word to that if they would come in and take the oath of Leagance to his Britannick Majesty which they did Ready accepted and then came flocking in and went Every man to his work getting in their Harvest and other things and the Indians also came in and made Peace with us and killed English Soldiers in their fort the 8th Sept<sup>r</sup> we came within a mile and half of the City of Montreal without any Resistance that night we lay on our arms and the next Day they Desires a Sea-cession of arms till 12 o'clock which the General granted but they could not agree upon terms that Day in the morning the General sent them word he could not wait any longer for his Troops were a great way from home and they did not intend to wait long to have them Conclude what would be best for them they then Capitulated on the Gen<sup>l</sup> own terms on the 8th Sept<sup>r</sup> the garrison of Regular Troops to be sent to France and to took the oath of Not Taking up arms against his Britannick Majesty During the war or against any of his Allies they this in habitation seemed Glad that we had Taken Montreal But the gentle men saw that owned great families seem much Cast Down But they could not help them selves for Coll. Habels army lay Below them and Bottoms Rogers and Provincials and the Rangers Lay on the East Side of the River and our army Above the City so they was Surrounded on Every Side this is a very fine City tis said by them that have Seen it Equal to the City of New York they the walls are about 3 miles in Length and there is Eleven Fleeces to be seen in the City be Side some out of the City
I see I shall not be able to give you so full amount as I would for want of Paper so must Conclude with my Sincere Desires of your Prayers to God for us that he would Restore my Brother to Health and Return us home if it be his will and Pleasure

Your Sister Anna hath had the fever and ague a Long time and is very weak but we hope her fits will soon Leave her - these I send by Mr. Reuben Cook &c - make it your Care to Live in the fear of God and faithfull Discharge of your Duty as a Christian and Soldier - and that health Success and Prosperity may attend you while you are absent and that through the smiles of a kind providence you may be safely Return home in Due time is and shall be the Constant Sincere Desires and Prayers of your affectionate

John Humphry

P.S. Give my Compliments to Capt. Humphry Lt. Chick and all Enquiring friends and let them know that their families and friends are well. -

Benomies Daughter Sarah is Recovered from a Long Sickness and Daughter Susan had a Son born the 24th of June all well.

He was in active service in the French and Indian Wars. See (opposite) fac-simile of letter to him from his father, Esq. John. In September, 1760, he was an ensign in Gen. Phineas Lyman's company, and encamped at Montreal. He also joined the expedition against the Spanish and went to Havanna in 1762.

He served in the Revolutionary war till the battle of Long Island, in which he was wounded and captured. He was confined in the Old Sugar-house, by the British, and barbarously treated, so that on his release and return to Simsbury he soon after died.

In History of my Own Times, by Rev. Daniel Barber, printed at Washington, 1827, we find:—"Immediately after the battle of Bunker's Hill, in 1775, orders were given for raising a regiment of Connecticut troops, for the term of five months, under Col. Jedediah Huntington, of Norwich. I enlisted* under Captain Elihu Humphrey, of Simsbury. * * * Captain Elihu, as we generally called him, was the son of the Hon. John H., formerly one of the Governor's Council, and a Justice of the Court of Common Pleas for the County of Hartford. Captain Elihu was a well-bred gentleman; his friendly turn of mind, with a sweetness of disposition, secured him the love of all good men; his confidence and esteem procured him the commission of Major, in the second campaign. He, dying about the close of the year 1776, [in service] left, as a legacy to his family, a name, whose reputation will not be forgotten during many generations. I knew him—I revered him—I loved him." Sergeant "Jonathan Humphrey, Jr., (afterward Col. H.) was Clerk of the Roll"—from Simsbury; "was a most charming companion; his social airs and pleasant countenance gained the affection and good wishes of all. He is long since dead, and lies buried near Major Elihu, in Hop Meadow burying-ground." [See Fam. 64, S.<sup>2</sup>]

For full particulars of this Company's march see sermon preached to them by Rev. Mr. Pitkin, of Farmington, &c., in Barber's Hist. Collections of Connecticut, pp. 103, 104.

Maj. Humphrey died 25 Feb., 1777, aged 38 years.† His will was dated Aug. 8, 1776; inventory exhibited July 8, 1777: amount £965.13.6; will proved May 24, 1777; wife Asenath and Jonathan Humphrey, Jr., executors; mentions three daus.: Asenath, Ophelia and Rowena; gives each £25, when 18 or married; mentions also three sons: Elihu, Sterling and Young. Daniel Knapp (who afterwards married the widow) bought most of the estate. After her death, in 1779, Col. Jonathan Humphrey [See Fams. 17 and 64, S.<sup>2</sup>] was appointed guardian of the six children. Col. Jonathan Humphrey, of Simsbury, gives receipts Jan. 17, 1795 to May 12, 1800. The following names are mentioned: Theodore Hillyer, Lodame Hillyer, Young Humphrey, by Elihu Humphrey Guardian, David Phelps, Jr., Asenath Phelps, Calvin Barber, Rowena Barber, Augustus Pettibone, Cephas Pettibone of Norfolk, Elihu Humphrey, Starling Humphrey, Giles Pettibone, Jr., Obediah Pease, Deziah Pease (the three last-named of Norfolk), and Ophelia Humphrey. *Simsbury Prob. She was born 12 Dec., 1742,** and died 23 Sept., 1809, æ. 66.†† He first settled at Norfolk, Ct., and was there chosen constable in 1765; soon after returned to Simsbury, where he became eminent in the public affairs of the town and colony, and afterward of the State. He and his wife were members of the Congregational church in that place, in 1777. He was a lawyer, Justice of the Peace from 1778 to 1803, and, in 1787, delegate with Gen. Noah Phelps, to the Convention which ratified the Federal Constitution. Simsbury was opposed to the adoption of that instrument, and instructed its delegates to oppose it in Convention, which Mr. Humphrey did by his vote, though, as he protested, in opposition to his personal inclination and convictions. He was a representative in the Legislature of the State for many terms, and bore, to the end of his life, the confidence and respect of all who knew him in public or private station. "Esquire Daniel," as he was called, was a man of great physical and mental stamina, of the early New England type. In person he was tall, stately, and athletic, inclining to corpulency, with a fresh complexion, and eyes and hair very dark. He was characterized by resolution, self-reliance, affability and sociability in society; which, with the acquisition of distinguished learning in his profession, for his day, and extensive literary accomplishments and general information, fitted him to fill, with especial credit, the places of public trust and honor conferred on him. His descendants have, to a remarkable degree, inherited his physical and mental traits. His wife, from one of the most distinguished families in New England, all accounts state to have been a superior woman. In his domestic relations he exhibited much of the stern social habit so common in that day, holding that parental government and filial obedience were alike duties of the family relation, to an extent which, in modern times, would be regarded as arbitrary. He died 27 Aug., 1813, æ. 76.* "Daniel Humphreys, Esq. of Simsbury,"—his will, dated March 5, 1811, was proved Sept. 14, 1813; mentions daus. 297. Hosea <sup>5</sup> Humphreys, M. D. [142] (Dea. Michael,<sup>4</sup> Dea. John,<sup>3</sup> Sergt. John,<sup>2</sup> Michael,<sup>1</sup>) was born 15 June, 1757, in Norfolk, Ct. He married (1) Persis —, born in 1757. The names of her parents have not been ascertained. She died 29 July, 1814, aged 57 years. He married (2) —; no children. She must have survived her husband several years, as H. K.<sup>8</sup> Adams writes that he remembers when a boy (and he was not born until 1828) that his father received a letter from a lawyer informing him that his wife was the only heir of Hosea Humphreys.

Dr. Humphreys died in 1818, æ. 61. He was an able physician, and possessed a deep, clear, original and active mind. In early life he was a saddle and harness maker in Providence, R. I., but does not appear to have been satisfied with his trade, which was probably not congenial to his tastes. He was the author of a philosophical work, on the subject of Heat, comprising about two hundred pages. A copy was sent to his grand-daughter Sarah L.<sup>7</sup> Kingman, now Mrs. Adams. During the latter part of his life he became largely interested in some cotton mills at Littleton, a village near Providence. He resided in Norfolk, Ct., for several years after his marriage, as the birth of his daughter is recorded in that town, 1782, and he was sent as representative to General Assembly in 1787,—both the May and October sessions.

He was at first a mechanic, then a merchant, and acquired an ample fortune for the time in which he lived. In 1816, he represented St. Albans in the State Legislature. He was interested in steamboats on Lake Champlain. About the year 1820, he, with one of his townsmen, built the ship Gleaner, at St. Albans bay. This was the first boat that ever sailed from Lake Champlain through the Whitehall canal down the Hudson to New York, and the event was celebrated with much eclat, as the City Council, with bands of music, amid salvos of artillery heralding its arrival, went forth to meet its owners, and do them honor. A portion of this vessel was among the curiosities exhibited at Barnum's Museum.

He graduated at Yale College in 1757, at the age of seventeen years; and was a very fine scholar. He studied law with — Hillhouse, Esq., of New Haven, Ct. In New York City, he opened a private school for classical study and was very successful, having among his pupils children of the first families. At the close of the Revolutionary War he settled at Portsmouth, N. H., and opened a law office. He was appointed U. S. Attorney for the district of New Hampshire, by Gen. Washington, which office he held till his death, transacting business until the last. He was a firm friend to the poor, doing good to all around him, and was very much respected and esteemed by all who knew him. ## FAMILY 26.

Mr. Humphreys held various local offices, and was quite prominent in public affairs. He was a member of the Committee of Inspection appointed for Derby December 11th, 1775; took the oath of fidelity to the United States April 13th, 1778. March 9th, 1780, it was voted that John Humphreys with several others should "be a committee to assist the officers of the several companies in the town of Derby in raising their quota of men that shall be requested in this town for the continental and state service at the expense of the town, with discretionary orders to give such premiums as said committee in their wisdom shall judge reasonable." He served the town as selectman, 1777-82, and in 1777-78 had the title of "Ensign." In 1783, the General Assembly granted the town of Derby "liberty to set up a lottery for the sum of five hundred pounds" to meet expenses of bridge-building, &c., and John Humphreys was appointed one of the managers of said lottery, which did not prove a financial success. After this the town did not again resort to this method of raising funds. In 1786, a school-house of two stories was built, afterward called the academy, and he paid £25.5.5, as his share of the costs. He was town-clerk for many years, and recorded the death of his father and mother, and brother Maj. Elijah<sup>5</sup> Humphreys; was justice of the peace, 1791-97, and probably longer. In December, 1793, it was voted in town-meeting "that John Humphreys, Esq.," with three others, "be a committee to inspect the inoculation of the small-pox, and make further rules and regulations respecting the small-pox as they shall judge necessary for the inhabitants, and to put a stop to the inoculation if they judge best." In 1795, May session, he was representative to the State Legislature. He died 18 Feb., 1832, æ. 88 years, Derby, Ct.

He served as a major in the Revolutionary war, in the course of which he had three horses shot under him; and was distinguished for his patriotism, and zeal in the cause of liberty. He was a member of the Order of the Cincinnati, and in his certificate of membership is styled "Captain in the 6th Ct. Regiment." At the conclusion of the war he resumed his former avocation, being captain and owner, in part, of a vessel engaged in the West India trade. He died of yellow fever. After his death his brother John, then town-clerk, made the following entry concerning him: "He died July 2, 1785, on his way to the West Indies and was buried on the Isle of Martinico, in the 40th year of his age." Dr. Dwight, in his "Epistle to Col. Humphreys," 1785, makes this allusion to the death of Maj. Elijah<sup>5</sup> Humphreys:

"Yet thou must mourn a friend, a brother dear,
And o'er departed merit drop a tear.
Him sense illumed, the hero's warmth inspired,
Grace taught to please, and patriot virtue fired;

* "April 4, 1797. Personally appeared before me Mrs Anna Humphreys and made solemn oath that she is possessed of a negro girl named Twinet, aged one year and nine months wanting seven days."

"Before me, John Humphreys, justice of the peace."

"Slaves were owned in Derby nominally as late as 1840, they not having accepted their freedom, their owners being obliged to maintain them in their old age."—Hist. of Derby, pp. 215, 216.

† Dr. Mansfield was born in New Haven, Ct., Oct. 1724, and was son of Dea. Jonathan Mansfield. He was graduated at Yale college in 1741, with the first honors of his class; sailed for England in 1748, and was ordained deacon and priest by the Archbishop of Canterbury, Thomas Herring, 7th August of that year; officiated at Derby, West Haven, Waterbury and Northfield, from 1748 to 1755, and was pastor of St. James' Church at Derby, from 1755 to his decease in 1820; his ministerial service covering a period of seventy-two years.

Dr. Mansfield was a loyalist, and having sworn allegiance to the British crown in his vows of ordination, his mind and conscience were not easily forced to abandon his chosen ground. In 1775, he preached a sermon from the words "Fear God; honor the king," which created a bitter feeling against him. He soon after fled to Long Island, then in possession of the British. It is said that his son-in-law Elijah Humphreys, being an officer on a war vessel, arrested him in his flight, but it is more probable that he became a guarantee for his conduct and obtained the privilege for him to return, not long after, to his home and his pulpit. There is good authority for the statement that this son-in-law secured permission for his brother John to take the place of the guard in the church to see that the devoted loyalist did not preach against the American cause.—Hist. of Derby, pp. 618-624, and 745.

Alike in peace, in war, at home, abroad,
Worth gained him honour, where his footsteps trode;
Yet all in vain, his laurelled garlands bloom,
But waste their beauty on th' untimely tomb."

His wife survived him many years. We add the following obituary notice which appeared in the Practical Christian and Church Chronicle, (a religious newspaper published at New Haven) under date May 28th, 1841:—

Died at Derby, on Easter Sunday, the 11 ult., Mrs. Anna Humphreys, aged 85. Mrs. Humphreys was a daughter of Rev. Richard Mansfield, D.D. Through the most of a long life, she was a communicant in the Episcopal Church. She was ever distinguished for her zeal and liberality for the Church, and for her many benefactions to the poor and needy. Her heart was touched with sympathy and commiseration at the trials and sufferings of her fellow-beings, and her hand was ever open for their relief. She was much respected and beloved by a numerous circle of acquaintances, and her loss is deeply lamented by all who knew her, for all who knew her loved her. During her long sickness she manifested a cheerful acquiescence in the will of God. She was at times depressed under a sense of her unworthiness, notwithstanding her many good works, but she was always cheered and animated as she thought of those unspeakable mercies in Christ Jesus. The doctrine of justification by faith alone in the meritorious righteousness, and the atoning blood of Christ, was her stronghold and her sweet consolation. She died in hope and peace, on the glorious festival day commemorative of the Saviour's triumph over death and the grave. Her dust has a blessed repose in the certainty of its being raised again and animated, at its second birth, with immortal life. And her spirit being saved and released from all sin by the precious blood of Jesus is now forever happy in the joy of Heaven, that is unspeakable and full of glory.

There is my rest | Mrs Anna Humphrey | relict of the late | Elijah Humphrey Esqr | buried in Martinico W I | daughter of the late Rev Richard Mansfield DD | died April 11 1841 | aged 85. If Primitive faith exemplary piety | and Charity to the Poor could | have prevented she had not died.

He is mentioned among those "residing at Up Town, and who sailed to all parts of the world." After Col. David<sup>5</sup> Humphreys last visit to England, Capt. Vose engaged with him in the manufacture of woolen cloths at Humphreysville, a company being formed under the name of T. Vose & Company. A more extended account of this enterprise will be found in connection with the history of Gen. David<sup>5</sup> Humphreys. [Fam. 28, J.<sup>2</sup>] He seems to have been an influential citizen; is described as "a sort of moral regulator in the town." He was at one time president of the Agricultural Society. Concerning their residence we add the following, written by Mr. Samuel Sherwood, of Ansonia, (Derby) Conn., (whose mother was a daughter of William Mansfield, son of Rev. Richard Mansfield, D. D.,) under date of March 16, 1870: "To the generous benefaction of cousin Betsey Vose are we indebted for the pleasant home we enjoy in the old farm-house, built, as near as I can learn, in the year 1720, by the Rev. Daniel Humphreys—a century and a half,† the home in which were cradled and nurtured three succeeding generations of the Humphreys family, or their descendants. The house at the present day is in good repair, its massive oaken frame bearing but few traces of the iron hand of Time. The knowledge I have of the Humphreys family was mostly obtained from the lips of Mrs. Vose—after having passed the number of years allotted to most of the human race, while seated in her arm-chair at her favorite window, with form erect as when in youth, a graceful dignity that commanded respect, a countenance that told of beauty in other days, combined with vivacity, amiability and geniality of temperament, quick wit and keen perception, rarely found in one of her years, a retentive memory and fluency of speech, improved by the advantages of culture and a life-long mingling with the courteous and refined. At such times, when conversation turned upon "the olden time," her countenance would brighten (as she turned from the reading or the knitting with which she almost constantly busied herself) and she would recall, in a most animated manner, the events of the earlier part of the present century, when as a young wife and hostess of the old homestead, then the resort of her uncle, the General, and other notables of the day, she dispensed the large-hearted hospitality which is still the theme of converse among those living at that time. * * * Mrs. Vose died, as she had

347. General David<sup>5</sup> Humphreys, L. L. D.: F. R. S., [149] (Rev. Daniel,<sup>4</sup> Dea. John,<sup>3</sup> Sergt. John,<sup>2</sup> Michael,<sup>1</sup>) was born 10 July, 1752, in Derby, Ct. When a boy he was passionately fond of books, and after having passed through the preparatory course under the tuition of his father, he entered Yale college at the early age of fifteen, where he was graduated with distinguished honors in 1771. "Either owing to the exciting causes, which eventually terminated in the establishment of American independence, or to a singular combination of youthful intellectual powers, the brief time of the presidency of Dr. Daggett seems to present the most brilliant display of eminent names that is furnished by the catalogue of Yale college. Young HUMPHREYS was among the pupils of that presidency. Trumbull, Dwight, and Humphreys, contemporaries as academicians, and soon after, Barlow, while they maintained honorable rank as scholars, brought the charms of poetry from their studies, to grace the progress of freedom, and strew flowers on the pathway of liberty. Excitements that influenced teachers, who considered even clerical immunities and obligations as forming no just exemption from active personal service in opposition to tyranny and oppression, operated with wonderful effect on the minds of pupils. A love of letters became united with a love of country; scholarship and patriotism formed an alliance, and literature in all its branches lent its aid to the cause of freedom. The young bards of the college raised their animating strains; and with the caustic satire of Trumbull, the noble songs of Dwight, and the elaborate efforts of Barlow, were mingled the patriotic effusions of HUMPHREYS."†

After the completion of his collegiate studies, he resided for a short time, probably as an instructor, in the family of Colonel Phillips, of Phillips Manor, Westchester county, New York, one of the most distinguished and courtly families of that period. At the commencement of the Revolution, being then resident at New Haven, he entered the army as captain, and was speedily promoted to the rank of major in General Putnam's brigade. He was soon after appointed aid-de-camp to General Putnam, which was a high compliment to the young soldier, as that confidential situation was considered a very important one, both in field and cabinet service. In this capacity, he was with the army, in the memorable retreat from New York, after the Battle of Long Island, Aug. 27, 1776—and the affair at Harlem Heights. In his Life of General Putnam, he gives a graphic account of the events in which he was an actor. After speaking of Gen. Putnam as being, with a portion of his command, in the city, Col. Humphreys continues, as follows: "After having caused the brigades to begin their retreat by the route of Bloomingdale, in order to avoid the enemy,

* Two places of death are given; Derby and New Orleans. The last-named is acc. to Mrs. Pease [Fam. 49, J.], and Hist. of Derby.

† In his poem on the Future Glory of the United States of America, Col. Humphreys addresses these three friends.

who were then in possession of the main road leading to Kingsbridge, he galloped to call off the pickets and guards. Having myself been a volunteer in his division, and acting adjutant to the last regiment that left the city, I had frequent opportunities, that day, of beholding him, for the purpose of issuing orders, and encouraging the troops, flying, on his horse, covered with foam, wherever his presence was most necessary. Without his extraordinary exertions, the guards must have been inevitably lost, and it is probable the entire corps would have been cut in pieces. When we were not far from Bloomingdale, an aid-de-camp came from him at full speed, to inform that a column of British infantry was descending upon our right. Our rear was soon fired upon, and the colonel of our regiment, whose order was just communicated for the front to file off to the left, was killed on the spot. With no other loss we joined the army, after dark, on the heights of Harlem. —Before our brigades came in, we were given up for lost by all our friends. So critical indeed was our situation, and so narrow the gap by which we escaped, that the instant we had passed, the enemy closed it by extending their line from river to river. Our men, who had been fifteen hours under arms, harassed by marching and counter-marching, in consequence of incessant alarms, exhausted as they were by heat and thirst, (for the day proved insupportably hot, and few or none had canteens, insomuch, that some died at the works where they drank,) if attacked, could have made but feeble resistance. * * *

That night our soldiers, excessively fatigued by the sultry march of the day, their clothes wet by a severe shower of rain that succeeded towards the evening, their blood chilled by the cold wind that produced a sudden change in the temperature of the air, and their hearts sunk within them by the loss of baggage, artillery, and works in which they had been taught to put great confidence, lay upon their arms, covered only by the clouds of an uncomfortable sky. * * * Next morning several parties of the enemy appeared upon the plains in our front. On receiving this intelligence, General Washington rode quickly to the outposts, for the purpose of preparing against an attack, if the enemy should advance with that design. Lieutenant-colonel Knowlton's rangers, a fine selection from the eastern regiments, who had been skirmishing with an advanced party, came in, and informed the general that a body of British were under cover of a small eminence at no considerable distance. His excellency, willing to raise our men from their dejection by the splendor of some little success, ordered Lieutenant-colonel Knowlton, with his rangers, and Major Leitch, with three companies of Weedon's regiment of Virginians, to gain their rear; while appearances should be made of an attack in front. As soon as the enemy saw the party sent to decoy them, they ran precipitately down the hill, took possession of some fences and bushes, and commenced a brisk firing at long shot. Unfortunately, Knowlton and Leitch made their onset rather in flank than in rear. The enemy changed their front, and the skirmish at once became close and warm. Major Leitch having received three balls through his side, was soon borne from the field; and Colonel Knowlton, who had distinguished himself so gallantly at the battle of Bunkerhill, was mortally wounded immediately after. Their men, however, undaunted by these disasters, stimulated with the thirst of revenge for the loss of their leaders, and conscious of acting under the eye of the commander-in-chief, maintained the conflict with uncommon spirit and perseverance. But the general, seeing them in need of support, advanced part of the Maryland regiments of Griffith and Richardson, together with some detachments from such eastern corps as chanced to be most contiguous to the place of action. Our troops this day, without exception, behaved with the greatest intrepidity. So bravely did they repulse the British, that Sir. William Howe moved his reserve, with two field-pieces, a battalion of Hessian grenadiers, and a company of chasseurs, to succor his retreating troops. General Washington not willing to draw on a general action, declined pressing the pursuit. In this engagement were the second and third battalions of light infantry, the forty-second British regiment, and the German Chasseurs, of whom eight officers, and upward of seventy privates were wounded, and our people buried nearly twenty, who were left dead on the field. We had about forty wounded; our loss in killed, except of two valuable officers, was very inconsiderable. An advantage so trivial in itself produced, in event, a surprising and almost incredible effect upon the whole army. Amongst the troops not engaged, who, during the action, were throwing earth from the new trenches, with an alacrity that indicated a determination to defend them, every visage was seen to brighten, and to assume, instead of the gloom of despair, the glow of animation. This change, no less sudden than happy, left little room to doubt that the men, who ran the day before at the sight of an enemy, would now, to wipe away the stain of that disgrace, and to recover the confidence of their general, have conducted themselves in a very different manner."

Major Humphreys was Brigade-Major of the first Connecticut brigade in the Hudson Highlands, in the autumn of 1777, when the British captured Forts Clinton and Montgomery.* He was also aid for a time to General Greene. Early in 1780, he received the appointment of aid and secretary to General Washington, with the rank of lieutenant-colonel,† and soon after joined the General's family, remaining with him in that capacity until the close of the war, "enjoying his full confidence and friendship, and sharing in the toils of his arduous duties." He thus alludes to his association with these distinguished men in his poem on the Happiness of America‡:—

"I too, perhaps, should heav'n prolong my date,
The oft-repeated tale shall oft relate;
Shall tell the feelings in the first alarms,
Of some bold enterprise th' unequalled charms;
Shall tell from whom I learnt the martial art,
With what high chiefs I play'd my early part;
With Parsons first, whose eye, with piercing ken,
Reads through their hearts the characters of men;
Then how I aided, in the foll'wing scene,
Death-daring Putnam—then immortal Greene—
Then how great Washington my youth approv'd,
In rank preferr'd, and as a parent lov'd,
(For each fine feeling in his bosom blends,
The first of heroes, sages, patriots, friends)
With him what hours on warlike plains I spent,
Beneath the shadow of th' imperial tent;
With him how oft I went the nightly round,
Through moving hosts, or slept on tented ground;
From him how oft (nor far below the first
In high behests and confidential trust)
From him how oft I bore the dread commands,
Which destin'd for the fight the eager bands:
With him how oft I pass'd th' eventful day,
Rode by his side, as down the long array
His awful voice the columns taught to form,
To point the thunder, and to pour the storm."

"On the staff of General Washington he proved himself an efficient and worthy officer, and especially at the siege of Yorktown, where he held a separate command. When Lord Cornwallis surrendered, with his army, to the American forces (October 19th, 1781,) Colonel Humphreys had the distinguished honor of receiving the English colors, and, as a mark of approbation, bearing them from the Commander-in-Chief to Congress, with copies of the returns of prisoners, arms, ordnance, and twenty-five stands of colors surrendered, with a letter from Washington warmy commending the bearer to the consideration of the government."† Nov. 7th, 1781, it was "Resolved, that an elegant sword be presented, in the name of the United States in Congress assembled, to Colonel Humphreys, Aid-de-Camp to General Washington, to whose care the standards, taken under the capitulation of York, were committed, as a testimony of their opinion of his fidelity and ability; and that the Board of War take order therein." In the year 1786, this resolution was carried into effect, and the sword presented by General Knox, then secretary of war, accompanied by a highly complimentary letter.

In November, 1782, he was commissioned as lieutenant-colonel, with an order that the commission should bear date from the 23d June, 1780, when he was appointed aid-de-camp to Gen. Washington. The commission was signed by Elias Boudinot, President of Congress, and countersigned by B. Lincoln, Secretary of War.

While in active service, he had given the sanction of his name and influence to the establishment of a company of colored infantry, which was attached to Meigs', afterwards Butlers' regiment, in the Connecticut line, and of which he continued to be nominal captain until the close of the war. Jethro Martin, a colored servant of Col. Humphreys, received a pension for many years on account of his military services.

In May, 1782, we find the names of D. Humphreys, A.D.C., and Jonathan Trumbull, Jun., Secretary, officially endorsed upon a copy of Gen. Washington's reply to the letter of Col. Nicola, proposing the establishment of a Kingdom, and suggesting the title of King to the illustrious commander in chief.

The preliminaries of peace between the United States and Great Britain having been settled in November, 1782, the operations of the army were soon after suspended; although the commander-in-chief remained with the northern division, until he resigned his commission at Annapolis, in December, 1783, being attended on that interesting occasion by Col. Humphreys, who, at his special request, accompanied him to Mount Vernon.* His friend Barlow seems to allude to this event in his "Vision of Columbus":—

"While Freedom's cause his patriot bosom warms,
In lore of nations skilled, and brave in arms,
See HUMPHREYS glorious from the field retire,
Sheathe the glad sword, and string the sounding lyre—
That lyre, which erst, in hours of dark despair,
Roused the sad realms to urge th' unfinished war:
O'er fallen friends, with all the strength of woe,
His heartfelt sighs in moving numbers flow.
His country's wrongs, her duties, dangers, praise,
Fire his full soul, and animate his lays.
Immortal WASHINGTON with joy shall own
So fond a favorite, and so great a son."

In 1780, Col. Humphreys wrote three interesting letters to Maj.-Gen. Nathaniel Greene, in one of which he makes allusion to the poem from which the above extract is given:—

NEW HAVEN 10th April 1780.

Dear Sir

The ill-state of health which has prevented our old friend the General (with whom I had the honor of serving) from returning to Camp; has likewise subjected me, to a state of inactivity and rustication for several months past; this, I should have little reason to regret from the manner in which I have spent the time, during the inactive season of the year: but the idea of its being protracted into the active parts of the Campaign, might be rather irksome & disagreeable. However I shall not make myself, or friends anxious about my situation, for if my Country should have no farther occasion for my services, I shall be perfectly willing to retire, if otherwise I make no doubt of being permitted to serve it, in such a manner as will be most conducive to the public good; which is the utmost limit of my ambition.

In the interim, whilst I am amusing myself with subjects of Literature & Belle Lettres; I have presumed, upon the knowledge of your fondness for Letters, to trouble you with a small specimen of my attempts in Poetry—The Elegy on the burning of Fairfield, [See p. 131.] which is herewith transmitted was suggested, (not inspired according to poetic custom) by a view of the ruins of that once beautiful Town; and was written to indulge, a pleasing kind of melancholly, and while away a vacant hour the other morning—Should it afford you a moments amusement, it will be an additional gratification—And indeed, since I have proceeded so far in confiding my weaknesses; I may as well go on to acknowledge, some other of my poetical sins, & in 'the true style of a Penitent confess, that being instigated by the Devil & a certain Jere Wadsworth, I have some time since written & consented to publish a Peice in verse, Addressed to the Army, on the Subject of the present war, the prospects before us, and the future felicity, grandeur, population & glory of the Country for which we are now contending—When the afores'd Poem makes its appearance, a Copy of it will not fail of waiting upon you with the writers sincerest respects; unless you should have a surfeit of the enclosure; which being duly notified, will preclude any future efforts of presumption & vanity from the same quarter.

Now what could induce me to turn Scribbler, whether my own Sins, or those of my Parents (as Pope says) must be left to farther discussion; tho I rather imagine the mischief, like a thousand others, will be found, to have originated, in a great measure, from keeping ill Company; such as the beforementioned Colo Wadsworth, a certain Mr Trumbull, a Mr Dwight, a Doctr Styles, & some other similar Characters, of smaller notoriety—These men are enough to corrupt half the youth of the State, and introduce them to the same evil practices—For instance, there is a hopeful Genius, of their fostering and cultivation in this Town, who is so far gone in Poetry, that there is no hope of reclaiming, & making him attentive to any thing else—to be more serious about the matter—The person intended, is a young Gentleman by the name of Barlow; who I could wish was introduced to your notice—He is certainly a very great Genius, and has undertaken a work, which I am persuaded, will do honor to himself, and his Humphreys.

Country, if he is enabled to prosecute it, in the manner he has proposed—It is entitled the Vision of Columbus, and in the course of the Poem will bring into view, upon a large scale, all the great events that have, or will take place on the Continent: from a sight of the first Book which he has nearly finished, I have conceived an exceeding high idea of the performance—But the difficulty is, it will be a labour of three years at least; and his patrimony which consisted in Continental Bills, is by no means sufficient to support him—However a number of Gentlemen have undertaken to patronize him, and I hope will not relinquish the plan on account of the expence—Should they, he proposes to set out for the Southward & see what encouragement he can obtain there.

My friend Trumbull is in Town & informs me, he has had the pleasure of receiving a Letter from you; to which he wrote an answer by an Officer, who has not yet gone to Camp; and therefore he presumes it will reach you, in a very depreciated state, which depreciation, he engages to make good, provided it is not more than forty for one—I shall spend next week with him at Westbury, & will put him often in mind of his promise—I have just Recd a Line from Majr Putnam, who acquaints me, that the General is better & proposes making a visit to Camp in May—

I will not undertake to describe to you, My Dear Sir, the pleasing and even exquisite Sensations which your most obliging Letter of the 29th Ult<sup>o</sup> occasioned—It would indeed be an effort of more magnanimity than I am possessed of, and a sacrifice of more value than I can possibly afford, to suppress all the agreeable feelings which are excited by the approbation (I should say) the too favourable opinion, and partial commendation, of such a character as General Greene. That this is fully sufficient to make any mortal under my circumstances insufferably vain for his whole life must also be confessed, & shall be my only apology in future—For I can never induce myself to believe, that the man who writes so exceedingly well himself, can have but an indifferent taste, and be an ill judge of the writings of others; and I confess I am very far from imagining that a person of so much candor and liberality would wish to abuse one, at such a remove from him in every point of view, by making him believe he was much better esteemed and regarded, than he is in reality—

However diffident I may formerly have been of my own productions, I assure you I find myself in danger after all that has been said, of having my vanity get the ascendancy over my judgment, for I am now taking the liberty you was pleased to give me of exposing myself still farther, by presenting you with a Copy of the Address to the Army which I mentioned in my last: All that I could presume to say in its favour, you will find recorded (as the Parsons say by way of introduction) in the Advertisement prefixed to the Poem. So far as an honest intention, and a zeal for my country can be urged an excuse for indifferent Poetry, I am determined to claim the indulgence of the Public in general, and the patronage of my friends in particular—But pray dont you think I have been guilty of an instance of impertinence, if nothing worse, by addressing a Copy of it to his Excellency the Commander in Chief without his permission or knowledge? I cannot but feel myself under very great obligations to you, for the generous Concern you are pleased to take in Mr. Barlow's affairs—There is one way in which I think he might be Serv'd effectually, and that in a manner reputable to himself & beneficial to the Public. I mean by having him appointed a Chaplain to some vacant Brigade: for tho he is not in orders at present, he would I am well assured, from his character and some other circumstances, qualify himself for the office immediately, accept the appointment with cheerfulness, perform the duty with dignity, and have leisure enough to prosecute his favourite pursuits.—The Rhode Island & 4th Massachusetts Brigades I am informed are vacant.—

We are this moment made happy by the arrival of the News from your quarter that a french fleet will be on the Coast in a few days; this, with many other things will induce me probably, to accept of the kind offer of coming into your family, in the manner you propose; for which and every other instance of your friendship, you will ever receive my most grateful acknowledgements—I am this day setting out to pay a visit to my venerable and honest friend General Putnam—Shall stay but a short time with him, as I wish to be present at more active and important scenes, tho' I know it will be with reluctance that we shall part with each other—

I am with great respect & esteem

NEW HAVEN May 30th 1780

DEAR SIR

I beg pardon for troubling you with another Letter upon the back of my last; and scarcely know of any better excuse for it, than the invincible propensity I have to write to, and about the objects of which I am thinking, continually: did not your candor & liberality of sentiment and behaviour inspire me with almost unbounded confidence in your friendship, I should not have written with the same freedom I have already done.—And indeed I can hardly tell, what it is except this, which now prompts me to unbosom myself with so little reserve. I wish however it may not rather be considered as an argument of my presumption than a proff of my attachment & sincere affection.

The present moment, which is certainly big with great events; appears to me to be the most important as well as the most critical one, that has ever happened since the commencement of the war.—On the one hand, every prospect from abroad looks exceedingly favourable.—And everything, except what depends on ourselves, & our own exertions, wears the most flattering aspect—On the other the ill state of our finances, the total want of credit, the impracticability of calling forth the resources of the Country in the ordinary mode, the stupidity & negligence of the people at large to their own interest, the knavery of some, and the want of ability in others, who are concerned in the administration of public affairs, and especially the unbounded, uncontrollable spirit of dissipation, licentiousness, & avarice, which predominates thro every rank and order of men, so far as they have any opportunity for its gratification; afford the most gloomy presage of what the event would be, if Providence should only leave us to ourselves or (as they commonly say) to our own destruction.—In the midst of this embarras'd & distressing state of affairs, when we can neither assemble any considerable force; or support and keep together the shattered remains of the Army now in the field, for want of supplies, while the disposition of the Country is so unfavourable to every exertion: it seems to me that the certain prospect, of the immediate arrival of a formidable land and naval armament to co-operate with us, can serve only to augment and increase the perplexity and embarrassment —

Heaven be thanked I am not a General, and never shall be, for my own sake!—for that of the Public 'tis most auspicious that they who have the management of our military affairs, have more ability, fortitude, perseverance and integrity than ever mortals had before.—You will pardon me for the boldness of the assertion, and allow this to be the case, with our glorious Commander in Chief, tho you may have more diffidence, and less justice, than posterity will inevitably have, in coupling your name with his—Good God! what must the feelings of that great & good man be, to find himself so ill seconded by his Country at such a crisis!

As to the plan of operations for the Campaign, I suppose it is determin'd upon before this time, and that it will be difficult, if not disgraceful to recede from the measures concerted in conjunction with our allies—so that I presume all that is now necessary, is for the Country to be roused from its lethargy, to make those great efforts, of which we all believe it is capable—for my own part, to assist in effecting so important a purpose, I could wish to be invested with power, not inferior to be sure, to that which Milton bestows upon his Devils, to tear up Mountains by the roots, or wield some of these elements; at least I should want, for a little while, to be possessed of a voice of thunder, so that I might stand some chance to awaken those, who I fear nothing will except the last Trumpet —

Apropos of the last Trumpet—You have undoubtedly heard of the dark day with us. the speculations on it were curious, and would, I dare say, be amusing to you, but time would fail me to innumerate them—Many who apprehended the last day was at hand, began to think of repenting. Others turn'd out as Volunteers to preach, and pray, and prophesy, and help their neighbours out at a dead lift—It is said the Assembly broke up not without some precipitation & indications of terror, that they might be sent for before they were quite ready, or had got their business in such forwardness, as that they could possibly leave it—Amongst the rest, there was a certain fat old Gentleman, known by the name of Col<sup>d</sup> Deavenport, who having wrapped himself up in his corpulency and integrity, behaved with very great composure & firmness: observing, “that it was best for the Sheriff to order Candles, that they might go on with their business, that if they should be called for, they might be found in the way of their duty”—But I imagine the greater part of the Multitude, begun to think, that the Prince of the Regions of darkness, who is sometimes styled, the Prince of the Power of the air, was about uniting both his kingdoms into one, in the same manner as England & Scotland were formerly incorporated—And altho they had been his most faithful adherents & humble Servants, (as it was well known, that like other Monarchs, he was rather apt to be ungrateful to his best friends & benefactors) they were not without fear that it might be a dark day with them in more senses than one, 'tho they could not be under any apprehensions of being treated as Rebels, as being conscious they never had forfeited their allegiance & fidelity to his infernal Majesty—

I have just return'd from my visit to General Putnam, & left him in good spirits, & very cleverly in every respect, but his lameness—I have a letter from him, to you, which I hope to have the honor of delivering with my own hands, soon after the arrival of this—

In May, 1784, Colonel Humphreys was elected by Congress, secretary to the “commission for negotiating treaties of commerce with foreign powers,” the commissioners being John Adams, then minister in Holland, Benjamin Franklin, then minister in France, and Thomas Jefferson, whom he accompanied, in July of the same year, to Europe. Several eminent men were the companions of his voyage, among whom was his friend General Kosciusko, mentioned in his poetical “Epistle to Dr. Dwight,” written on board the Courier de l’Europe.

Col. Humphreys bore to Minister Franklin a letter of introduction from Gen. Washington, which is as characteristic of the writer as it was honorable to its subject. No stronger endorsement of his valued aid-de-camp’s personal qualities could have been given, than in these few, terse and graceful lines penned by the revered chief who knew him so intimately, and whom, he, in turn regarded with an almost filial affection. This most interesting letter, of which we present a fac-simile opposite, is in the possession of Mrs. N. B. Rossell, of Trenton, N. J.

Dear Sir,

Soon after the expiration of the term of the commission, which was of two years’ duration, he returned to America, and at once visited General Washington at Mount Vernon.

In the autumn of 1786, at the time of the “Shay’s Rebellion,” he was elected a member of the Assembly from Derby, in the Connecticut Legislature, and appointed by that body to the command of the 3d United States Infantry, October 20th of that year. This regiment was raised in compliance “with a requisition of Congress, on account of an Indian war,” the real object of the requisition being disguised from motives of policy. On receiving his commission, Col. Humphreys fixed upon Hartford as his head-quarters, where he had the pleasure of renewing his intimacy with John Trumbull and Joel Barlow. With these two friends and Dr. Lemuel Hopkins he was soon engaged in writing the Anarchiad,† from this association being one of the “four bards with Scripture names" satirized in London. The insurrection being suppressed early in the following year, his time of service was short and his actual duties few and bloodless. On the reduction of his regiment, April 21st, 1787, he was again invited to the hearth of Washington.

In the fall of 1789, he was appointed by Congress a commissioner to treat with the Creek Indians on the frontiers of the southern states, his associates being Hon. Cyrus Griffin and Gen. Benjamin Lincoln.*

In 1791, he was commissioned the first minister from the United States of America to Portugal,† and continued a resident there for several years as a diplomatic representative of his country, being eminently qualified to fill that position. He succeeded in concluding treaties with Algiers and Tripoli, after his return‡ from a visit to the United States, which was made in order to render full personal representations on the subject of Barbary aggressions.** These treaties were formed for the purpose of obtaining the liberation of many American citizens held in captivity, and of securing our commerce from further spoliations. In 1797, he was transferred to the court of Madrid,†† where he continued until 1802, when he returned to his native land.

The following extract from the "Farewell" of the Abbe O' Moore, written Jan. 1, 1802, gives the opinion of a foreigner as to his moral worth :

"Humphreys has strength of character to bear,
Unmoved, all fortunes in a lofty sphere;
Beneath his feet repulsive pride to throw,
And stoop with dignity to those below.
But if his country bids, in arduous hour,
He, bold, asserts his ministerial power;
And mildly stubborn, ev'n before a throne,
Supports his nation's honour and his own."

He married in Lisbon, in 1797, Ann Frances Bulkeley, daughter of John Bulkeley, an English banker residing in that city.‡‡ Her annual income is said (Hist. Derby, p. 598) to have been £30,000. She is described as "a lady of refinement, and of a fine, motherly disposition." They had no children. Their places of residence were Boston, New Haven and Derby, Col. Humphreys being frequently called to his native town by business engagements.***

In a letter dated "Philadelphia, 12th June, 1796," President Washington thus addresses him:—

"Whenever you shall think, with the poet or philosopher, 'that the post of honour is a private station,' and may be disposed to enjoy yourself in my shades—I do not mean the shades below, where, if you put it off long, I may be reclining, I can only repeat, that you will meet with the same cordial reception at Mount Vernon that you have always found at that place; and that I am, and always shall be,

Your sincere friend,
And affectionate servant,
GEO. WASHINGTON."

Under date, "Mount Vernon, 26th June, 1797," he again writes:—

"I am clearly in sentiment with you, that every man who is in the vigour of life, ought to serve his country in whatsoever line it requires, and he is fit for; it was not my intention, therefore, to persuade you to withdraw your services, whilst inclination and the calls of your country demanded your services; but the desire of a companion, in my latter days, in whom I could confide, might have induced me to express myself too strongly on the occasion. The change, however, which I presume has ere this taken place in your domestic concerns, would of itself have annihilated every hope of having you as an inmate, if the circumstance had been known at the time.

"On this event, which I persuade myself will be fortunate and happy for you, I offer my congratulations with all the sincerity and warmth you can desire; and if ever you should bring Mrs. Humphreys to the United States, no roof will afford her and you a more welcome reception than this, while we are the inhabitants of it."*

While a resident of Lisbon, Colonel Humphreys' attention had been turned to the importance of a more general introduction of manufactures into the United States. He thus gives utterance to his views:

"First let the loom each liberal thought engage,
Its labours growing with the growing age;
Then true utility with taste allied,
Shall make our homespun garbs our nation's pride.
See wool, the boast of Britain's proudest hour,
Is still the basis of her wealth and power!
From her the nations wait their wintry robe,
Round half this idle, poor, dependent globe.
Shall we, who foiled her sons in fields of fame,
In peace add noblest triumphs to her name?
Shall we, who dared assert the rights of man,
Become the vassals of her wiser plan?
Then, roused from lethargies—up! men! increase,
In every vale, on every hill, the fleece!
And see the fold, with thousands teeming, fills
With flocks the bleating vales and echoing hills.
Ye harmless people! man your young will tend,
While ye for him your coats superfluous lend.
His nature formed with curious pride, while bare,
To fence with finery from the piercing air:
This fleece shall draw its azure from the sky,
This drink the purple, that the scarlet dye;
Another, where immingling hues are given,
Shall mock the bow with colors dipt in heaven:
Not guarded Colchis gave admiring Greece
So rich a treasure in its golden fleece.
Oh, might my guidance from the downs of Spain,
Lead a white flock across the western main;
Famed like the bark that bore the Argonaut,
Should be the vessel with the burden fraught!
Clad in the raiment my Merinos yield,
Like Cincinnatus fed from my own field;
Far from ambition, grandeur, care and strife,
In sweet fruition of domestic life;
There would I pass with friends, beneath my trees,
What rests from public life, in lettered ease."†

This vision was to be realized; in what manner will be best shown by giving portions of his essay on the subject of the improvement of sheep in this country, addressed to the Massachusetts Society for Promoting Agriculture. Concerning the introduction of merino sheep into the United States he writes:

"Many circumstances concurred to favor the importation, some of which may not be expected soon to unite again: the season was the best that could have been chosen for a safe and easy passage: the conclusion of a general peace rendered the transportation less exposed to embarrassments than it had been for several years; and the diminution of the freighting business made it less difficult than it otherwise would have been to engage a convenient vessel for transporting a greater number of sheep than probably ever before passed the Atlantic together. My acquaintance in the capitals of Spain and Portugal, as well as with the officers commanding on the frontiers, afforded me greater facilities for the extraction than any stranger could be supposed to possess.

"The race of merinos, probably first imported from Barbary to Europe, are believed to have become superior to the original stock, or at least to the sheep which now exist on the opposite coast of the Mediterranean. Climate and culture have both an influence in the formation and constitution of animals. * * * Convinced that this race of sheep, of which I believe not one had been brought to the United States until the importation by myself, might be introduced with great benefit to our country, I contracted with a person of the most respectable character, to deliver to me, at Lisbon, one hundred, composed of twenty-five rams and seventy-five ewes, from one to two years old. They were conducted with proper passports, across the country of Portugal by three Spanish shepherds, and escorted by a small guard of Portuguese soldiers. On the 10th of April last (1802) they were embarked in the Tagus, on board the ship Perseverance, of 250 tons, Caleb Coggeshall master. In about fifty days twenty-one rams and seventy ewes were landed at Derby, in Connecticut; they having been shifted at New York on board of a sloop destined to that river. The nine which died were principally killed in consequence of bruises received by the violent rolling of the vessel on the banks of Newfoundland. * * * * *

"If the project of introducing this breed of sheep should be attended with the desired success, that country will be principally benefitted by it. In case of failure, no one can be the sufferer but myself. The trouble and expense have been considerable for an individual to incur; but a consciousness of the patriotic motives by which I was actuated, and the anticipation that some national good might be produced by the attempt, have furnished no inconsiderable compensation."

The Society to which this essay was addressed, signified their appreciation of its merits, as well as of the importance of the author's liberal and practical efforts in the development of this branch of industry, by the bestowal of a gold medal (of which a fac-simile is given opposite), accompanied by the following letter.

A LETTER FROM THE REV. DOCTOR PARKER.

Hon. DAVID HUMPHREYS, Esq.,
SIR;

BOSTON, December 15, 1802.

The Trustees of the Massachusetts Society for promoting Agriculture, at their meeting, held October 29, 1802, voted that a Gold Medal be presented to you by said Society, for your patriotic exertions in introducing into New England one hundred of the Spanish Merino breed of Sheep; and appointed me a Committee to procure and transmit the same to you.

It is with pleasure I have executed this commission, and now transmit to you the Medal accompanying this; and, in the name of the Trustees, request your acceptance of the same, as a small testimony of the high sense they entertain of your merit in accomplishing this arduous enterprise.

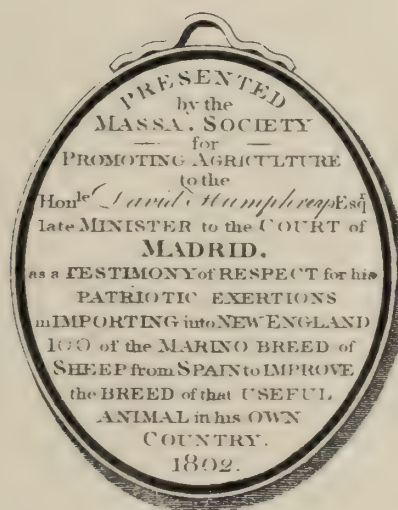

I have the honour to be,

With sentiments of the highest esteem and respect,

Your most obedient and very humble servant,

(Signed) S. PARKER, Corresponding Secretary.

Great excitement was occasioned in Derby and vicinity by the arrival of these sheep, and thousands of persons flocked to see them. Colonel Humphreys discouraged all speculation, from the first, as subversive of the great object to be gained; and even sold a part of his flock at one hundred dollars per head, (a price, it is said, less than they cost,) distributing them among the most enterprising farmers. His advice and entreaties were unheeded, however, and soon the price rose to four hundred dollars, mounting from that to $1,000, $1,500 and $2,000 per head. A few were sold as high as $2,500 and $3,000. Many honest men suffered great loss in the operation, but no blame could be attached to the original promoter of the enterprise.

In 1803, Colonel Humphreys began his distinguished career as a manufacturer, purchasing a tract of land, the water power, two fulling-mills, a clothier's shop, &c., on the Naugatuck river, at the Falls, in his native town. These mills had been used for the dressing of cloth, the spinning and weaving of the wool being done at the homes of the inhabitants. He thus alludes to this custom: "It is true, in the New England and neighboring States, much has been done in families, towards providing and preparing their own clothing. No real patriot can behold, without feeling unusual emotions of pleasure, the employment of the wool cards, the spinning wheels, and the domestic looms, in those nurseries of manufactures. From the manner in which this portion of the country is filled with inhabitants, and the habits of occupation which they acquire from their infancy, I shall not perhaps be too bold in predicting that they will soon make a progress which will surpass all calculation hitherto formed. We have the materials and dispositions. Destitute of the great sources of riches, which, as it were, inundate our brethren in the South, on industry and economy, in farming, fishing, navigating, manufacturing, must we, in this part of the union, depend, under Providence, for our prosperity." Thus, with a wise foresight and patriotic zeal, he engaged in this arduous undertaking, knowing that he must encounter many difficulties, and perhaps meet with severe losses, before it should be established on a firm basis. New, and, as it was then considered, wonderful machinery was introduced for the weaving of the cloth. Skilled mechanics were brought from Europe; cottages were erected for the operatives and a school established on this property, the name of the village being called Humphreysville, in compliment to its founder. In all his arrangements and plans for those dependent upon him, he seems to have been influenced by motives of philanthropy.

He succeeded so well in this enterprise, the production of fine broadcloths, that, in 1808, he had the reputation of producing the best quality of that kind of goods of any one in America. "So celebrated had become his cloth, that in November, 1808, Thomas Jefferson, then president of the United States, desirous of appearing at the White House, on New Year's day, with a suit of clothes of American manufacture, sent the collector of customs at New Haven the following order: 'Homespun is become the spirit of the times. I think it an useful one, and therefore that it is a duty to encourage it by example. The best fine cloth made in the United States, I am told, is at the manufactory of Col. Humphreys. Send enough for a suit.'"

The Philadelphia Domestic Society, in 1808-9, offered a premium of fifty dollars for the best piece of broadcloth twenty yards long and six quarters wide. Col. Humphreys set his machinery at work, wove the piece and took the prize. Coats were made therefrom for Presidents Jefferson and Madison, and the Heads of Departments; also for Capt. Isaac Hull, afterward commander of the frigate Constitution. The price of this cloth was twelve dollars per yard.

During his last visit to England, Col. Humphreys made the acquaintance of Mr. John Winterbotham, who was then a manufacturer of woolen cloths in the vicinity of Manchester, and, finding he was master of the business in all its branches, he requested him to settle his affairs in England and join in a manufacturing enterprise about to be commenced at Humphreysville. To this Mr. Winterbotham consented, becoming the junior partner in the firm of T. Vose & Company, and having the entire charge of the manufacturing department, the other partners being Col. Humphreys and Capt. Thomas Vose [Fam. 27, J.<sup>2</sup>]. This position he continued to fill until the death of the former. His daughter, Mrs. Ann S. Stephens, has given some interesting recollections of her early life in Humphreysville:*

"Among its inhabitants the first person who presents himself to my mind is the man who kept up in his appearance and habits all the traditions that have come down to us from the Revolution. I remember him, at first dimly, in a blue coat with large gold (or what appeared to be gold) buttons, a buff vest, and laced ruffles around his wrists and in his bosom. His complexion was soft and blooming like that of a child, and his gray hair, swept back from the forehead, was gathered in a cue behind and tied with a black or red ribbon. His white and plump hands I recollect well, for wherever he met me they were sure to ruffle up my curls, and sometimes my temper, which was frequently tranquilized with some light silver coin ranging anywhere from a 'four pence half penny' to a half dollar.

"Whenever this old gentleman visited Humphreysville, he occupied a suit of rooms in the boarding-house building. These apartments were superintended by a housekeeper with whom I was a petted favorite. They contained pictures, books and many beautiful objects calculated to charm the fancy of a child, all of which I was permitted to examine and admire to my heart's content.

"Colonel Humphreys took great interest in the discipline and education of the apprentice boys attached to the factory. Seventy-three of these boys were indentured, I have been told, at the same time, from the New York almshouse, and others from the neighboring villages. For these he established evening and Sunday schools, with competent teachers; and indulged his military tastes by uniforming them at no light expense as a militia company, drilling them himself." [Lady Humphreys, wife of the Colonel, made and beautifully embroidered an elegant silk flag for the company, which is still preserved, its inscription being as follows: "Humphreysville, Jam Nova Progenes, Perseverando Pacta Semper Servanda, MDCCCX."] "Of course so many lads, gathered from the lower classes of a great city, must have numbered some bad ones. Thefts and other small vices were sometimes discovered, and at such times the offender was given his choice to be rendered up to the legal authorities, or tried and punished by a court organized on the premises. Almost invariably, they elected the latter, where they expected, and usually received, a milder sentence than the severe laws of that period would have given.

"Sometimes the Colonel brought very distinguished compatriots to visit the mills, of which he was said to be very proud. I remember him dashing up the road one day in an open carriage, drawn by four horses, with Stephen Van Rensselaer, the Albany patroon, at his side. They spent some time walking over the premises—took refreshments at the Colonel's apartments, and drove back to a cottage that he owned in Hotchkiss Town, on the New Haven road.

"Indeed the old soldier usually came in state when he visited his native town, and his presence there was always followed by more or less commotion.

"One day, coming along the river road, near the bridge, he checked his carriage to learn the meaning of a crowd that had collected on the bank. A child had just been taken from the water insensible and apparently dead. The old man gave a few hasty directions, snatched the reins from his coachman, dashed across the bridge and up Falls hill with the dangerous recklessness of a man who had no thought of his own life, and disappeared. In less time than seemed possible, he dashed back with Doctor Stoddard by his side. His prompt action saved the child, and endeared both the old soldier and the physician more than ever to the people.

"In his business enterprises Col. Humphreys did not forget the literary propensities that had mated him with Trumbull and Barlow in Yale College. He wrote a great deal for the benefit and amusement of the operatives; and the Christmas holidays were frequently celebrated with private theatricals, where an original play, of which he was the author, would be performed by the most talented work-people, and he more than once took a prominent part in them. As the best people of the neighborhood and other towns were invited to form an audience, these plays became a favorite amusement. In fact Col. Humphreys omitted nothing that could arouse the ambition or promote intellectual improvement among the operatives, although he did it after a grand military fashion." His large size increased his fine, commanding appearance, as he was six feet, two inches, in height, and weighed about two hundred and thirty pounds; and his bearing was distinguished and courtly, not only from inheritance, but from the influence of the distinguished circles in which he had moved, both at home and abroad. He was always conspicuous for his neatness, his faultless attire, and graceful language; and he was quite a stickler for etiquette; so much so as to have drawn upon himself the ridicule and lampoons of those who failed to appreciate his keen sense of propriety and decorum. In all matters of public and social procedure, he was regarded as an authority; and while a member of Gen. Washington's military family, such matters were always referred to his judgment. On one occasion, the President, writing to a friend who was about to assume a public role, says, "If in any doubt as to the proper line of procedure, you will do well to advise with Col. Humphreys, who is entirely at home in all such matters." It is more than probable that this natural "ease, dignity and urbanity of manners," so conspicuous in Col. Humphreys, and so natural to the name, was one of the bonds which so long and so closely united the Father of His Country to his long-time aid-de-camp, and family associate, as these were likewise conspicuous traits in his own character. Upon the purity of his life and motives there has never been a breath of aspersion. No sooner was the war ended, which established the independence of his country, than he sought, in the diplomatic service, to meet her next great want. Finding, at Lisbon, that the incursions and exactions of the Barbary Powers, Tripoli, Tunis, and Algiers, were not only an obstruction, but a shame and humiliation to our commerce and nation, he hastened home to arouse the latent energies of Congress for their vindication. His representations were successful, war was declared, a fleet despatched to the scene of the disturbance, and he returned clothed with authority to negotiate treaties of peace and amity with these powers, which had so long been the terror of our Merchant Marine.

No sooner is this service for his country ended than the utterly blank condition of our manufactures excites his solicitude and thenceforth demands his entire life and fortune. The building of mills, the construction and erection of machinery, and, more than all, the introduction of skilled workmen for the varied departments, now enlisted all his powers. Mistakes were of course made, some of which now seem needless, and the business, in a pecuniary sense, was not a success. But, as an originator and pioneer, and in the sense of stimulating others into activity—and in demonstrating what could be accomplished, this enterprise was so grand a success that Henry Clay, forty years later, called Col. Humphreys "the father of the American system" of industries.

In 1810, having succeeded so well in the manufacture of cloths, he introduced the making of stockings as a new department in the mills. In 1812, he purchased more lands in Humphreysville, and his mind was busily engaged with his manufacturing enterprises and philanthropic plans.

"Upon the opening of the war, his love for his country was aroused as in his younger days in the Revolution, and calling a public meeting at the old and then dilapidated appearing meeting-house standing on Academy Hill, he delivered a stirring and eloquent oration and called for volunteers. A company, then called troopers (now cavalry), was enlisted, with the Colonel as its first officer, and was accepted by the State. Mr. Humphreys was then appointed brigadier-general of the State Militia, and afterwards was called General instead of Colonel Humphreys." His commission was dated June 1st, 1813, and signed by John Cotton Smith, then Governor of Connecticut. This corps of State troops was composed of "volunteers exempt by law from military duty," and was raised under an act passed in the August session of 1812.

At a town-meeting held in Derby, April 12th, 1813, resolutions complimentary to Commodore Isaac Hull were introduced and read by General Humphreys. The frigate Constitution, of which the former was commander, was constructed, in 1794, by Joshua Humphreys. [See History of the Pennsylvania Family of Humphreys to be printed in a future number of this series.]

"Resolved, that Isaac Hull, Esq., a native of this town, captain in the Navy of the United States, and lately Commander of their Frigate Constitution, with the aid of his gallant officers and ship's company and the smiles of Providence, having led the van in the career in our naval glory by capturing His Britannic Majesty's Frigate Guerriere, commanded by Captain Dacres, has, in our opinion, deserved well of his country, and is an ornament to the place of his nativity.

"Resolved, that joining cordially in the universal applause bestowed by our native countrymen on Hull, Jones, Decatur, Bainbridge and Lawrence, and their brave and skillful associates in perils and triumphs, for their glorious naval achievements, we judge we have a right in our corporate capacity, without showing an undue partiality to the first mentioned officer, or stepping aside from our municipal duties, to notice more explicitly his exemplary merits, from having better opportunities of being acquainted with them.

"Resolved, that Messrs. John L. Tomlinson, William Humphreys* and Pearl Crafts, be a committee to collect and digest such distinguishing illustrative facts on the subject matter now before us as may be attainable, and that they will cause the result to be communicated to the public in such manner as they shall deem most proper.

"Resolved, that from the interruption of our fisheries and navigation by war, gold and silver we have not, to offer costly demonstrations of respect and esteem in imitation of richer towns, yet what we have we freely give, to wit, a tribute of gratitude.

"Therefore, voted that Isaac Hull, Esq., being already constitutionally entitled to the freedom of this corporation, the thanks of this town be presented to him in a box made of heart of oak, the genial growth of his native hills.

"Voted, that the committee take order from the selectmen for the performance of this service and report their proceedings to a future meeting, for the express purpose that a town record be made for the perpetual remembrance of these transactions.

"Voted, that the committee above named be directed to transmit to Capt. Hull a certified copy of the foregoing resolutions.

J. L. TOMLINSON, Clerk."†

General Humphreys was representative from Derby to the State Legislature five sessions, in 1812, '13 and '14, when his public career appears to have terminated.

He was associated, as member or fellow, with several literary institutions, both in this country and Europe, and received from three American colleges the honorary degree of doctor of laws.

His last years were spent principally in Boston and New Haven, his death occurring very suddenly, at the latter place, February 21st, 1818, at the age of sixty-five years. He had been suffering, for a few days, from an, apparently, slight indisposition. With his usual courtesy he handed a lady friend to her carriage, standing, hat in hand, until her departure, then returned to his apartments at the hotel, laid down on the sofa and expired. The suddenness of this event was a great shock to his friends and townsmen.

The people of Derby, assembled in town-meeting, took the following action:—"April 13, 1818. Voted that we appoint a committee to prepare resolutions expressive of the sense entertained by this town of the distinguished character and services of our fellow-citizen, General David Humphreys, comprising a biographical sketch of his life, and report to this meeting, to be held by adjournment on the 27th inst. at one o'clock, afternoon, and that John L. Tomlinson, Truman Carr and Dr. Crafts be the committee." The historian of Derby adds:—"Upon a careful review of the life of Gen. David Humphreys it is impossible not to award him the character of a most unselfish, patriotic and high-minded man. He was one of Derby's noblemen, of whom she has had a large number, who lived for his fellow-man, having, in the language of the inscription on his monument, 'enriched his native land with the true golden fleece.' A scholar, poet, historian, statesman, patriot, and philanthropist, his name is held in high esteem, and will be for generations yet to come."†

His monument stands in the south-western part of the ancient New Haven cemetery, and is a granite obelisk about twelve feet in height. The following inscriptions are upon two bronze tablets which are inserted in the east and west sides of the pedestal* :—

David Humphreys, Doctor of Laws, Member of the Academy of Sciences of Philadelphia, Massachusetts, and Connecticut; of the Bath [Agricultural] Society, and of the Royal Society of London. Fired with the love of country and of liberty, he consecrated his youth wholly to the service of the Republic, which he defended by his arms, aided by his counsels, adorned by his learning, and preserved in harmony with foreign nations.

In the field he was the companion and aid of the great Washington, a Colonel in the army of his country, and commander of the Veteran Volunteers of Connecticut. He went as Ambassador to the Courts of Portugal and Spain, and returning, enriched his native land with the true golden fleece. He was a distinguished Historian and Poet;—a model and Patron of Science, and of the ornamental and useful arts. After a full discharge of every duty, and a life well spent, he died on the 21st day of February, 1818, aged 65 years."

* In Barber's Hist. Collections of Connecticut, is a picture of the monument and a copy of the inscriptions. The epitaph was written by his early and faithful friend, Judge John Trumbull, the poet.

The literary productions of General Humphreys, both in prose and verse, were numerous and worthy of their author, evincing the noble sentiments and patriotic devotion which pervaded his life. Several editions of some of his writings were published, both in Europe and America, and received the favorable notice of critics. The octavo volume, bearing the title The Miscellaneous Works of David Humphreys, Late Minister Plenipotentiary from the United States of America to the Court of Madrid, published in 1804, at New York City, under his supervision; probably contains all of his compositions, prior to that date, which he wished to have given to the public. In the preface to some of his poems, on their first publication, he writes: "Should more defects or imperfections of style be discerned, in such poems of this collection as have never before been printed, than were expected, the writer may be permitted to allege his long absence from his country in mitigation of the severity of animadversion. Since the summer after our revolutionary war was ended (the time of his first leaving this land of his nativity) he has remained abroad, with some intermissions, nearly fourteen years. During the greater part of that period, and particularly for more than eleven of the last years, he has heard very little of his native language spoken, either in his own family, or the societies which he frequented. Almost the whole of his longest productions in verse were composed in Europe." In another place, the author "takes a becoming pride in asserting, that, in indulging his taste for poetry, he has never suspended his attention to the public service;* and that no letter or application on business which ever came to him from any of his countrymen, in any quarter of the globe (and they have been extremely numerous), has ever been neglected at the moment, or remained unanswered longer than was inevitably necessary. In whatever point of light his poetical dispositions or literary acquirements may be considered, he is not a little desirous of preserving the reputation of an honest man, who has never ceased to act, in every office he has filled, with diligence, zeal and fidelity. He has ever taught by precept, and he hopes he has not counteracted the doctrine by example, that there can be no happiness without virtue, no liberty without morality, and no good public character without being at the same time a good private character."

A collection of his writings was dedicated, July 4th, 1790, to his friend the Duke de Rochefoucault, to whom he writes: "In presenting for your amusement the trifles which have been occasionally composed at my leisure hours, I assume nothing beyond the negative merit of not having ever written anything unfavorable to the interests of freedom, humanity, and virtue."

Among his longest prose productions is An Essay on the Life of the Honourable Major-General Israel Putnam, addressed to the State Society of the Cincinnati in Connecticut (of which he was a member), and published by their order. It was written in 1788, and is a beautiful tribute of a high-spirited soldier to one under whose illustrious command he had served his country. In a letter written to Colonel Jeremiah Wadsworth, the president of the Society, he mentions the fact that it is the first effort in biography that has been made on this continent. In celebration of the thirteenth anniversary of Independence, he pronounced, at New Haven, before this Society, an Oration on the Political Situation of the United States of America in the year 1789, which was afterward published; as was also a speech delivered by him, in 1803, before the Governor and Council, in support of a Memorial of said Society to the Legislature.

He addressed to the American people: Thoughts on the Necessity of Maintaining a Navy in the United States of America; and Remarks on the War between the United States and Tripoli, written in 1802. Considerations on the Means of Improving the Public Defence, was in the form of a letter to "His Excellency Governor Trumbull," and was dated, "Boston, September 23, 1803." Allusion has already been made to his Dissertation on the Breed of Spanish Sheep called Merino, which was addressed to the Massachusetts Society for promoting Agriculture, in 1802, soon after his return to this country. He also wrote various other minor prose pieces not here mentioned.

His principal poetical writings were as follows:—

Address to the Armies of the United States of America, written in 1782, while the American army was encamped at Peekskill, and the enemy occupied the heights of New York and Charlestown. This poem became much celebrated, and was translated into French by the Marquis de Chastellux, who had obtained possession of a beautiful copy “printed at London with all the accuracy and magnificence which they always bestow on every important work.” In his preface, Colonel Humphreys “declares, that, having already devoted whatsoever talents and abilities nature has conferred upon him to the service of his country, no efforts that can be made with his voice, his pen, or his sword, shall ever be wanting to confirm its LIBERTIES and INDEPENDENCE.”

A Poem on the Happiness of America, written about 1786, principally in Paris and London, and addressed to the citizens of the United States. This was hardly less popular than its predecessor, as it passed through eight editions in little more than four years, and two more editions followed. These are a few of the introductory lines:—

“The song begins where all our bliss began,
What time th’ Almighty check’d the wrath of man,
Distill’d, in bleeding wounds, the balm of peace,
And bade the rage of mortal discord cease.
Then foes, grown friends, from toils of slaughter breath’d,
Then war-worn troops their blood-stain’d weapons sheath’d:
Then our great Chief to Vernon’s shades withdrew,
And thus, to parting hosts, pronounc’d adieu.”

A Poem on the Future Glory of the United States of America, written principally in Paris and London. In this he addresses three of his literary friends, to whom allusion has already been made:

“Why sleep’st thou, Barlow, child of genius? Why,
See’st thou, blest Dwight, our land in sadness lie?
And where is Trumbull, earliest boast of fame?
’Tis yours, ye bards, to wake the smother’d flame—
To you, my dearest friends! the task belongs
To rouse your country with heroic songs;
For me, though glowing with conceptions warm,
I find no equal words to give them form.”

Here is, also, a vision of the city of Washington:—

“On broad Potowmac’s bank then spring to birth,
Thou seat of empire and delight of earth!
Of WASHINGTON assume the glorious name,
Immortal pledge of union and of fame!
Hail site sublime! unconscious of thy doom,
Thou future city burst the shapeless gloom,
From long oblivion wake—unrival’d rise—
And spread thy destin’d beauties to the skies!
Through rows of goodly trees with umbrage fair,
And streams, whose freshness cools the summer air;
From where the Tiber’s tide thy margin laves,
To where Potowmac rolls his sea-like waves,
I see thy spacious streets their walks extend,
The domes rise beauteous and the arches bend—
I see thy portals proud, adorn’d with art,
Where thronging nations enter and depart—
Where lifts the CAPITOL its golden spires,
I see Columbia’s delegated sires
Intent on high debate—awful!—serene!—
Nor Greece nor Rome beheld an equal scene.”

A Poem on the Industry of the United States of America, written in Lisbon, when the author was Minister at that court, and dedicated to "His Royal Highness the Prince Regent of Portugal," under date "April 14, 1802." He writes as follows: "To have been the first Minister from the United States of America to Portugal; to have been instrumental in opening an extensively advantageous intercourse between the inhabitants of the two countries; to have never been involved in any unpleasant discussion; and to have enjoyed the uninterrupted favour of the Royal Family of Braganza, when accredited as a diplomatic agent near its chief for more than seven years, are circumstances which will continue to be remembered, with conscious pleasure, to the latest period of my life. And never shall I hesitate to acknowledge, with manly gratitude, the liberal and amicable conduct of the Cabinet of Lisbon towards the United States as a nation, and myself as their representative. Nor ought my acknowledgments to be expressed with less deference or cordiality for the distinguished treatment which I experienced in the particular audience recently accorded by the Prince Regent of Portugal to me, in my private character, when he signified his great satisfaction at being presented with the following Poem.

"The Poem, which treats of the national industry of the United States, was composed on the delightful banks of the Tagus, while I was thus honourably occupied on a public mission, and when my days were pleasantly passed in the enjoyment of health, happiness and content. To whom, then, could it with more propriety be addressed than to the Prince Regent of Portugal?

"Actuated by a lively sense of such enviable distinctions, I offer the tribute of sincerity in inscribing this Poem as a testimony of respect for a 'JUST PRINCE'; an appellation which I had the most satisfactory reasons for applying* when I took leave of the Court of Lisbon, in 1797, and which has since been confirmed by almost innumerable titles. If, Sire, I have ever wished for a capacity of paying a still larger tribute of honour where it is most due, it was that your princely and personal virtues might be as advantageously known to the remotest posterity as to the existing generation."†

A Poem on the Love of Country, in celebration of the twenty-third anniversary of the Independence of the United States of America, in which he makes honorable mention of many of our noble chieftains. It was written at Madrid, when the author was Minister in Spain, and was dedicated "To His Majesty Louis, King of Etruria, Hereditary Prince of Parma, Infant of Spain, &c., &c., &c." In this poem he thus alludes to the commencement of the Revolution:

"Awful in age, with dignified applause,
Our sires imprint a reverence on our cause.
And shall I not remember words that fell,
As thus my father bade three sons farewell?
'In peace I liv'd (though stricken well with years),
To see your manhood—now a war appears—
Had not the chills of age these nerves unstrung, Myself would go—but ye are strong and young—
Your country calls—my sons! to battle bear
An old man's blessing and a father's pray'r—
Our cause is just—to guard each sacred right,
Go, in heav'n's name, and dare the dreadful fight—
Go, act the man—from you I hope no less—
And may the Lord of Hosts protect and bless!'"

Concerning his residence in foreign lands he writes:—

"And oft in recollections sad, but dear,
I soothe long absence with a secret tear—
Where'er I wander, or where'er I rest,
The love of country warms my lab'ring breast;

* This is an allusion to a sonnet addressed to the Prince of Brazil, in which he gives him that title.

And as the flame within my bosom burns,
 Each trembling feeling tow'rd's Columbia turns,
 'Tis like the steel whose magnet-instinct guides
 O'er unknown oceans and bewild'ring tides,
 And though the lone bark, wrapp'd in darkness, roll,
 Still points its path and vibrates to the pole."

A Poem on the Death of General Washington, which was pronounced at the House of the American Legation, in Madrid, July 4th, 1800, that being the twenty-fourth anniversary of the Independence of the United States of America. This poem was dedicated to Mrs. Washington, to whom he addressed the following letter of condolence on receipt of the intelligence of her husband's death:—

MADRID, February 22, 1800.

"Too long was I an inmate of your hospitable family, and too intimately connected with the late illustrious head of it, not to share in the poignancy of your distress for the death of the best of husbands. The loss of the most distinguished man of the age is an event which has produced an extensive mourning in Europe—as well as in America. On the return of this day, which was signalized by his birth, and which was accustomed to be celebrated with heartfelt festivity throughout the United States, what mingled ideas crowd upon the recollection! Grief more genuine or more universal was never manifested in any age or in any nation. While a grateful country offers to you the joint tribute of sympathetic tears, I am encouraged to hope that the solitary condolences of an absent friend will not be unseasonable or unacceptable. Accept, then, that pledge of my sincere affection and respect for you. In the season of severe afflictions, I know you were ever disposed to listen to the voice of friendship, reason, and religion. When, nearly nineteen years ago, you were bereaved by death of a dear, an only son, after having mentioned the superior motives for resignation to the dispensations of the Deity, I attempted to administer some consolation, by showing that the lenient hand of time might mitigate the severity of grief, and that you had still the prospect of enjoying many good days on earth in the society of the best of friends, as well as in beholding your grand-children happily established in life, as a comfort for your more advanced years. Highly favoured have you been by Providence, in the uninterrupted fruition of those felicities, until the late fatal stroke, which has removed from you the most dear for ever from this world. Having lived long enough for himself, and long enough for glory, he has gone before us from these mutable scenes of trouble to the mansions of eternal rest.

"We, too, are hastening to follow him 'to that undiscovered country from whose bourne no traveller returns.' The only difference is, whether we shall commence our journey a few days sooner or later. In either case the idea of meeting our dear departed friends will serve, in some degree, to cheer the gloomy passage. To those who have already passed into the vale of declining life, it is true everything here below ought to appear too transitory and too short-lived to allow them to calculate on permanent enjoyments. If the consolation which was once naturally drawn from the expectation of still seeing many good days on this earth be diminished, the resources of reason and religion are everlasting as they are inexhaustible. The noble sentiments and principles of your departed husband remain for your support. Your long alliance with that exalted character cannot fail to elevate your mind above the pressure of immoderate and unreasonable sorrow: we are apt to assimilate ourselves, as far as we are able, to the character, and, as it were, to identify our own with the destinies of those we love. Your hope of happiness is with him on high. But without suffering your intellectual view to be diverted from that higher contemplation, may you not experience some soothing sensations in contemplating a whole people weeping over the tomb of your beloved; in seeing them strive to bestow unequalled honours on his memory, and in knowing that they wish to alleviate your sorrow by a participation of it? And may you not derive some rational comfort from the recollection that the great and good man whom we now mourn as having been subject to the lot of mortality has faithfully discharged every duty in life; from a belief that he has now entered upon a glorious immortality; and from a conviction that, after having rendered to his country more important services than any other human character ever performed, his example will continue to be a blessing to mankind so long as this globe shall exist as a theatre for human action? Since the fatal news reached me, I have found my heart so much oppressed as not to be able to give vent to those effusions which can alone afford me some relief. I wished to express my sensations, but felt myself incapable of the effort: so true is the observation of the author of the pathetic elegy on Mr. Addison:

'What mourner ever felt poetic fires!
 Slow comes the verse that real woe inspires;
 Grief unaffected suits but ill with art,
 Or flowing numbers with a bleeding heart.'

"When my own grief shall become a little moderated, I propose to indulge my melancholy meditations in endeavoring to delineate such features of the character of the deceased father of his country, and such events of his interesting life, as have left the most indelible impressions on my mind. I shall thus procure the double advantage, first, for myself, of holding a kind of spiritual intercourse with him; and, next, of exhibiting for others an admirable model for imitation. Could I flatter myself with the expectation of being able to express (in any adequate proportion) what I know and what I feel on a subject which will employ the pens of innumerable writers, I might then hope to do not less justice to his public and private virtues than others. For, conscious I am that few have had opportunities of knowing him better, and that none could appreciate more justly his morals and his merits. If the task which gratitude, affection and duty impose shall not be executed in a manner too unworthy of the subject, even in my own judgment, I shall ask your acceptance of the production when finished. In the meantime, may you receive, while here on earth, every species of consolation of which an afflicted and virtuous mind is susceptible: and may the choicest of heaven's benedictions attend you through the whole period of your existence. Such is the fervent prayer of

Your most affectionate

And most obliged friend and servant,

D. HUMPHREYS.

P. S. I request you will present my most affectionate regards to Mrs. Stuart and family, to all your amiable grand-children, to Mr. Lear, Dr. Craig and family, and, in general, all my ancient friends in your neighbourhood. Mrs. Humphreys, although she has not the honour of being personally known to you, cannot but take a deep interest in your afflictions. She requests me to tender the homage of her best respects to you."

A few months later, Col. Humphreys again addresses Mrs. Washington:—

DEAR AND RESPECTED MADAM,

In conformity to the intimation given in my letter, dated the 22d of February last, I now dedicate to you a Poem, on the death of your late husband, delivered yesterday, at the house of the American legation in this city, in presence of a respectable number of persons belonging to different nations. Their partiality to the subject led them to listen to it with peculiar indulgence. And from you, I flatter myself, it will meet with no unfavourable reception, even if it should not have the desired effect of diminishing the source of your sorrow, as it contains a representation (though but an imperfect one) of my melancholy sensations—and as it is rather the production of the heart than of the head. When I wrote to you on the 22d of February last, I was ignorant that day had been set apart as sacred to the memory of General Washington. I was unconscious that the voice of mourning was raised at that moment throughout every district in the United States for your and their irreparable loss. Yet, on a day which had been rendered for ever memorable by his birth, it was so natural for the feelings of the whole nation to be in sympathy, that I could not fail of participating in the mournful solemnity which I afterwards found had been recommended by the President to the people of the union.

"The anniversary of Independence produces, in some sort, a renovation of the same sentiments. For who can separate the idea of our Washington from that of our Independence? Who can avoid renewing their lamentations, that he, who contributed so largely to the establishment of it, is now no more? That he was raised up by Heaven to be more instrumental than any other mortal in obtaining the acknowledgment of our right to be an independent nation, and in securing the enjoyment of our civil liberty under a good form of government, no one has ever pretended to deny. For the accomplishment of this glorious destiny, it was indispensably necessary that he should have been born just so long before the revolution, as to have acquired all the qualities of body and mind adequate to the performance of the important part he was called upon to act. This observation has probably often occurred and been expressed. But I beg leave to mention another which has not, to my knowledge, hitherto been made. It seems not unreasonable to suppose (from the wonderful change of sentiments which has since taken place in France) that his death was ordained by Providence to happen exactly at the point of time when the salutary influence of his example would be more extensively felt than it could have been at any other period. So that it may be said of him, with peculiar propriety, that his whole existence was of a piece, and that he died as he lived, for the good of mankind. Perhaps the efficacy of his example could not be so much needed at any moment hereafter as it is at present, to recommend systems of morals and manners calculated to promote the public felicity. Had he died when the Directory governed France, it cannot be doubted that his name, if not loaded with obloquy, would, at least, have been treated with contempt in that country, and, as far as it was possible, consigned to oblivion. The circumstances are now greatly changed, and the good and the brave in that, as in every other nation, consider themselves as having lost in him the ornament and glory of the age. In the British dominions distinguished honours have been paid to his memory. In France itself, a public mourning has been decreed for his death. There those descriptions of men just now mentioned have given utterance to their generous feelings, and the cry of grief and admiration has resounded in the very place where the howling of rage and malediction was but lately heard.

In the funeral eulogium pronounced by Fontanes, at the command of the French government (of which I have made and enclosed a translation for your perusal), you will find many correct, useful, and sublime ideas. The men who now possess the supreme power have ordered the models of public virtue (if I may so express myself) personified at different epochs, to be placed before them. The bust of General Washington is associated with those of the greatest human characters that have ever existed. This is a happy presage of better intentions and better times: for ambition and selfishness, shrinking from his presence, could ill support the mute reproaches of that awful marble.

"In either extremity of life so immediately does the lot of General Washington appear to have been the charge of Heaven! Since the mortal as well as the natal hour is unchangeably fixed, it becomes our duty to acquiesce in the wise dispensations of the Deity. The illustrious father of his country was long since prepared for this event. You well remember, when his life was despaired of at New York, he addressed these words to me: 'I know it is very doubtful whether ever I shall rise from this bed, and God knows it is perfectly indifferent to me whether I do or not.'—Amidst all the successes and all the honours of this world, he knew, 'that no man is to be accounted happy until after death.'

"Happy is it that the seal of immortality is set on the character of him, whose counsels as well as actions were calculated to increase the sum of human happiness. Those counsels are now the more likely to be spontaneously obeyed, since his career has been successfully finished, and since it is everywhere fashionable to speak of his talents and services in terms of the highest applause. In fine, the world is disposed, in this instance, to do justice to the most unsullied worth it has perhaps ever witnessed. While heroes, and statesmen, and nations contemplate with complacency his public life as a perfect model for a public character, it remains for those who knew him in the calm station of retirement to demonstrate how dearly they prized his amiable dispositions and domestic virtues, by imitating his conduct in private life. To be great is the lot of few—to be good is within the power of all. What are the inestimable consolations of a good conscience in the hour of affliction, no one knows better than yourself; and it ought not to be indifferent to you that posterity too will know, that, in all your social relations, and in discharging all the duties of your sex, the whole tenor of your behaviour has been highly exemplary, and worthy of the most unreserved approbation: indeed, that it has been worthy of the wife of General Washington.

"With such consolatory reflections I bid you an affectionate adieu, in renewing the assurances of the great regard and esteem with which

I have the honour to be

Dear and respected Madam,

Your sincere friend,

And most humble servant,

D. HUMPHREYS.

"P. S. I request my best respects may be offered to all my friends with you and in your vicinity."

We here add a few extracts from this poem:—

"Oh, Independence of our western world,
Beneath whose banner broad in war unfurl'd,
With Washington I toil'd! beneath whose shade
With him beheld thy fruits in peace display'd!—
Say why such deep'ning glooms this day o'erspread
Thy annual feast, as for some dearest dead?

Say, lov'd Columbians! what these glooms bespeak?
Why paleness gathers on each alter'd cheek.
Why round the shore and o'er each inland heath,
Tolls from each village tow'r the bell of death?
Why stops the dance? Why cease the sounds of mirth?
What unknown sorrow saddens half the earth?
What means yon sable train in shadowy ranks,
That dimly moves along Potowmac's bank?
Why on my view ascends yon phantom bier?
I fear'd—ah, woe to me! too true that fear!—
Fall'n is the mighty—Washington is dead—
Our day to darkness turn'd—our glory fled—
Yes, that lov'd form lies lifeless, dark in dust—

Of patriots purest as of heroes first!

* * * * *

What talents rare, ne'er lent before by heav'n,

To him, the glory of his age, were giv'n?

What force of body, majesty of mind,

To make one perfect whole in him combin'd?

O'er his fine figure and distinguish'd face,

Life's rosy morn suffus'd cherubic grace;

While toils his sinews brace, his limbs dilate,

And arm his breast to brave the bolts of fate.

What peerless portion of th' Almighty's might Nerv'd the new chief, magnanimous for fight?

How o'er the rising race, by merit aw'd,

He look'd and mov'd conspicuous as a god?

* * * * *

What eagle flight can trace through regions far,

Th' immortal march of Washington in war?

Who sing his conqu'ring arms o'er York that shone,

And deeds surviving monumental* stone?

How cloud-hid batt'ries rain'd red bullets dire,

Volcanic mortars belch'd infernal fire,

While baleful bombs that buoy'd in ether rode,

Emblaze the skies, and, filled with fate, explode!

Till great Cornwallis, hopeless of relief,

Resign'd whole armies to a greater chief?

Then solemn thanks by blest Columbia giv'n,

With songs of gratitude, rose sweet to heav'n;

What though my lips no common fervour warm'd

To sing th' achievements that his arm perform'd;

"Though strong as when I follow'd where he led,

Toil'd in his sight, or with his mandates sped,

Or bore his trophies to our pow'r supreme,†

I sink beneath th' immensity of theme.

Yet might a muse that soars on stronger wing,

So vast an argument divinely sing;

Then should the numbers rise as heav'n sublime,

Defy the ravage of corroding time,

Make late posterity his deeds admire,

And raptur'd bosoms burn with more than mortal fire."

Among his shorter productions in verse are twelve sonnets:—I. "Addressed to my Friends at Yale College, on my leaving them to join the Army;" II. "On the Revolutionary War in America;" III. "On the Prospect of Peace in 1783;" IV. "On Disbanding the Army;" V. "On Life;" VI. "On a Night-Storm at Sea;" VII. "On a Calm Morning which succeeded a Night-Storm at Sea;" ‡ VIII. "On the Immortality of the Soul;" IX. "On the Death of Major John Pallsgrave Wyllys;" X. "On the Murders committed by the Jacobin Faction in the Early Period of the French Revolution;" XI. "Addressed to his Royal Highness the Prince of Brazil, on my taking leave of the Court of Lisbon, July, 1797;" XII. "On receiving the News of the Death of General Washington." Also the following: "Mount-Vernon: An Ode;"** "The Genius of America: "A Song;" †† "Elegy on Lieutenant de Hart;" "Epitaph on Colonel Alexander Scammel;" "A Pastoral from the French;" and several humorous and other pieces not here given.

* A monument was ordered to be erected by Congress, at York-Town, to perpetuate the remembrance of the surrender of Lord Cornwallis' army.

† Referring to the Continental Congress, to whom, (as will be seen on page 154) Col. Humphreys had the honor to bear from Washington, the British colors taken at Yorktown.

‡ "The two sonnets on a storm and calm at sea were composed on board the brig Sophia, a dispatch vessel of the United States, purchased by the American government to carry the author to Europe in 1795."

** Written at Mount Vernon, August, 1786. †† Written in 1787, during the insurrection in Massachusetts.

Y., Susannah Smith, of P., born in that town, 23 Apr. 1832, dau. of Thomas and Sophronia Julia (Abbey) Smith, of P. He died very suddenly, in Cleveland, Ohio, 26 July, 1882; and was buried in Buffalo, where he had resided for many years.
- From the various newspaper notices which appeared at the time of his death, we add the following:—
- His early life was passed in Oneida County, but he displayed an aptitude for business which was destined to draw him away from the quiet farming community of his parents, and to gradually place him in an active field of endeavor. He came to Buffalo, with his wife, in 1850; and bought a tract of timber land on Grand Island, from which he received stock for a wood-yard, which he conducted with much profit, before coal came into common use. Later, he started the spirit refinery which has since turned out so profitable an investment.
- He was a man of fine, large physique, excellently preserved; was active, shrewd and cautious in business matters; and to these traits his success was largely due. He was of very positive character, strong in his likes and dislikes, uncommunicative about his own affairs, but very genial with his friends. Children (born in Buffalo, excepting the youngest): (1) Nora,<sup>3</sup> b. 9 Oct. 1851; res. He was born 26 June, 1784, and was grandson of Nathaniel and Hannah (Moore) Filley, of Windsor. They settled in that part of Simsbury which is now Bloomfield,** where their children were born, excepting the youngest two who were born in Wintonbury.

"After the decease of his father, which occurred when he was twelve years old, he took the direction of the farm (on Cook Hill, Windsor) of which he subsequently came in full possession, retaining the same until his death. He was extensively engaged in both agricultural and manufacturing pursuits, and was highly respected by his fellow-citizens, having represented them several times in the State Legislature."†† He died in Bloomfield, Dec. 9, 1846, and was buried in the ancient burying-ground; his remains were afterward removed to the new cemetery, where a family monument is erected.

Mrs. Filley was distinguished as a woman of great worth and ability. She survived her husband many years, dying 16 April, 1868, æ. 83 years.‡‡ Children:

FAMILY 42.

493. Philander<sup>6</sup> Humphrey, M. D., [280] (Hon. Daniel,<sup>5</sup> Dea. Michael,<sup>4</sup> Dea. John,<sup>3</sup> Sergt. John,<sup>2</sup> Michael,<sup>1</sup>) was born 23 June, 1770, in Simsbury, Ct. He married in Hartland, Ct., May, 1799, Anna (dau. of William and Anna Burnham) Selby, a native and resident of Hartland, b. 9 Dec., 1776. He there settled in the practice of medicine; and is said to have died of croup, 9 Feb., 1823, aged 52 years. His widow resided, subsequently, with their son Darwin<sup>7</sup> Humphrey, at Granville, Ohio, and there died, 5 Sept., 1859, æ. 83 years.

The temperament of Dr. Philander, as well as of his brothers Chauncey and Dudley, partook largely of the nervous bilious,—predisposing them to occasional attacks of hypochondria. In his youth, Dr. Philander was a very successful school-teacher. After acquiring his profession his practice became very large, and many medical students studied under him, some of whom were afterward distinguished physicians. He was representative to General Assembly, 1813 (October session); 1814, '16, '18 (May session); 1820—(one annual session at this date). He had a full, fresh face and a tall, fine figure; abounded in fun and anecdote.

By the assistance of his wives—two noble women—he reared a large family to high character and usefulness. He was, like his brothers, a large, handsome man, and resembled them in countenance and disposition. He died in Hartland, 11 Sept., 1832, æ. 59 years. His widow died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Wilder, at Boonville, Oneida Co., N. Y., 1 Feb., 1870, at the advanced age of 90 years.

John*,<sup>2</sup> Michael,<sup>1</sup>) was born 11 Apr., 1774. He married, at Simsbury, Ct., 3 June, 1797,* Amanda (dau. of Benoni and Elizabeth Agard) Hills, of Torrington, Ct.,† b. 18 June, 1780. He was a man of great energy and enterprise, and in early life engaged extensively in the tin and sheet-iron business and manufacturing, at Winchester, Ct.‡ He met with reverses, and removed to Granville, Licking Co., Ohio; then to Columbus, O.,** where he engaged in the stove and hollow-ware business; by which, and by real-estate operations, he acquired considerable wealth. At the same time, he became greatly absorbed in the enterprise of an artesian boring for salt-water at Granville, Ohio, and was very sanguine of realizing a fortune from this source; but it proved to him a failure and a pecuniary loss. He was subject, at times, to extreme hypochondria and, imagining that he was about to die, he would resolve that he must go back to the old homestead to breathe his last. It is said that while residing in Granville, Ohio, he did return to Simsbury, to die in the old house in which he was born.

With all his business reverses and apprehensions of worse misfortunes, he lived to a good age—78 years—and died in Columbus, Ohio, 18 Dec., 1852, possessed of a large property. His widow resided with her sons at Etna, Licking Co., Ohio; and there died, 1 Dec., 1870. They were all tanners and sheet-iron manufacturers.

FAMILY 49.

"Two nephews of Colonel Humphreys represented him in the manufacturing business, and may have had considerable interest therein. The younger, William Humphreys, [Fam. 50, J.<sup>2</sup>] a fine young man as I first remember him—was the head of the counting-house, and, I think, cashier. The other, John, must have been a lawyer, for he was known as Judge Humphreys, and lived in one of the best houses in the neighborhood, a square white building that stands now on Falls hill, where the road that leads to Bungy crosses the highway. Judge Humphreys and his wife, an elegant, handsome lady, were great favorites with the Colonel, and were generally looked up to in the neighborhood as superior persons. He was one of the finest looking and most dignified men that I remember. Indeed, the whole Humphreys family were remarkable for great personal beauty, both in that and the next generation. Two of Judge John's daughters, Mrs. Canfield and Mrs. Pease, were beautiful and elegant women. A son of Mrs. Pease has not only retained the family grace of comeliness, but is now (1880) one of the first musical geniuses of the country.†"

Judge Humphreys was one of the selectmen of Derby in 1818, '19, '23, and '24;‡ was representative to the State Legislature in 1815 (May and October sessions), 1816 (May), 1817 (October), 1819 (May), 1822, 1824, and 1826;—the year of his death. There was only one session, the last three years that he served in this capacity. He was also Judge of the New Haven County Court.

No better description of his character can perhaps be given than that found in the inscription on his monument at Humphreysville:—

Here reposes

What is not immortal of the

Hon. John Humphreys

Who died June 29th 1826 aged 53.

In his domestic and social relations he was most exemplary.

In public life, his fellow citizens freely confided their dearest interests to his keeping.

In his character was blended the Philanthropist, the Gentleman and the Christian and his Spirit is now, (as those who knew him best have faith to believe) an inheritor of a Heavenly mansion.

Mrs. Humphreys survived her husband many years, and died 10 October, 1861, in Cleveland, Ohio.**

Children:

573. I. JOHN CURTISS,<sup>7</sup> born in 1804, Humphreysville, Ct.; was early placed under the tuition of Rev. Truman Coe, by whom many of the youths of Derby were educated.

* Hist. of Derby, p. 715. † Idem, p. 453.

‡ "John Humphreys" was selectman in Derby, 1815 and 1825. As "Junior" is not added to the name this may have been John Humphreys, son of James, of Derby. Esq. John Humphreys (father of Hon. John) [Fam. 26, J.] was living in 1825, but rather advanced in years to fill such a position.

** Many of the records relating to this family were destroyed in the Chicago fire of 1871.

At the age of twenty he went to New York as clerk to Elijah<sup>6</sup> Humphreys [Fam. 51, J.<sup>2</sup>] then a prominent merchant of that city. Soon after, the yellow fever broke out, and young Humphreys being attacked with symptoms of illness immediately returned to his home, where he was prostrated, for many weeks, with the fever in a modified form, from the effects of which he never fully recovered.

He was twenty-two years of age at the time of his father's death, and young and inexperienced as he was, it was thought best that he should carry on the mercantile business, in Humphreysville, in which his father had been a silent partner. Accordingly, he went to New York to buy goods expecting, as was customary, to make immediate payment for only a part of his purchases. When he asked for credit, the merchant prudently inquired concerning his references. He replied that he had not provided himself with any, but thought he could soon bring such as would be satisfactory. A gentleman, whom he had not before noticed and who was to him a stranger, stepped forward and said to the merchant, "I understand that this young man's name is Humphreys; and if he is not an honest man* he will be the first of the name I ever knew who was not; and I know them well."

December 25th, 1828, on Christmas eve, when the Episcopal church in Humphreysville was decorated and illuminated for that sacred festival, he was married to Thirza Riggs, who belonged to that family from which, eighty-nine years previous, his great-grandfather, the Rev. Daniel<sup>4</sup> Humphreys, had chosen such an excellent life-companion. The bridesmaid was the youngest sister of the bridegroom, Marianne<sup>7</sup> Humphreys, and the groomsman George<sup>7</sup> Sparhawk, his cousin, [Fam. 25 (309), J.<sup>2</sup>] a grandson of Daniel<sup>5</sup> Humphreys, Esquire, who was a brother of General David<sup>5</sup> Humphreys. Thirza<sup>8</sup> (Riggs) Humphreys was born 26 Oct., 1807, daughter of John<sup>7</sup> and Mary (Beecher) Riggs, of Derby, gr. dau. of John<sup>6</sup> and Elizabeth (Hawkins) Riggs, of D., and gr.-gr. dau. of Lieut. Joseph<sup>5</sup> Riggs, who was brother of Sarah<sup>5</sup> Riggs, wife of Rev. Daniel<sup>4</sup> Humphreys. [See Fam. 11; Chart II.—The Riggs Family.]

Three years after Mr. Humphreys' marriage, his health, which had long been delicate, was so far impaired as to induce him to go South to escape the rigor of a northern winter. After a tedious voyage, he arrived at Opelousas, La., where he soon died, in the winter of 1832, æ. 28 years. He had no children.

His widow married Dr. Joshua Kendall; and they resided (1875) in Humphreysville (now called Seymour), Ct.

574. II. JANETTE,<sup>7</sup> b. 12 Jan., 1807, Humphreysville, Ct.; married there, 22 Sept., 1825, Horace (son of Joseph† and Abigail Buel) Canfield, b. 9 Oct., 1794, in Salisbury, Ct., and for many years a resident of New York city.

In 1834 he, with his family, removed to Cleveland, Ohio, being attracted thither by the beauty of its situation on the border of Lake Erie, and by the opportunities afforded for enjoying prosperity and amassing wealth, which were then lying dormant; but by him fully realized and appreciated. Possessed of fine taste, and quiet, refined and pleasing manners, to these was united far-reaching thought. Deeply interested in public improvements, Mr. Canfield did much to beautify the city of

* "An honest man."—De Foe says, "He that lies buried under such an epitaph has more said of him than volumes of history can contain."

† Joseph Canfield, of Salisbury, Ct., was a lawyer distinguished for his abilities and eloquence. He was Speaker of the House of Representatives in Connecticut, at the age of 28 years; and died at the early age of 35. His wife, Abigail Buel, died in New York city, August, 1830, aged 62 years. She was a daughter of Colonel Buel, of Salisbury, of Revolutionary memory. At the breaking out of the war he raised a regiment and served until its close. His soldiers were paid in Continental money which was valueless. He took it from them and paid them in good money from his own purse. He was a man of handsome fortune and large benevolence.

Cleveland, especially by the planting of trees and the inducing of others to do the same; and its public square and broad streets still attest his wise fore-thought and his influence as a citizen.

The first article ever published, advocating a railway to the Pacific, is said to have emanated from his pen. It appeared in the Cleveland Herald, with many apologies from the editor, as it then seemed to border upon the wild and visionary. Other railways were also suggested by him, and the directions they were to take marked out. These have been built and are now carrying wealth and prosperity in their train.—He was not Utopian in his projects, but was in advance of the time in which he lived. He died 23 April, 1866, Canandaigua, N. Y. His widow res. (1883) in Stockbridge, Mass. Children:

She died 21 Jan. 1847, near Cincinnati, O.—“Richly endowed with those qualities that embellish domestic life and adorn and grace society,—bright, handsome, musical,—‘she sparkled, was exhaled and went to Heaven.’” They had no children.

Mr. J. M. Huntington graduated at Yale college; studied law, and practised in Chicago. He was Assistant Quartermaster during the Civil War, and was attached to Rosecrans Division. He died at Marietta, Ohio, about 1865, æ. 47 years 576. ii. Josephine,<sup>8</sup> b. 4 Oct. 1829, New York City; married, 13 Feb. 1862, Benjamin Franklin Smith, of Cleveland, O. Cultured and refined in manners, and having decided literary tastes, she is also kind and benevolent, deeply sympathizing with suffering and sorrowing humanity.

Mr. Smith was for many years connected with railroads; was at one time General Manager of the Red Line Transit Company, at Buffalo, N. Y., but has now retired from business. P. Hon. H. J. Canfield, in addition to his scholarly attainments, is an able writer, an eloquent speaker, and a popular lecturer. Mr. Samuel Lawrence (brother of Hon. Abbott Lawrence, Minister to England) said concerning him:—“His readings and recitations are unequalled.” In the Buffalo Commercial Advertiser we find:—“In addition to being a natural orator, Mr. Canfield is one of the most facile and agreeable writers we ever knew;” and in the Barrington Courier:—“The fine presence and faultless elocution of the speaker, and the skillful and eloquent treatment of his subject, give him a place in the first rank of lecturers.”

He was a member of the House of Representatives, in 1877, and of the Senate in 1878, in the Massachusetts Legislature. In 1877, he delivered a speech before the House in opposition to the bill giving women municipal suffrage, which commanded the universal attention of the members, and was afterward printed.

His wife, Janette (Coffing) Cable was daughter of John Churchill Coffing, of Salisbury, Ct., who was largely identified with the iron interest of New England. His name was originally Coffin, to which he added the letter g, and this has been retained by the members of his family. Tristram Coffin, who came to this country in 1642, is said to have been his ancestor.

In the prime of youth—beautiful and loved, Mrs. Cole died on the evening of the 23d inst., without a moment's foreboding of her fate. Though sudden, the end was painless;—life ceased quietly, as a light goes out. To all who knew her as she was in life—charming, bright, attractive—the picture may still remain in memory, unclouded by shadows of sickness or pain. Nature made her to enjoy society as well as to adorn it;—yet existence cannot be unfinished, incomplete, which like hers has gained the knowledge of a higher life."—Cleveland Herald.

 581. III. MARIANNE,<sup>7</sup> born 30 Aug., 1812, Humphreysville, Ct.; married in Cleveland, Ohio, 23 July, 1835, Sheldon (son of Isaac) Pease, of C., b. July, 1809, Derby, Ct., where his parents resided. He was formerly Managing Director of the Western Transportation Company, with headquarters at Buffalo, N. Y.; retired from business about 1870. Res. (1883) No. 433 Franklin Street, Buffalo, N. Y. Children (born in Cleveland):

582. i. Catharine Thompson,<sup>8</sup> born 7 Apr. 1836; died 28 July, 1837.
 583. ii. Alfred Humphreys,<sup>8</sup> born 6 May, 1838, like many members of the Humphreys family in England* and America, gave early indications of great musical talent. The more puritanical antecedents of his parents soon took the alarm on discovering that their son, if left to choose for himself, would become what seemed to them that most impractical and undesirable character—a professional musician; and, striving to counteract any such tendency, they placed him in immediate training for a course of classical study, and he was accordingly fitted for and entered, at the age of sixteen, as a student at Kenyon College, at Gambier, O., in the hope that in turning his mind into other channels, he might be induced to choose another profession. It was at this period, and during his vacations, that he also displayed an unmistakable talent for drawing and painting. Some of his pictures had attracted the favorable notice of a young German artist, who was about to return to his own country in order to further prosecute his studies, and who had observed with great interest the artistic tendencies of the young American student.

It was owing to his persuasion, and the plea of ill health, that young Pease obtained permission to be absent six months, with the privilege of returning and graduating with his class; but once in the Fatherland of his German friend, breathing an atmosphere where his musical nature quickly unfolded itself, feeling the stimulus and the fascination of the association with that music-loving people, he lost no time in addressing himself to the acquirement of the German language, and of placing himself under musical instruction. Having no hope, however, of a favorable answer to his request to devote his life to music, he did not write home of his occupation, but worked persistently, and only after receiving much encouragement from his teachers did he venture to make the request. His importunity brought him the consent of his parents, and he at last found himself at liberty to pursue the line of studies which nature, who never errs in her indications, had clearly marked out for him.

Theodor Kullak, the court-pianist of the King of Prussia, was the first master under whom Mr. Pease studied. From him he learned the different schools of piano music, from the elementary to the highest standard of playing.

Richard Wuerst taught him in composition, as he had been taught by Felix Mendelssohn; Weiprecht, director of military music in Prussia, instructed him in orchestral scoring, and the Berlin public soon became familiar with many of his compositions. Having thus laid the foundation of his future career, he returned to America with the happy presage of the success which he afterwards achieved. Not content, however, with his present acquirements, he almost immediately returned to Europe and spent nearly three years in study with Von Bulow.

The first song which we have from the pen of Mr. Pease is "Break, Break, Break," and the immense success of this truly artistic work established his reputation, and was quickly followed by others which have been received and admired by musicians in Europe as well as his own country. One of the most popular of his songs is "Hush Thee, My Baby," and the latest is said to have been "Johnnie is Waiting," published early in 1882. Nearly a hundred songs have thus become familiar as household words; and to the splendid interpretations of Miss Kellogg, Mme. Nilsson, Mme. Albani, Mme. Parepa Rosa, Miss Adelaide Phillips, Miss Anna Drasdil, Miss Cary, Mrs. Chas. Moulton, Mrs. Imogene Brown, Mme. Antoinette Sterling, Miss Henrietta Beebe and Mr. M. M. Whitney he is indebted for their almost world-wide celebrity.

Among his piano compositions are eighteen, from themes of "Lohengrin," "Aida," "Faust," "Crispino," "Huguenots," "Mignon" and other operas. These compositions have a high reputation, and place him as a writer in the front rank of American composers.

His orchestral compositions are equally famed. Among them, "A Reverie and Andante," "Andante and Scherzo Romanza," for brass and reed instruments, have been performed by Theodore Thomas in New York and other eastern cities. The most prominent and probably the best composition for orchestra which he issued was his "Grand Concerto for the Piano and Orchestra," written in 1875. This was soon after given in Philadelphia, during the Centennial Exhibition, by Mr. T. Thomas. At the conclusion, not alone the vast audience but the musicians applauded, and in the presence of the crowd assembled to hear it, the conductor extended his hand to Mr. Pease in congratulation, a compliment never before vouchsafed by him to a young composer.

As an American performer to an American audience he had no rival. He had mastered with great assiduity the varied difficulties of his chosen instrument, and had learned the secret of reaching the popular heart. "His electrical touch, his impetuous and brilliant technique, his broad and sweeping style, which alternated with infinite tenderness and delicacy of expression, together with an indescribable chic which pervaded all he did, held his audiences spell-bound," writes a well-known critic, and insured him a cordial and enthusiastic welcome wherever he made his appearance. He made a tour with the Ole Bull troupe, wherein he introduced the Haines Upright as a concert instrument—a bold undertaking, but the result confirmed his judgment by the voice of the press, and in 1880 he repeated the experiment in connection with Pond's concert combination.

Mr. Pease died, suddenly, July 12th, 1882, at St. Louis, Mo. The funeral services were attended at the residence of his parents, No. 433 Franklin St., Buffalo, N. Y., the Rev. Dr. Edward Ingersoll, rector emeritus of Trinity church, and the Rev. Dr. L. Van Bokkelen, rector, officiating. Several musical societies were represented, and many distinguished citizens united in paying honor to the deceased. The interment was at Forest Lawn Cemetery.

Mr. Pease resided, the last twelve years of his life, in New York City, where he was well known as a fine pianist and composer; was also a successful instructor in music. He was unmarried.

One writes concerning him:—"It was not my good fortune to know Mr. Pease intimately or meet him often, but even a casual acquaintance would at once detect the amiable, even affectionate nature which shone through every act and word. When rivals were mentioned, no word except of kindness and courtesy escaped his lips; and his charming and fascinating manners made him the beloved of every social circle which could claim his presence."

584. iii. Arthur Walter,<sup>8</sup> born 20 June, 1844; married in Buffalo, N. Y., 10 Jan. 1866, Julia F. (dau. of Stephen Van Rensselaer) Watson, of B. After five years of married life the young couple lost their lives, February 6th, 1871, by an accident on the Hudson River Railroad, at New Hamburg.

Mr. Pease was a young man of great promise. Tall, comely and graceful in form, tender and affectionate in his nature, he was full of noble impulses and unswerving fidelity to his friendships.

He was skilled in fencing and drawing, and manifested much literary feeling and ability, which often found expression in verse and song; and his almost girlish susceptibility was supplemented by qualities of the most sterling manhood.

Prior to his death, he had been engaged in business at Buffalo, N. Y. Child:

He was a bachelor, and boarded at Washington Hall. The author of The Old Merchants of New York City, is responsible for the following story of his marriage, viz: that he was taken violently ill with bilious fever, and his life only saved by the careful nursing of the sister of his landlord's wife. Upon recovering, he offered his hand in marriage to her, was accepted, and shortly after commenced housekeeping in very handsome style at No. 4 Murray Street, near Broadway. 608. Colonel Lyman<sup>6</sup> Humphrey, [390] (Ozias,<sup>5</sup> Esq. H Ezekiah,<sup>4</sup> Capt. Samuel,<sup>3</sup> Sergt. John,<sup>2</sup> Michael,<sup>1</sup>) was born 16 Nov., 1799, in the State of Connecticut. He married (1) 20 Apr., 1820, Margaret Southcard, who was born in 1800, and resided during the early part of her life in Philadelphia, Pa. Her parents are said to have been from New Jersey. She went to reside in Portage County, Ohio, about the same time with Col. Humphrey, and they were there married—in Deerfield, by Elder Swasey of the M. E. Church. She died in Conneaut, Ashtabula Co., O. He married (2) in Petersburg, Pa., 19 Apr., 1834, Elizabeth Everhart, b. 6 Nov., 1812, Zanesville, Muskingum Co., O., dau. of John Everhart, born in Centre County, Pa., 6 Aug., 1775, died 17 Jan., 1844, and his wife Rachel (Johns) born near Carlisle, Pa., 12 Mch., 1783, died 5 Oct., 1869.

Col. Humphrey settled at Deerfield, Portage County, O., about 1819, and was there engaged in his employment as a tanner and currier until 1838, when he removed to New Baltimore, Stark County, O., only a few miles distant, where he died 28 Aug., 1853, æ. 54 years. During his residence in Deerfield, he was successful in business, and was a very active and prominent citizen, holding various township offices; was for many years Justice of the Peace, and Captain and Colonel of the organized militia, in which he seems to have taken much pride and interest. After moving to Stark County, he was examined and admitted to the bar at Canton, Ohio, in 1840, and practised law till his death, being accounted a good lawyer at a bar of very strong men.

624. VI. JOHN EVERHART,<sup>7</sup> b. 12 Sept., 1840, in New Baltimore, O.; d. at Independence, Kansas, 25 Feb., 1880, æ. 39 years; was unmarried. We add the following tribute to his memory furnished by his brother Hon. Lyman U. Humphrey:—

“On September 12th, 1861, at Alliance, Stark Co., Ohio, the day he was twenty-one years old, John E.<sup>7</sup> Humphrey enlisted as a Union soldier in Company
 I, 19th Ohio Vol. Infantry, Col. Samuel Beatty. The regiment was in Buell's army, afterward known as the army of the Cumberland.

“At the battle of Shiloh, Tennessee, April 6th and 7th, 1862, he was wounded,
 • the ball finally lodging in a tin can full of sugar in his haversack, which we now preserve. This wound, and the exposure incident to that terrible battle, sent him to the hospital at Nashville, where he languished for months. He finally returned to his regiment, and served during the hard campaign of Buell against Bragg in Kentucky, which again broke him down, and he was discharged and sent home. But he partially recovered, so that he again volunteered, in the spring of 1864, in Battery I, 1st Ohio Light Artillery, and was engaged in all the battles of the great Atlanta campaign of that summer. He served with his battery till the close of the war, and was discharged in July, 1865, coming home in feeble health. He finally died from the effects of his army service; and, though often urged, would never ask a pension. He was noble, generous, brave and patriotic, and freely offered his young life for the Union.”

Mr. Humphrey also gives this touching incident:—

“He and I were both at the bloody battle of Shiloh. I was with Grant in the first day's battle (Sunday), and John came in with Buell the second day. The night of the second day's battle, we met around a camp-fire for the first time since leaving home,—both wounded, hungry, foot-sore, weary, mid the sad surroundings of that great battle-field, each glad to find the other alive,—and talked of mother, home and duty, and of comrades that lay sleeping their last sleep upon the field.
 I shall never forget the impressions of that night's meeting. Twice afterward during the war we met upon battle-fields, in the Atlanta campaign. * * *

"I ought to say further concerning my brother that he had a fine mind, and, although his opportunities were meager, he succeeded in obtaining a good school education, which was supplemented by extensive reading and observation.

"He resembled his father;—was diffident in manner, kind in disposition, temperate and exemplary in habit, and had the courage to do his duty regardless of consequences."

636. IV. ANNIS,<sup>7</sup> b. 7 Jan., 1807; m. 2 Mch., 1826, Harry Terrell, b. 7 Apr., 1806, Waterbury, Ct., son of Ichabod and Rhoda (Williams) Terrell, of W., and brother of Ichabod, who married Sally<sup>7</sup> Humphrey. Mrs. Annis Terrell died 19 Aug., 1880.

The father of Harry Terrell exchanged his lands in Waterbury, Ct., for an undivided third of the north-east quarter of the township of Ridgeville, Ohio, and in October, 1810, settled with his family on this tract of land, then an unbroken wilderness. He was, therefore, but four years old when he began to encounter the stern realities of frontier life. He very early learned to use the rifle with unerring aim, and many were the trophies of deer, bears, wolves, etc., of which he and his brothers were the winners. He met with two very narrow escapes with his life, from wild animals, while hunting alone in the woods; but these incidents were quite common to all the early settlers.

His education was such as he could pick up in this pioneer settlement, where every one was battling to clear the soil of its dense forest. His arithmetic was acquired by figuring with a coal on the puncheon floor, his father being the instructor. Eager and quick to learn, he soon mastered reading, writing, etc., and was so much in advance of the other children of his age, that we find him, when nineteen years old, teaching their school.

* November 6, 1827, inventory of goods, &c., of Jewry Humphrey.—Hartford Prob. Records.

He was commissioned by Governor Allen Trimble as captain in the 9th Company, 2d Regiment, 2d Brigade, 9th Division, in the Ohio Militia, to rank as such from the 7th day of November, 1829. He held various offices of trust, both from his town and county. Elected Justice of the Peace in 1835, he continued for many years to fill that position for which he was so well qualified. Several instances are mentioned in which he adjourned court and went with the parties to their homes to effect a settlement and reconciliation. Among the German settlers he was known as "the man vot makes it all right." He was by occupation a farmer.

He was proverbially neat in his person and appearance, and correct and exact in everything he did. Always cheerful and social, in his later years nothing pleased him better than to have his house full of young people as visitors.

He died September 4th, 1864, at Ridgeville. His wife survived him, and continued to live for many years on the farm, and in the same house where they commenced their married life, and where he had lived since he was four years old.* Children (born at Ridgeville, O.):

- Mr. Terrell is a geologist, and much given to scientific investigations. In 1867, he discovered fossils called the great Ohio fishes, which were named Dinichthys Terrelli. They are plated ganoid fishes of the Devonian period. Since that time, by constant effort, he has discovered the Dinichthys Corrugatus, a large plated fish, the Diplog-nathus Mirabilis, with wonderful double-acting jaws, the Ctenacanthus Compressus,—a Devonian shark—two species of Cladodus, lower carboniferous sharks, and several species of fishes yet undescribed or named, entirely new to the scientific world. 755. Judge Daniel<sup>7</sup> Humphrey, [505] (Dr. Philander,<sup>6</sup> Hon. Daniel,<sup>5</sup> Dea. Michael,<sup>4</sup> Dea. John,<sup>3</sup> Sergt. John,<sup>2</sup> Michael,<sup>1</sup>) was born 26 July, 1814, in Hartland, Ct. He married, at Granville, Ohio, 11 Apr., 1837, Jane (dau. of Charles and Martha Wildman*) French, b. 27 Jan., 1816, Bristol, Ct. They settled at Newark, Ohio, where he engaged in the practice of law. He was for several years Prosecuting Attorney for Licking County, and was the first Probate Judge for his county under the new Constitution of the State. He was a successful and promising member of his profession; was an able political canvasser and eloquent stump orator. His early death, which occurred 15 Sept., 1859, at Columbus, was deeply lamented by a large circle of acquaintances. His widow res. (1883) at Granville, Ohio.

Children:

756. I. CHARLES FRENCH,<sup>8</sup> b. 20 July, 1838; was formerly a jeweler in Indianapolis, Ind. He res. (1883), within three miles of Loveland, Larimer Co., Colorado, where he had a sheep and cattle ranch; was unmarried.
757. II. BYRON PHILANDER,<sup>8</sup> b. 13 June, 1841, at Granville, O. In 1859, he first commenced railroading as a brakeman on the Pittsburgh, Columbus & Cincinnati Railroad; and, in 1860, was a fireman on the Central R. R. of New Jersey.

He enlisted in the army as a private, June, 1861, at No. 648 Broadway, New York, in Company K, 2d New York Vols., Harris' Light Cavalry, Colonel J. Mansfield Davies; and was mustered into the United States service 14 August, 1861. He was appointed recruiting sergeant and sent up the Central and Lackawanna Railroads to raise new soldiers to fill up company K, which was composed entirely of men employed on the railroads.

He served in the Army of the Potomac during the war, excepting ten months when he was a prisoner. He re-enlisted as a veteran, January, 1864, in the same regiment in which he first enlisted, and was once slightly wounded and three times taken prisoner:—first, at Cross Keys, Va., when he escaped with three others the same night; second, near Rockville, Md., but was paroled the next day at Elliott Mills, Md., the rebels being too hotly pursued to hold him longer; third, at Ream's Station, Va., while on a raid destroying all the railroad communications south of Richmond. Five hundred men (including two batteries of artillery) were taken prisoners and, at Petersburg, kept three days under the fire of Grant's guns; thence removed to Richmond, Va., and afterward to Andersonville, Ga., where Mr. Humphrey was confined seven months. The rebels becoming closely pressed, he was removed to prisons at Milan, Savannah and Thomasville, in Georgia; and finally paroled at Baldwin, Florida.

He was honorably discharged from the army, July, 1865, in New York City. He never received any promotion, excepting on the non-commissioned staff as corporal and sergeant; but may well be proud of his record as a soldier "without the star of a general."

After the close of the war, he resumed his former occupation, becoming a fireman on the Delaware, Lackawanna & Western Railway, and two years later receiving his appointment as an engineer. Was conductor, for three years, on the Kansas Pacific Railway, resigning that position to become Southern Passenger Agent of the Toledo, Wabash & Western Railroad, with headquarters at Dallas, Texas. He has been, for the last ten years, Western Passenger Agent of the Wabash, St. Louis & Pacific R. R.; and, in May, 1883, was appointed to a similar position on the Chicago and Atlantic Railway (which line is an extension of the New York & Erie R. R. from Marion, Ohio, to Chicago) with headquarters at Kansas City, Missouri, as in the former instance.—He is unmarried.

On the 7th of October, 1861, while attending school at Massilon, Stark Co., Ohio, at the age of seventeen years, Lyman U.<sup>7</sup> Humphrey enlisted as a Union soldier in Company I, 76th Regiment Ohio Veteran Volunteer Infantry. The regiment won a high reputation in the many battles in which it was engaged, and was cut down by severe losses to a mere squad when mustered out in July, 1865. The colonel, C. R. Woods, a regular officer, became a major-general and commanded the 1st Division, 15th Army Corps, Army of the Tennessee, to which (1st Brigade) the regiment was attached. The lieutenant-colonel, W. B. Woods, became brigadier-general, commanding the brigade. The major, Willard Warner, became a brigadier-general on Sherman's staff.

He served with his regiment during the entire war; was wounded, promoted to 2d and 1st lieutenant, and commanded a company. This regiment was engaged in the battles of Fort Donelson and Shiloh, and in the siege of Corinth, then marched to and occupied Memphis, Tenn., also Helena, Arkansas; was in the first campaign of Gen. Sherman against Vicksburgh, in December, 1862, the assault on Haine's Bluffs up the Yazoo river, and the assault and capture of Arkansas Post; in the spring of 1863, was in the operations against Vicksburgh on the Louisiana side, in all the subsequent battles and marches in the rear of Vicksburgh, up to and including the long siege and final capture on July 4th, 1863, and in the campaign immediately following against Johnson's army, the siege and capture of Jackson; in September, went with the command to Memphis, Tenn.; marched across the country to Chattanooga, Tenn.; was in the battle of Look-out Mountain, with the 1st Division (the other divisions having gone to attack the left, under Sherman); the next day was engaged on Mission Ridge and, the following day, 27 Nov., 1863, in the battle of Ringgold, where the regiment lost nearly fifty per cent. of its men, and Mr. Humphrey was wounded in the left arm. A few weeks later, the survivors re-enlisted for the war, went home on furlough for thirty days, and returned with many recruits to fill up the thinned ranks of the regiment. In the spring of 1864, entered upon the Atlanta campaign which, from May until September, was one constant struggle, including marches, skirmishes and battles, the more prominent being Resaca, New Hope Church, Kennesaw Mountain and the great battle of Atlanta, which was fought July 22d, 1864, where Gen. McPherson fell, and where the 76th Ohio made a gallant and successful bayonet charge, recovering from the enemy a battery of Parrot guns. Next engaged in the famous march of Sherman's army to the sea, the capture and occupation of Savannah; in the spring of 1865, was in the campaign up through the Carolinas, at the battle of Bentonville, which was soon followed by the surrender of Lee's and Johnson's armies; marched to Washington and participated in the grand review of the armies of the East and West; then went to Louisville, Ky., where Mr. Humphrey was discharged 19 July, 1865,—a few days before he became of age.

* James Cox Leonard was born in Whippany, Morris Co., N. J., and his wife in Covington, Ky. He was the son of Joseph Tuttle Leonard, born in New Jersey, 8 Aug. 1786, died in Rushville, Ill., 1 Nov. 1841, and his wife Catharine Combs (Bergen), born in New Jersey, 8 July, 1792. She was living in 1882.

The history of these battles shows that they were among the greatest and bloodiest of the war. The old "Army of the Tennessee" was victorious in every one of its campaigns. In all the engagements enumerated (save the first assault on the Yazoo bluffs in December, 1862,) victories were won for the Union. This was Grant's old army, and afterward Sherman's. In three battles over 50,000 prisoners were taken: at Fort Donelson, 15,000; at Arkansas Post, 6,000; and at Vicksburgh, 30,000. The old 15th Army Corps will ever be famous in the military history of the country. Its dead lie buried in every southern State from the Mississippi to the sea. Its deeds of valor mark every page of the history of those terrible years.

On returning from the war, Mr. Humphrey immediately began the study of law. He attended the Law Department of the University of Michigan; was admitted to the bar in 1868, and, in 1875, was admitted to practice in the Federal Courts. He went, with his mother and brother, to Shelby County, Missouri, where he remained two years, practicing his profession; was also engaged in editorial work on the Shelby County Herald. In the spring of 1871, he formed a law partnership with Col. A. M. York, and removed to Independence, Montgomery County, Kansas, where he established and edited, with others, the South Kansas Tribune, an influential paper still being published (1882). The partnership with Col. York continued and prospered till 1877.

In the fall of 1871, he was nominated for the legislature and defeated, on a local issue, by forty votes. In 1876-8, he was a member of the State Republican Campaign Committee; in 1876, was nominated by his party for the legislature, in a District which had been carried by the opposition several times, and was elected by a handsome majority; served on the judiciary committee and committee on the revision of laws. In 1877, he was nominated for the office of lieutenant-governor, heading the State ticket that fall, and was elected by a majority of 28,240 votes. In 1878, he was re-nominated by the State Convention for lieutenant-governor, and after an exciting canvass was reelected.* Besides performing the other duties of his office he presided over the Senate, and over the joint convention of the two houses during the memorable contest resulting in the re-election of John J. Ingalls to the U. S. Senate, in a manner so satisfactory that during his term of office there was not a single appeal from the chair; and at the close of the last session of the Senate, by a unanimous vote of that body, he was presented with a gavel, accompanied by a resolution expressive of the highest regard for his personal and official character:—

Resolved, That Hon. L. U. Humphrey, Lieut.-Governor, for his efficient use of the gavel—now in his hand—be, and he is hereby presented with said gavel as evidence of that fact.

Resolved, That our hearty thanks are hereby extended to Lieut.-Governor Humphrey, for the able, faithful and impartial manner in which he has discharged the arduous duties devolving upon him as presiding officer of the Senate, and we cordially assure him that he will carry with him to his home the kindest wishes of the Senate of 1879.

In 1880, a re-nomination was practically offered him, and since that time he has been urged to enter the lists for Congress and for the office of governor, but partly from business considerations and partly on account of indifferent health he has declined re-entering the political field.

He has delivered numerous addresses besides political speeches. In June, 1880, during the commencement exercises at the State University, he gave the annual address before the united literary societies. He also stands high in Masonic circles; and has frequently presided as Judge pro tem. of the District Court of Montgomery Co. Res. (1883) Independence, Kansas.

He married, 2 May, 1849, Susan Angier Ames, of Falls Village, Ct., dau. of Horatio Ames, of Salisbury, Ct. He studied medicine with Dr. Hubbard, of New Hartford, Ct., and, after some practice in New England, removed to Red Wing, Minnesota, in 1852, where he, his wife, and two children were murdered by the Indians. We copy the following account of the massacre at Lower Agency, Sioux Reservation, 18 August, 1862, from Bryant's History of the Great Massacre, by the Sioux Indians, in Minnesota, pp. 90, 91.

"Doctor Philander P. Humphrey physician to the Lower Sioux, with his sick wife, who arose from a bed of illness, and three children, also succeeded in crossing the river, but never reached the fort (Ridgely). All but one, the eldest, a boy of about twelve years of age, were killed upon the road, under the following circumstances. They had gone about four miles, when Mrs. Humphrey became so much exhausted as to be unable to proceed further, and they went into the house of a Mr. Wagner, which had been deserted by its inmates, they having gone to the fort. Mrs. H. was placed on a bed, the son was sent to the spring, in a ravine near by, for some water for his mother, while the husband and father watched at the door over the dear ones within (his wife and two small children). While at the spring, the boy heard the wild war-whoop of the savages break the stillness of the air, and, in the next moment, the ominous crack of their guns, which told of the fate of his family, and left him its sole survivor. Fleeing hastily towards Fort Ridgely, about eight miles distant, he met the command of Capt. Marsh, on their way toward the Agency. The young hero turned back with them to the ferry. As they passed Wagner's house, they saw the Doctor lying near the door, dead; but the house itself was a heap of smoldering ruins, and this brave boy was thus compelled to look upon the funeral pyre of his mother, and his little brother and sister. A burial party afterwards found their charred remains amid the blackened ruins, and gave them Christian sepulture. It is supposed the savage monsters burned them alive! In the charred hands of the little girl was found her china doll, with which she refused to part, even in death. The boy went on to the ferry and, in that disastrous conflict, escaped unharmed, and finally made his way into the fort."

957. Hon. Samuel Dwight<sup>8</sup> Humphrey, M. D., [766] (Lester,<sup>7</sup> Esq. Augustus,<sup>6</sup> Hon. Daniel,<sup>5</sup> Dea. Michael,<sup>4</sup> Dea. John,<sup>3</sup> Sergt. John,<sup>2</sup> Michael,<sup>1</sup>) was born 4 April, 1823, at Hartland, Ct. He married (1) in Albany, N. Y., 4 April, 1844, Mary Amelia (dau. of Benjamin and Sally Miller) Thompson, of A., born 18 June, 1824; died in Albany, 24 June, 1861, æ. 37 years. He married (2) in Morrisania, N. Y., 9 Oct., 1861, Helen Van Ness Williams, dau. of Cornelius Williams, M. D., of Hudson, N. Y., and his wife ——— (Van Ness).

Dr. S. D. Humphrey was a fair exemplification of that persistence, endurance and ingenuity which have long been regarded as constituting the Yankee character. His parents died while he was young, so that at the age of twelve he was obliged to depend upon his own resources. In 1839, he went from Hartland, Ct., to Albany, N. Y., and was afterwards, for two years, at Wilbraham Academy, where chemistry was one of his favorite studies. For several years he was engaged in photography, until Sept., 1850, when he settled in New York City, as editor of Humphrey's Journal of Photography, the first periodical on this subject published in the country, and which he successfully conducted for nine years. At that time he resided in Morrisania, New York. Resolving to adopt the profession of medicine, he attended the sessions of the New York Medical College in the winter of 1857-8,—attended three terms, and finally graduated at the Bellevue Hospital Medical College, in 1863. He removed shortly after to Patterson, Putnam Co., N. Y., and commenced practice. As a medical practitioner he was eminently successful, quick and very correct in judgment, kind and attentive to those who came under his care,—accomplishing a vast amount of labor, often riding 60 and 80 miles a day.

Though not an active politician, the Democrats, having experienced several defeats, nominated him for Assembly in 1868, and he was elected by a majority of 223 votes over the Republican candidate. He was chairman of the committee on Public Health, and Medical Colleges and Societies; but he made his mark, principally, by his zealous efforts to protect the interests of the farmers along the line of the New York and Harlem Rail Road, and to procure legislation for the reduction of the price for conveying milk on that road. Though dealing with a strong antagonist, he showed himself to be an adversary of no mean ability.*

He died 7 April, 1883, in Tower City, Cass Co., Dakota, æ. 60 years.

Mr. Humphrey entered the preparatory department at Oberlin, Ohio, in 1856, and the college in 1858. Owing to the fact that many members of the class of 1862 left their studies on account of the war for the Union, he did not graduate; but spent the greater part of that year in reading law, and was admitted to the bar in September, 1862. He then entered the Albany Law School, where he remained during the winter and spring of 1863. For a continuation of his history from this time we add an extract from a biographical notice which appeared in the Lansing Republican when he was appointed Deputy State Treasurer, September 1st, 1881, to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Charles H. Hodskin: "Mr. Humphrey was admitted to practice in all the courts of Ohio and the U. S. courts in 1863. He practiced law at Elyria until 1867, when he removed to Allegan, and soon became a member of the law firm of Williams, Pritchard & Humphrey. This partnership continued for two years, when Gen. Pritchard was re-elected land commissioner and withdrew from the firm. The partnership between Judge W. B. Williams and Judge Humphrey has continued until the present time. He was elected Judge of Probate in 1872, and held this position for eight years. At the beginning of the rebellion he assisted in raising company E, 42d Ohio, President Garfield's old regiment, and went to Columbus to muster, but was thrown out for physical disability by the examining surgeon. The selection is a good one for the responsible position of Deputy Treasurer, as Judge Humphrey has not only practical ability to fill the office, but he is an honest man."

We also make an extract from an article which was in the Allegan Journal at the time of his removal to Lansing to enter upon his new duties:

"It is with unusual regret that we announce the departure from Allegan, so suddenly determined upon, of Judge J. B. Humphrey. He has been a citizen of our town for a dozen years or more, and in every way has shown himself a man of admirable qualities. For several years he was director of the public schools [from 1873 to 1878,] and under his care our educational interests made excellent progress. He served two terms, eight years, as probate judge, in that capacity coming into contact with, perhaps, a majority of the people of the county, winning the good opinion of each one, while discharging with justice and perfect honesty his important duties. He is a genial companion, a steadfast friend, an honest and capable attorney, and in his new post has the good will and wishes of all Allegan people. Mrs. Humphrey also will be missed from a social circle which she did much to refine and make pleasant. Mr. Humphrey has been appointed by Gen. Pritchard, deputy state treasurer, and started Tuesday for Lansing, assuming his office Sept. 1. That the state treasurer made a wise selection time will certainly show."

When Judge Humphrey resigned his position, July 1st, 1883, and formed a law partnership with Mr. Ira E. Randall, of Lansing, under the firm name of Humphrey & Randall, the following was printed in the Lansing Republican:

"Judge Humphrey's ability as a lawyer is acknowledged, while the capital city may be proud to claim him as a permanent resident. He has performed the responsible duties of deputy treasurer for over three years with ability and fidelity. Mr. Randall is a rising young lawyer of this city who has made many friends by his industry and integrity of character. The new firm is possessed of all the requisites with which to build up a successful and honorable law business."

Judge Humphrey is a staunch republican and has done much to advance the interests of his party. P. O. address (1883) No. 113 Washington Avenue, North, Lansing, Mich.

"Mrs. Evarts has been a resident among us for fifteen years. Her previous home was Hartford, Ct. She was a lady of superior refinement and intellectual gifts, and was greatly beloved by those who were fortunate enough to know her intimately. Until prevented by ill-health and family cares, she was prominent in every good cause. Especially was she active for years in the temperance reformation. She at one time occupied the position of Grand Worthy Vice-Templar of Kansas, and twice was she delegated by the Grand Lodge of Good Templars of the state to represent them in their national council. Her eldest daughter, Belle, preceded her to the better life by only a few weeks, and the surviving members of the family have the sincerest sympathy of the community in their double and peculiarly sad bereavement.

MICHAEL HUMPHREY, the Emigrant, according to the Genealogy given in the previous pages, has had, in the line of (and including), his eldest son JOHN, 520 descendants, born by the name of Humphrey. In the second generation (John) one son; in the third, five sons, two daughters,—total 7. In the fourth, eleven sons, eleven daughters,—total 22. In the fifth, twenty-seven sons, twenty-five daughters,—total 52. In the sixth, fifty-four sons, forty-eight daughters,—total 102. In the seventh, sixty-three sons, sixty-three daughters,—total 126. In the eighth, seventy sons, fifty-eight daughters,—total 128. In the ninth, forty-one sons, thirty-four daughters,—total 75. In the tenth, seven sons, no daughters,—total 7. TOTAL 520 born Humphreys.

Of these, twenty-two were representatives in the Legislature of Connecticut, or of other States; one was Lieutenant-Governor; three, Judges of County Courts; three, Judges of Probate Courts; one, a United States District Attorney; one, a Deputy State Treasurer; one, a United States Plenipotentiary; one, a Delegate to the Convention for ratifying the Federal Constitution. Seven were Justices of the Peace; two for the term of twenty-five years each; one for the term of twenty-one years; and one for the term of twelve years; nine were Selectmen; five, Town Clerks; three, church Deacons; and one, a Clergyman; four were graduates of Yale College, one having the title of LL. D.; seven were physicians; and five, authors.

There were nineteen having military titles, of whom, five were of the rank of Captain; two, Major; two, Lieutenant; one, Ensign; two, Colonel; one, General; three, non-commissioned officers. Of these, ten at least, were in actual service; five in the old French and Indian Wars; four in the Revolutionary War; and six in the War of the Civil Rebellion.

There were, also, in the line of this John Humphrey (2), 751 descendants, children of the daughters of the family, and born by other names than that of Humphrey. In the fifth generation of these there were twenty sons, twenty-four daughters,—total 44. In the sixth, forty-three sons, forty-six daughters,—total 89. In the seventh, eighty-three sons, eighty-four daughters,—total 167. In the eighth, one hundred and nine sons, one hundred and seven daughters,—total 216. In the ninth, one hundred and eighteen sons, eighty-seven daughters,—total 205. In the tenth, nineteen sons, eleven daughters,—total 30. TOTAL 751 of Humphrey descent by other names.

Of these descendants in the female line, there were recorded two Doctors; four Clergymen; eight Physicians; one Editor; one Poet; one Musician and Composer; one Architect; and eight College Graduates. Five were in the U. S. Service, in the War of the Civil Rebellion (two of the rank of Colonel); and one in the Navy. One held the office of City Mayor.

Adding to the 520 descendants of the name of Humphrey, the 751 descendants of female Humphreys, we have a total of 1,271 (recorded) descendants from Michael Humphrey, the Emigrant, in the line of his eldest son John.

There are other descendants of Sergt. John<sup>2</sup> Humphrey (descended from some of those who have intermarried with the descendants of Lt. Samuel<sup>2</sup> Humphrey) who will be found in the pages following, and are not included in this tabulation.

NOTES AND QUERIES.

ADDENDA TO PAGE 16, PART I., ANTIQUITY OF THE HUMPHREYS FAMILY.

HUMPHREY THE BISHOP was a witness, about the year A. D., 604, to a deed of gift of Ethelbert, "King of Kent, of the Saxon race," of the manor of Tillingham to St. Paul's Church (St. Paul's Cathedral, London). [Carta Regis Æthelberti facta Ecclesie S. Pauli, de maneris de Tillingham. Signum manus Hunfredi Episcopi.*] Bishop Melitus was sent, about this date, to christianize the Britons, as the Pope feared they were going back to heathenism. It was while he was in Britain that this gift was made to the church.

It will be noted from the above that as early as A. D. 604 some of the HUMPHREY name had become established in England, and one of them had become sufficiently eminent to be the Bishop of St. Paul's, in London.

This, with other corroborative circumstances, would support if not confirm the inference that, at a date much earlier than the conquest of England in 1066, emigrations of Humphreys had been made from the old hive in the north, Norway or some portion of Scandinavia, where the original family of Humphreys was located. The name "Home-frei," Saxon, "Home freid" "Free homes," or as some have quoted it "peace-home," seems to point to the origin and status of the family. Theirs were known as "Free Homes" at a period when all Europe was in feudal bondage, and when every man was the serf or slave of some other man.

From this hive of "Free Homes,"—Home-frei, Saxon, or vrai, French, there were emigrations or forays making descents upon distant coasts and, as opportunity or inclination prompted, settling as conquerors or emigrants. In this manner the indications are that Humphreys had, early in the Christian era, settled in England and probably in Wales; and, at a later date, that of the partition of Normandy, another and perhaps more distinguished family or branch of the name settled in Normandy among those who gave to that portion of France its name, (Normandy.) During the residence of these chiefs and families in Normandy, the motto as shown in many of the French Humphreys arms—"Homme Vrai Aime son Pays," as given by Burke, would seem to have been adopted; the change from HOME FREID, Saxon, to HOMME VRAI, French,—free-man to true man—being one of those changes so slight in letter or sound as to be easy of adoption; and among these Humphreys were those of note who maintaining their power and influence, were distinguished in the Holy Wars, and accompanied as chiefs and retainers the Conqueror to England, and taking part in the same and in the early wars of the Plantagenet Kings became noted as the Humphreys of "the west of England."

It is quite probable that the earlier emigrations to England, and also to Wales, have resulted in a larger numerical body than the emigration from Normandy at the time of the Conquest, and we must regard them all as branches of the same common genealogical tree, however much they may differ in their present characteristics or more immediate origin.

I find no other interpretation which can so well account for the large number of the English, Welsh and French Humphreys, or for the very imposing number of the Humphrey arms, not less than sixty of which are duly recorded as matter of history.

A confidential letter written in cipher (in part, at least,) from the camp at Newburgh, contains the following relating to Col. Humphreys, which may be read with the account given on page 153.

"A most daring enterprise has been lately concocted at the quarters of the Chieftain here. It was no less than an attempt to take the Commander-in-Chief (Sir Henry Clinton) in his quarters in the city. A certain Col. Humphrey, one of the chief's Aid-de-Camps was to have gone down the river with a party, and land behind Kennedy's house,† and thence to proceed up through the garden and secrete themselves behind the house, while some were to advance on each side of it and seize the sentinels in the street, upon which a signal was to be given to those on the back of the house to crush in with crowbars and take his Excellency, with all his papers. Some traitors in the city were to know the night and hour of the attack, and were likewise to seize on the adjacent sentries on receiving the signal. To facilitate this mad project, a Captain's command was to land at Greenwich (Greenwich Village, now 14th Street) and march to Knypherson's quarters (north side of Wall St., near to cor. of William), as well for the purpose of making an alarm as for the purpose of seizing him. However romantic this may seem, yet I can assure you that it has been attempted to be put in execution. This Humphrey is quite sanguine of his succeeding at some convenient season. My authority is good, from no less than a General Officer."

—Magazine of American History, Vol. X., p. 413.

Weight of the Officers of the Continental Army, Aug. 17, 1783:—Gen. Washington, 209 pounds; Gen. Lincoln, 224 pounds; Gen. Knox, 280 pounds; Gen. Huntington, 132 pounds; Gen. Groaton, 166 pounds; Col. Swift, 219 pounds; Col. M. Jackson, 252 pounds; Col. H. Jackson, 230 pounds; Lieut.-Col. Huntington, 232 pounds; Lieut.-Col. Cobb, 186 pounds; Lieut.-Col. HUMPHRIES, 221 pounds.

An anecdote is related of Col. David Humphreys and Col. Trumbull, which illustrates the quick wit and humor of the former. Engaged in the familiar exercise of forming, first a couplet by one, to which the other joined impromptu another: Trumbull began, "The sun from his empyrean height Beamed down through the depths of the sea"; to which Humphrey replied: "The fishes cried out, beginning to sweat, Good heavens, how hot we shall be."

DESCENDANTS OF MICHAEL HUMPHREY, THE EMIGRANT, IN THE LINE OF HIS YOUNGEST SON SAMUEL.*

FAMILY 2.

2. Lieutenant Samuel<sup>2</sup> Humphrey, [6] (Michael,<sup>1</sup>) was born 15 May, 1656, in Windsor, Ct.* He married Mary (dau. of Simon and Mary Buel) Mills,† born 8 Dec., 1662, probably in Windsor, Ct.

Lieut. Humphrey became an influential citizen of Simsbury, having removed with his father from Windsor, about 1669, to that town, then called "the New Village Massacoe," which had formerly been "an appendix to the town of Windsor." During the seven years following, he and his brother John, who was six years his senior, doubtless encountered many trials and privations at the new settlement. These culminated in its destruction by the Indians in 1676, after the inhabitants had fled to Windsor for protection.‡

The next year, the appearance of danger from this source having diminished, many of the settlers returned to the "plantation" and among them Michael<sup>1</sup> Humphrey and his sons,—pioneers for the second time, the Indians having destroyed all the houses which had been erected and blotted out almost every vestige of the improvements which had been made. Samuel Humphrey was now about twenty-one years of age. We do not find much recorded concerning him during the next few years, when he was engaged in subduing the wilderness and in assisting to build up the little settlement anew. He may indeed be said to have grown up with the town; and through the discipline which he received in early life was, probably, the better fitted to become, as he evidently did become, one of its leading men.

May 7th, 1682, he was one of the signers of a document presented to the General Court, in which it was requested that Rev. Samuel Stow might continue his labors at Simsbury and that a church might be there gathered.** May 7th, 1683, he signed an agreement to decide by lot as to the location of the meeting-house, whether it should be on the east or west side of Hop River. He was a legal voter at that date. The church was erected in 1684. Samuel Humphrey and his wife both became members of the First Church, at its organization, and his name is frequently mentioned in connection with church matters.

He was a Justice of the Peace for several years;†† Representative of Simsbury in the General Assembly, in 1702, 1719, and 1722-25; was commissioned Lieutenant about 1709-10.‡‡ It is stated that when, in 1711-12, forces were sent into the county of Hampshire, Massachusetts, to oppose the movements of hostile Indians who had assembled at that place in considerable force, a part of a Company attached to the expedition was raised in the town of Simsbury, of which Samuel Humphrey was appointed Lieutenant. His commission, signed by Governor Saltonstall, is in the possession of one of his descendants.

Like his father, he had a talent for affairs, and we find him filling many other positions of trust and honor between the years 1685 and 1725. The Simsbury Records give the following:

* Lieut. Samuel Humphrey and his descendants have serial numbers distinct from those of John Humphrey and his descendants, beginning with the figure 2. The reference number 6 placed after the name of the former is his number as found in the record of the children of Michael Humphrey, page 112.

† Simon Mills married Mary (dau. of William) Buel, 23 Feb. 1659-60, thirty-nine years after the first settlement of Plymouth; and the tradition is that his father came from Yorkshire, England. Their date of marriage is given as 23 Feb. 1649, in Brown's Early Settlers of West Simsbury. In 1660, Mr. Mills was residing at Windsor; in 1669, he removed to Weatogue, or East Simsbury. Mary was the oldest child of Simon and Mary (Buel) Mills that survived to mature years.—Stiles' Hist. of Ancient Windsor.

†† Lieut. Samuel Humphrey was made Justice of the Peace in Hartford County, by General Assembly, May, 1712, 1714, 1715, and 1716.—Colonial Records of Connecticut, 1706-1716.

‡‡ He was commissioned Lieutenant in May, 1710, Idem, p. 145. He bears this title on the Simsbury Records, December 13, 1709.

Dec. 31, 1685, Samuel Humphrey was chosen collector; June 27, 1687, he signed the agreement settling "Mr. Edward Tompson" as minister of Simsbury; June 25, 1688, "Sam<sup>l</sup> & Michall Humphrey," with many others, signed the deed confirming the mill-lot to the owner of the mills; Dec. 13, 1690, he was chosen fence-viewer for the west side of the river.

In 1693, "Sergt Sam<sup>l</sup> Vmphri" was on the town list; town rate for that year—"Sam<sup>l</sup> Humphries," 13s. 4d. Dec. 17, 1694, he was chosen "select man;" Jan. 21, 1695-6, pound-keeper; 1696,—town rate for that year, "Sergt. Samuel Humphrey," 0-9-9-1; in Dudley Woodbridge's (the minister's) rate £1-18-0.—Feb. 1, 1696-7, he was chosen "ordinary keeper," also Feb. 2, 1697-8; chosen "lyster and fence-viewer" the same day, but declined to qualify.

June 20, 1697, "Serj. Saml Humphries, Serj. John Humphries & John Humphrie Jr." signed an agreement about the minister's wood. Dec. 31, 1697, he was chosen lister; Apr. 4, 1698, was chosen Ensign of Simsbury train-band.* July, 1698,—an "Account of those men that wrought about fraiming of [Rev.] Mr. Woodbridges Barn:" 5th day, "saml., John & Thomas Humphry;" 6th day, "John & Thomas Humphry;" 7th day, "Ensign Humphries, John & Thomas Humphris." In 1698, the town owed "Samuel Humphries 10 pence for a pint of rum for the men that cleared the minister's well." Jan. 26, 1698-9, he was chosen fence-viewer; 1699, "Sam<sup>l</sup> Huphres" was collector of the town rate; Dec. 20, 1699, and Dec. 20, 1703, was chosen selectman; May 20, 1700, and Dec. 8, 1705, "townsman;" 1701, lister.

May 6, 1707, he signed an agreement, with many others, to carry on the copper mines.† [See Fam. 17, S.<sup>2</sup>] Dec. 13, 1709, "Lieutenant Samuel Humphries" was fence-viewer for "Samon Brook field," and Dec. 18, 1710, "haward" and pound-keeper; 1712-1717, was Justice of the Peace. Nov. 7, 1712, Samuel Humphrey, "Sen.," signed an agreement about mines. Dec. 15, 1712, he was chosen tavern-keeper; also, May 18, 1713, Dec. 6, 1714, Dec. 15, 1715, Dec. 18, 1716, and Dec. 16, 1718. Aug. 23, 1714, "Sam<sup>l</sup> Humphry, Sen." witnessed a deed; and Jan. 10, 1714-15, he deeded land as one of a committee. The deed was acknowledged before "Samuel Humphris, Justice of Peace," perhaps the one who signed it, as only the other three members of the committee acknowledged it. Oct. 31, 1715, he was a member of a committee to confirm certain grants,—which was done. In October, 1717, his name was included in the list of freemen.

Lieut. Humphrey was the owner of various tracts of land obtained by deed of gift from his father, by grants from the town, and by purchase.‡

* "Samuel Vmphries" was made Ensign in Simsbury May 12, 1698; and was a deputy to the General Court from that town May 14, and in October, 1702.—Colonial Records of Connecticut.

† These mines attained a good degree of celebrity, as appears by a public act passed by the Colony in 1709. Some of the companies were composed of persons of great wealth and respectability. In 1721, miners from Germany were employed. The work continued to be carried on at various periods, until 1773, when the mines were abandoned, for the space of about half a century, for prison occupation. [See Fam. 65, S.; also, Fam. 3, J.] In 1830, they were again worked, and, in 1855, a new company was formed.—Phelps' Hist. of Newgate, pub. 1860.

JOHN HIGLEY, Com<sup>r</sup> for Simsbury.

March 4, 1699-1700, "Samuel Humphries," of Simsbury, bought of John Clarke part of his house-lot at "Weatouge." He already lived by the side of said land.

November 17, 1702, "Ensign Samuel Humphries" received a deed from James Cornish.

April 3, 1719, "Lieut. Samuel Humphri" and Simon Mills made an agreement about the division line of their home-lots.

"Samuel Humphries" of Simsbury sold to his brother John land which belonged to their father, west side of Mill Swamp: "as also his house lott: But now Since Our honord fathers Death hath fallen into Our hands and Possession." This was a division of the father's property, "March 19, 1695-6."

Lieut. Humphrey died in Simsbury, 15 June, 1736, æ. 80 years.* His will was dated 22 July, 1734. He gives his daughter Mary, £39.5.8; Elizabeth, £33.6.8; Abigail, £24.6.8; "the goods that he has given the three daughters, since the death of his well-beloved wife Mary, are to be applied on their portions;" mentions sons Samuel, Jonathan, Charles and Noah. * Sadoce, acc. to Early Settlers of West Simsbury. † We find on the Guilford Records (Conn.) the following:—"Jane Kelley was born 29 Sept. 1757, dau. of Reuben Kelley and Mary his wife. Samuel Leete and Mary Kelley (widow), both of Guilford, were joined in marriage by Mr. Jonathan Todd, minister, 23 July, 1761. Lucy Leete, dau. of Samuel and Mary Leete, was born 7 Jan. 1763."

In Early Settlers of West Simsbury we find the statement that "Samuel Leete was a native of Guilford, a descendant of Gov. Wm. Leete; he married Miss Kelley, of Guilford. They had four children born in Guilford; their names were Jane, who subsequently became the wife of Silas Case, of Canton; she died A. D., 1777, leaving an infant son, Kelley, who is yet living (1856). Samuel, Jr., born 1766, who married Sarah Case [See Fam. 6, S.]; Amos, born 1769, who married Cosmilly (dau. of Dea. Benjamin and Hannah Humphrey) Mills [Fam. 7, S.]; Lucy, who died in 1793. Mr. Leete, for second wife, married Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Barber;" she died in 1825, aged 85. He died in 1799, his last years being spent in Canton, Ct., to which place they had removed.

It appears from the Guilford Records that there are some errors in this account. Samuel Leete married widow Mary Kelley; and the daughter of Reuben and said Mary Kelley was the wife of Silas Case, viz., Jane Kelley, as given in Goodwin's Genealogical Notes, and also in Early Settlers of West Simsbury, in connection with records of the Case family.

29. Ensign Samuel<sup>3</sup> Humphrey, [14] (Lieut. Samuel,<sup>2</sup> Michael,<sup>1</sup>) was born 17 May, 1686, in Simsbury, Ct.* He married (1) 23 Feb. 1709-10,† Hannah (dau. of Joseph, 2d, and Mary Collier) Phelps,‡ of S., b. 25 Oct., 1693. She died in 1710, at the birth of her first child.** He married (2) 26 Feb. 1712-13,† Mary Tuller, b. 27 Nov. 1692, dau. of John Tuller, of S., and Elizabeth (Case), whose first husband was Joseph Lewis, of S.†† He married (3) Dec., 1714, Lydia (dau. of Nathaniel) North, of Farmington, Ct.‡‡ She died 8 Aug. 1730.*** He married (4) 31 Oct., 1731,† Mary Orton, of Litchfield (South Farms), Ct.

Mr. Humphrey at first settled in Simsbury, where three of his wives died, and where he married the fourth. He and his last wife were members of the Episcopal church and, before that order had other accommodations for worship, services were held at their house.

While a resident of Simsbury, he is said to have been a merchant trader, as his grandfather Michael<sup>1</sup> Humphrey had been, and to have transacted considerable business, which frequently called him to Boston. He was a man of good education for the times, and somewhat in the habit of writing. His name frequently occurs on the Simsbury Records, in connection with town offices and business transactions:

Dec. 18, 1716, "Samuel Humphris Jr. was chosen haward and pound keeper;" October, 1717, he was made "freeman;" and Dec. 26th of that year "Samuel Humphris, Lieutenants Sone" was "chosen colectar and for the gathering of the minesters and town Rats and also Chosen Cunstabel for the year in suin and Sworn sur vairs of highways;" Dec. 16, 1718, "Samuell humphris Sams son" was also chosen constable and collector.

January 19, 1713-14, "Samuel Humphrys, Jr." mortgaged to John Moor, land in "Long Meadow" at Weatogue, bounded partly on land of his father; May 20, 1714, was witness to a deed; and June 15, 1716, "Samuel Humphris Juner (son of Samuel, Sener) and Lyda Humphris, his wife," deeded land in "long meadow, at Weatouge, to Jonathan Humphris [Fam. 4, S.<sup>2</sup>]; acknowledged before Samuel Humphris, Justice." [Fam. 2, S.<sup>2</sup>] Feb. 21, 1731-2, "Samuel Humphrey 2d" gave a deed to his son Samuel; it was witnessed by John Humphrey, Jr., and Jonathan Humphrey, Jr., [Fam. 17, S.<sup>2</sup>] May 15, 1736, he deeded land that was "laid out to him in partnership with Samuel Humphry Johns son," [Fam. 6, J.<sup>2</sup>] Apr. 2, 1737, he gave a deed to his son Abel; March 19, 1739, "Samuel Humphrey, of Goshen," and Charles and Noah Humphrey, of Simsbury, sold to Samuel Pettibone, Jr., "land which belonged to their father Samuel Humphrey dec'd;" March 19, 1741, "Samuel Humphry, of Goshen," acknowledged the receipt of a valuable sum of money from his brothers Jonathan, Charles and Noah, for which he quitclaimed to them "all his right to certain lands of their honored father, Samuel Humphry of Simsbury, deceased"; at the same date he deeded land in Simsbury to David Phelps. [See Fam. 17 (189), J.<sup>2</sup>]

With regard to military affairs, we obtain the following from the Hartford Records:

March 18, 1723, "Samuel Humphris, as clerk," makes return of the choice of officers.* This was probably Samuel,<sup>3</sup> either the son of Lieut. Samuel<sup>2</sup> or of Sergt. John,<sup>2</sup> [Fam. 6, J.<sup>2</sup>] The son of the latter is often styled, on the Simsbury Records, "Samuel Humphrey, John's son" to distinguish him from the son of the former, as both were living in Simsbury at the same time and were very nearly the same age.

October 11th, 1725, Sergt. Samuel Humphrey was chosen "Ensign of the South Company, or train band."† The index gives, Samuel Humphrey was "chosen Ens. Mch. 18, 1723, cp. [captain?] M. 12, 1725;" but does not refer to documents. If these dates are all correct, the last statement may relate to Samuel,<sup>3</sup> son of John,<sup>2</sup> as his death did not occur until Sept. 20th, 1725, and he bore the title of "Captain."

Some difficulty appears to have arisen at a later date, when only Samuel<sup>3</sup> son of Samuel,<sup>2</sup> of the three just mentioned, was surviving. But as his son Samuel<sup>4</sup> had reached the age of 26 years, in 1736, we are in doubt to which of the two the following may refer:—"To the Honnerable Joseph Talcott Esq<sup>r</sup> these Lines are to Inform Your Honner that Ensign Samuell Humphry was Chosen Ens<sup>a</sup> in Capt: Benjamin Addams Company, and now by our Divission he fals in the South Company and he Refuseth to searue in his post and he hath not gott his Dismission nither and wee are vnder a Difficulty in this affair, and pray your Honners advice & Direction in the mater which is all at present from your hum<sup>le</sup> Ser<sup>ts</sup>

The Index gives: "Gov. T. says he belongs to Capt. Adams Co.¶"; but the endorsement is on the back of the document, which is pasted down and cannot be read.‡

About the year 1739, Ensign Samuel<sup>3</sup> Humphrey removed, with his wife and younger children, from Simsbury to Goshen, Ct., and settled upon a tract of land (one "right") which he had bid off at a division of lands at New Haven, March 9th, 1738. This land was located in the north part of the town, where he and his sons gave the name to the road on which they lived, it having been known as long as kept open, and till within a few years, as Humphrey Lane.†

* State Library, Militia, Vol. I., 1678-1729, Doc. 180; † Idem, Doc. 294; ‡ Idem, Vol. II., 1730-1740, Doc. 306.

† It was stated by Mary (dau. of Ashbel) Humphrey [Fam. 11, S.], and wife of Samuel Humphrey who built a house in Humphrey Lane [Fam. 45, S.], that the frame house built by Ensign Samuel Humphrey was on the west side of the highway—the fourth Humphrey house from the north on that side—and that it stood where the first log house had stood. The frame house on the east side was for his son David Humphrey.

When he left his old home, a large number of his friends and neighbors accompanied him as far as Farmington River (a distance of three miles) and there spent a night in prayer and praise. In the morning they bade him a kind and tearful farewell—never expecting to see him again in this life. The distance of his new home from Simsbury was about thirty-two miles! It is worthy of note that nearly all of his original purchase in Goshen is yet in the hands of his descendants. His great-great-grandson, Lemuel<sup>7</sup> Palmer [Fam. 45, S.<sup>2</sup>], was the owner of this property a few years since.

On the Goshen Records, under date 22 Nov. 1748, is an entry concerning Ensign Samuel<sup>3</sup> Humphrey's ear-mark for animals. This was transferred to his son Noah<sup>4</sup> Humphrey, 27 Dec., 1777.

Mr. Humphrey continued to reside in Goshen until his death, which occurred 16 Oct., 1759, at the age of 73 years.

In the traditions concerning him there is no personal description given, but, from what is known of the large stature, strength and stamina of his brothers and his sons, he is presumed to have been a large, athletic man.

In the summer of 1858, the writer* paid a visit to Mr. Lewis M. Norton, of Goshen [Fam. 4, S.<sup>2</sup>], to whom he had been referred as the best authority in matters of personal and local history pertaining to that vicinity; and from him was obtained, to a great extent, the account of this family, which he stated that he had mostly received, in February, or March, 1812, from David<sup>4</sup> (son of Ensign Samuel<sup>3</sup>) Humphrey. In a letter written by Mr. Norton in the autumn of 1858, he describes him as being, at the time when he furnished the history of his father's family, "about eighty-six years old, but having retained his faculties to a remarkable degree." He also adds as follows: "I received from him, at the same time, much other information concerning the early settlers in this town. His mind was vigorous and his memory remarkably retentive." The same was true of Mr. Norton, who was well known, in that region, as a most zealous and careful collector of genealogical records.

Another source of information which Mr. Norton had, and regarded as very reliable, was Mrs. Mylo<sup>5</sup> (Humphrey) Hamilton [Fam. 14, S.<sup>2</sup>], a granddaughter of Samuel<sup>3</sup> Humphrey. On this authority, in the cases where records and authentic history were lacking, the writer has not hesitated to correct differences of traditions by Mr. Norton's statements.

Rev. Grant Powers, A. M., in his address at the centennial celebration of Goshen, Ct., Sept. 28th, 1838, thus alludes to this family:

"Samuel Humphrey lived in Humphrey Lane. He was an original proprietor from Simsbury. He had eighteen children by four wives—ten sons and eight daughters; and his posterity are very numerous and have ever well-sustained the reputation of their worthy progenitor. Indeed, it is thought that the descendants of this Samuel Humphrey are more numerous, by far, than the descendants of any other man who ever lived in Goshen." Mrs. Hamilton always understood that there were nineteen children, and the child who died young may not have been included in the number given by Mr. Powers.

Owing to the distance and difficulty of communication across the wild and mountainous country, there seems to have been but little intercourse maintained between the older children of the family, who settled in and near Simsbury, and the parents and younger portion, after their removal to Goshen, and little knowledge of each other; and the compiler congratulates himself in having succeeded, from scant and scattered sources, in rescuing from loss the history of this remarkable family which, though lacking somewhat in chronology and details, is, as far as given, usually correct. Much additional and interesting matter pertaining to this family was doubtless contained in the early Parish Records of Goshen, which were lost through their removal by a pastor (so said) during certain ecclesiastical and parochial disagreements in the parish.

31. II. ABEL,<sup>4</sup> b. 13 Mch., 1714; m. Jemima Warner. FAMILY 8.

(By 3d marriage):

32. III. LYDIA,<sup>4</sup> b. 7 Nov., 1715; d. 1775, æ. 60; m. 19 Aug., 1737, in Simsbury, Ct., Capt. Daniel Wilcox.† They removed from Simsbury to Canton, Ct., where they were residing about 1750. He lost his property through an obligation of security for other persons. They had no children.‡
33. IV. ELIZABETH,<sup>4</sup> b. 9 July, 1717 (?); m. in Simsbury, 27 Oct., 1735, Joseph Wilcox,† of S., brother of Sergt. Ezra Wilcox who married Mary<sup>4</sup> Humphrey. He was born in 1706; was the oldest son of Joseph and Abigail (Thrall) Wilcox, of West Simsbury; and grandson of the first Samuel Wilcox of Simsbury. He removed to West Simsbury about 1738. His nephew Ezra<sup>5</sup> Wilcox, Jr., afterward owned the place on which he lived in that town. [See (44)] He died in 1759, æ. 53; was instantly killed by falling from a scaffold in his barn. He is said to have been a man of uncommon strength and resolution. He gave the land for the South Cemetery, in Canton.‡
34. V. EZEKIEL,<sup>4</sup> b. 28 Aug., 1719; d. 1795, æ. 75; m. Elizabeth Pettibone. FAMILY 9.
35. VI. TRYPHENA,<sup>4</sup> b. 29 Jan., 1722; ** d. 1752, æ. 30 years; was buried in the South Cemetery. This was the first interment in that burying-ground. She married, 11 June, 1739, ** Dr. Samuel (son of Samuel and Mercy Holcomb) Barber, of S., b. 1714; d. 1797, æ. 83 years. Mercy Holcomb is said to have been a granddaughter of the first Thomas Holcomb.

Dr. Barber resided in Canton, Ct., where he bore the reputation of a good citizen; was much skilled in the medicinal use of native plants. He was a celebrated and intrepid hunter. Mr. Brown, in his Genealogical Sketches of the Early Settlers of West Simsbury, relates an anecdote of his having once, while on a hunting excursion in Norfolk, pursued a large panther into his den, entered after him, driven him out and killed him—a feat not unlike, and quite as daring, as that of "Putnam and the Wolf."

Dr. Barber married (2) Hannah<sup>4</sup> (dau. of Capt. Noah<sup>3</sup>) Humphrey, and widow of John Case. [Fam. 6, S.<sup>2</sup>] Children (all of whom had children, excepting the 2d and 7th):

and respectable descendants are several whose names will long be remembered as associated with great and varied public interests.

We obtain the following from the Town Records:

December 20, 1714, "Jonathan Humphris" had a grant of land; was to pay £3; the survey was made Nov. 7, 1715; June 15, 1716, he received a deed of land in "long meadow, at Weatouge," from "Samuel Humphris Juner (son of Samuel, Sener) and Lyda Humphris his wife";—acknowledged before "Samuel Humphris, Justice." He owned land which lay "next to that his father bought of John Clarke." [See account of land owned by Lieut. Samuel<sup>2</sup> Humphrey, Fam. 2, foot-note.] November 22, 1718, he purchased land of Simon Mills. May 27, 1729, and Apr. 7, 1735, he received a deed of land from his father.

Mch. 19, 1741, his brother Ensign Samuel<sup>3</sup> Humphrey, of Goshen, Ct., acknowledged the receipt of a valuable sum of money, for which he quitclaimed to him and to his brothers Charles<sup>3</sup> and Noah<sup>3</sup> "all his right to certain lands of their honored father, Samuel Humphrey of Simsbury, deceased."

December, 1713, "Jonathan Humphries" was chosen "haward"; was sworn Mch. 19, 1714. May 20, 1714, he witnessed a deed; Dec. 6, 1714, was chosen "waywarden"; 1715-16, had an ear-mark for his cattle; Dec. 18, 1716, was chosen collector of the meeting-house rate; Dec. 26, 1717, was "remitted from gathering the sd Rats then dew to the town from Thomas Bakon and John Bell;" Dec. 16, 1718, was fence-viewer for the south end of the town.

Mr. Humphrey died 14 June, 1749, æ. 61 years.* Mrs. Humphrey died 10 Nov., 1761, æ. 63 years.†

FAMILY 5.

March 19th, 1741, Samuel Pettibone deeded property to his daughter Hepzibah, wife of Charles Humphrey. Mr. Humphrey received deeds of land from his father; 6 Dec., 1725, 20 Nov., 1727, and 7 Apr., 1735; at the date last-named,—together with his brothers, Samuel, Jonathan and Noah. March 19th, 1739, Charles Humphrey sold to Samuel Pettibone, Jr., land that formerly belonged to his father Samuel Humphrey, deceased. [See, also, Fam. 3, S.<sup>2</sup>]

Mr. Humphrey died between the dates 13 Feb. and 14 May, 1774. His will was dated Oct. 30th, 1773; inventory taken; amount, £457-10-6. Elisha Humphrey was one of the appraisers. [See Fam. 19, J.<sup>2</sup>] He mentions his wife Hepzibah; sons Charles and Sylvanus; gives £10 to be divided among his daughter Hepzibah's children; mentions, also, daus. Dorcas and Judith; children of dau. Caroline (names not given); gr. dau. Maria; and heirs of son Abraham. (Simsbury Prob. Rec., i., 148-9, 407, 413.)

Widow Hepzibah Humphrey, of Simsbury,—her will, dated Dec. 17th, 1789, was proved Feb. 3d, 1791, her son-in-law, Dudley Case, and grandson, Amaziah Humphrey, being the executors; mentions daus. Dorcas Case and Judith Case; grandsons Amaziah [Fam. 18, J.<sup>2</sup>], Abraham, Lot and Ralph Humphrey [Fam. 22, S.<sup>2</sup>]; grandson Ozias Phelps, "son to my granddaughter soffiah"; granddau. Sophia Humphrey; four grandchildren born to oldest daughter, deceased, Hepzibah Cornish, viz.: James and Elisha Cornish, Elizabeth Wilcox and Hepzibah Humphrey; gr. daus. Sophia Humphrey and Lois Case; two grandsons Sylvanus and Rufus Humphrey [Fam. 21, S.<sup>2</sup>]; three granddaus. "Carthaline (Caroline) Lovit," Hepzibah Wilcox and Dorcas Case, wife of Giles Case [Fam. 18, J.<sup>2</sup>]; granddau. "Moriah Nobles," [Fam. 16, J.<sup>2</sup>] (Simsbury Prob. Rec., ii., 231.)

109. I. HEPZIBAH,<sup>4</sup> b. 26 Oct., 1724; d. 25 Feb., 1755, æ. 30 years. She married, 25 Sept., 1740* (Simsbury Records), Elisha Cornish. He married (2) 31 Aug., 1755, Mary (dau. of Benjamin and Margaret Clapp) Dyer,† sister of Thomas Dyer, who married Azubah<sup>5</sup> Humphrey, [Fam. 7, S.<sup>2</sup>] He died 27 Apr., 1794, æ. 72 years. Children:‡

114. II. DORCAS,<sup>4</sup> b. 4 Feb., 1727; †† d. 17 June, 1805, æ. 78; m. 14 Apr., 1743 (Simsbury Records), Lieut. Dudley (son of Daniel and Penelope Buttolph) Case, b. 23 Nov.,

* Changed from 25 Sept. to 26 Oct. 1740, in Judge Barbour's MS.

† Simsbury Records and Hist. of the Early Settlers of West Simsbury.

‡ The four children here given are mentioned in the will of their grandmother Hepzibah (Pettibone) Humphrey.

"Children of Elisha Cornish," according to the Simsbury Records;—name of the mother not entered:

i. Hepzibah, b. 27 Aug. 1741.

ii. Elizabeth, b. 4 Nov. 1742.

iii. James, b. 16 Dec. 1744.

iv. Hepzibah, b. 8 May, 1746.

v. Elisha, b. 7 Dec. 1748.

vi. Dorcas, b. 11 Sept. 1750.

vii. Charles, b. 29 Sept. (18 Sept., O. S.) 1752; d. 6 Oct. 1754.

viii. Mary, b. 17 Feb. 1759.

We should think these were the children of Elisha and Hepzibah (Humphrey) Cornish, with the exception of the last one named who might be his child by i second wife Mary (Dyer), did we not find elsewhere on the Simsbury Records, "Elisha Cornish son of Elisha & Charity Cornish b. Dec. 7, 1748." Perhaps "Charity" was a mistake in the entry, but it leaves us in doubt concerning this matter.

FAMILY 6.

140. Capt. Noah<sup>3</sup> Humphrey, [28] (Lieut. Samuel,<sup>2</sup> Michael,<sup>1</sup>) was born in 1707, Simsbury, Ct. He married, 27 Apr., 1726 (Simsbury Records), Hannah (dau. of John, 3d, and Sarah Holcomb) Case, born about 1709. She was sister of John Case who married Abigail<sup>3</sup> Humphrey, [Fam. 2 (16), S.<sup>2</sup>] The names of Noah and Hannah Humphrey appear in the list of members of the Congregational church in Simsbury, 1777. She died 23 Sept., 1799.

He received deeds of land from his father, Dec. 1st, 1725, Aug. 9th, 1728, "the home lot," and Apr. 7th, 1735. April 2d, 1728, Noah Humphrey deeded land to his brother Samuel; Oct.

* Moriah, on Simsbury Records.

26th, 1728, these two brothers made an agreement with Samuel Pettibone which was witnessed by "Samuel Humphrey Sen.<sup>r</sup>" [See Fam. 5, S.<sup>2</sup>] Mch. 12, 1739, Noah Humphrey sold to Samuel Pettibone, Jr., "land that belonged to his father, Samuel Humphrey, dec'd."*

Concerning the enlistment of Noah Humphrey and his appointment as 2d and 1st lieutenant, the Hartford Records give the following:

"Names & Rank of such as were in last year campaign & now in the company of Capt. Aron Hitchcock. these were listed by ye Capt. himself & by Lieut. Humphrey." Among others:—

"Noah Humphrey sargt enlisted May 1;—half pay, £4-5-3-0." [Year not given;—1754-56, probably 1756.]

Appointments by Assembly, Feb., 1757:—

"Noah Humphrey's name is put in place of Samuel Welles, Jr., as 2d Lieut 3rd co. 1st Reg. Nathan Payson Capt."

"And Samuel Wille Jr. is put in place of Hez. Humphrey. [See Fam. 13, J.<sup>2</sup>]

"March 1758, Simsbury, Lieut. Noah Humphrey to be 1st Lieut. in 1st Reg. of Standing Militia;" under the same date: "Noah Humphrey 1st Lieut. of 8th Co."†

He was Captain of a company (recruited in and about Simsbury) of Colonel, afterward General Phineas Lyman's Regiment, and was with his Company at the capture of Havanna, in 1762. General Lyman, being the senior officer, had command of the entire Colonial force, composed of Connecticut, New York and New Jersey troops, and Lieut.-Colonel Israel Putnam commanded the Connecticut Regiment. The transport carrying a part of Lt.-Col. Putnam's command, including Capt. Humphrey's company, was wrecked on the coast of Cuba, but, afterward, without loss of life thereby, joined the forces before Havanna, and afforded important services in the capture of the place, on account of which, and subsequent sickness, "few ever returned to their native land again."

At the disembarkation, August 10th, the Simsbury Company consisted of forty-seven men—of whom twenty-two died before leaving the island, and some others deceased on the passage home. There were fourteen men in this company belonging to that part of Simsbury which lies within the present limits of Granby, all but two of whom lost their lives. These were Andrew Hillyer and Dudley Hays. There has been preserved a "Weekly Return" of this regiment, in the handwriting of Major Elihu<sup>3</sup> Humphrey, who was an officer in the Simsbury company and, as is believed, was adjutant of the regiment. [See Fam. 17, J.<sup>2</sup>] This return shows a melancholy picture of the condition of the forces, after their arrival at Havanna, and during their stay upon the Island, Aug. 10—Oct. 16. The expedition comprised eleven companies, numbering 802 men. On the 14th of August the number of troops returned as sick was 140; the next week, 343; Sept. 18th, 540! By Oct. 2d, only thirty-four men were returned as fit for duty, and at the last return, Oct. 16, the whole number was forty; in Capt. Humphrey's company but four. Up to this time, 342 deaths had occurred in the regiment;—some died on the passage home, and some were captured or shipwrecked.

In this campaign, a regiment of one thousand Irish veterans of the British army, under Col. Haviland, had but seventy alive when he left Havanna.

There is a tradition among the descendants of Capt. Noah<sup>3</sup> Humphrey that, in England, he was baronetted for gallantry in this campaign, though this is not, as yet, substantiated by history. He lived to a very advanced age; died in Simsbury, Ct., and was there buried.

‡‡ This statement may be erroneous. There is a tradition concerning "Manna" Humphrey, that he was a seafaring man and went to Havanna, taking with him his son, a lad aged fourteen years; that he was there killed, and that his son never returned to this country. This may relate to Emmanuel Humphrey (165), although Mr. Lewis M. Norton thought said Manna was a son of Ensign Samuel Humphrey, [Fam. 3, S.] "Manna" is given as a son of Capt. Noah Humphrey by Judge H. H. Barbour. This name is presumed to have been originally Emmanuel.

FAMILY 7.

About the year 1742, Lieut. Humphrey removed from the Old Parish to West Simsbury, now Canton, Ct., and settled in Suffrage District, near the residence of Esq. Oliver<sup>4</sup> Humphrey, [Fam. 18, S.<sup>2</sup>]

We learn from the Simsbury Records that, March 30, 1733, "Samuel Humphrey Jr. or 3d." gave a deed to his "honored father Samuel Humphrey 2d," from whom he had received a deed Feb. 21, 1731-2. He was made freeman 21 Sept., 1736. He is styled Lieutenant on the Hartford Probate Records and the Simsbury Records.

He died 7 July, 1755, æ. 45 years.‡ His will was dated June 3, 1755; mentions his "loving wife" (name not given); daughters Azubah, Mary and Hannah; sons Samuel, William and Theophilus; inventory taken,—amt. £291.15.1. The will was presented by the widow Mary Humphrey, as one of the executors, and proved Oct. 3, 1755; inventory exhibited by her Nov. 6, 1755, and account, Mch. 17, 1756. (*Hartford Prob. ## FAMILY 9.

Capt. Ezekiel Humphrey was representative to the General Assembly from Simsbury, in 1777 (May session). He died in 1795, æ. 75 years.† His will was dated April 8th, 1791, and proved April 25th, 1795; son George appointed executor. He names wife Elizabeth; sons Ezekiel, Frederick, Giles and George; grandsons Allyn and Henry, sons of his son Elijah, deceased; gr. dau. Chloe, dau. of Elijah; five daughters, viz: Elizabeth Case, Anna Humphrey, Chloe Humphrey, Lydia Pettibone and Betsey Humphrey. (Simsbury Probate Records, iii., 124, 125.)

Capt. Ezekiel Humphrey was a man of remarkable mental and physical stamina, and one distinctive mark of the family seems to have come conspicuously to the surface in him, and his immediate descendants. The New Haven Register of ancient date has the following, under the heading,—FOUR GENERATIONS OF CONNECTICUT GIANTS:

"Capt. Ezekiel Humphrey, who settled in West Simsbury in 1743, was six feet, four inches high. He had five sons that averaged six feet, two and a half inches high. Capt. Frederick Humphrey, one of the sons, who owned most of the land where Collinsville now stands, was six feet, four inches high and weighed about 350 pounds. He had seven sons, varying in height from six feet, one inch to six feet, four inches—average nearly six feet, three inches. Col. George Humphrey, another of the sons, had three sons from six feet to six feet, four inches. Hector Humphrey, one of his sons, president of St. John's College, Annapolis, Md., was six feet, four inches. Some of the descendants of Colonel George are now living—grandsons and great-grandsons—that are more than six feet high. It is rare that so tall a family can be found. Solon Humphrey, of New York, is a grandson of Colonel George, and is more than six feet high." These peculiarities, large stature, great physical strength and stamina, with courteous manners, render them worthy successors of their ancestors, the historic Humphrey Knights of old.

* Acc. to Hist. of the Early Settlers of West Simsbury.

FAMILY 11.

241. Ashbel<sup>4</sup> Humphrey, [59] (Ensign Samuel,<sup>3</sup> Lieut. Samuel,<sup>2</sup> Michael,<sup>1</sup>) was born 19 Apr., 1732, in Simsbury, Ct. He married (1) 16 Dec., 1761, Lois Caldwell, of New Hartford,* Ct. She died 13 July, 1771. He married (2) 14 Nov., 1771, Lurana Worcester, of Derby, sister of Naomi, wife of Charles<sup>4</sup> Humphrey, [Fam. 14, S.<sup>2</sup>] He married (3) Widow Amy Reed, of West Simsbury, Ct. After her death he married (4) in East Bloomfield, N. Y., 1810,—Burden. He married (5) in Harrisburgh, N. Y., 1811, Marion Hampson, of East Bloomfield, N. Y.

He at first settled in Goshen; after the birth of his daughter Lurana, removed to Winchester; and thence, in 1807, to East Bloomfield, N. Y., living with his daughter, Mrs. Lurana Beach, about two years; thence to Harrisburgh, Lewis Co., N. Y., where his son Ashbel had settled. In Goshen, Ct., Ashbel<sup>4</sup> Humphrey lived in Humphrey Lane, near the old place of his father; and professed himself an Episcopalian. He was a principal subscriber and mover in the building of the first Episcopal church in that place, in 1767.

He served with distinction as a private and officer in the Colonial Wars against the French and Indians.* On one occasion it is said that having, with a small party, been captured by the enemy, a war-dance was made by the savages, at which, seated in a small circle around a fire, the captives were being dispatched one by one, by the tomahawk, to emphasize and point their orgies. Ashbel<sup>4</sup> Humphrey and John Dowd, watching an opportunity, each seized a musket and rushed into the forest, followed by arrows, bullets, and yelling savages. Mr. Dowd saved himself by sinking his body up to his nose in a swamp, but Mr. Humphrey came into camp with nothing but his musket barrel, and covered with blood. [See Fam. 48, S.<sup>2</sup>]

He was very large, broad-shouldered and muscular, and, at the age of twenty-eight years, was believed to be the strongest man in Connecticut. A gentleman stated to the writer† that he had heard from reliable old men of Goshen, that they had seen Ashbel Humphrey stand astride of a timber forty feet long and squared ten by twelve inches, at its middle, and lift it entire.

He was greatly attached to the government of the mother country and, during the Revolution, was regarded as a tory. Before its close he had been repeatedly arrested and heavily fined, to the extent of one fourth of all his property, for non-observance of fasts and other enactments of the Continental Congress.‡ On one occasion he was imprisoned in Hartford jail, and was released through the interposition of his half-brother, Capt. Ezekiel<sup>4</sup> Humphrey, of Canton, Ct. He died at Harrisburgh, N. Y., May, 1813, æ. 81 years.

* See French war letters, p. 137. Rev. Grant Powers, A. M., in his Centennial Address, delivered to the people of Goshen, Ct., Sept. 28th, 1838, makes the following allusion to the services rendered by the men of Goshen in the fight at Lake George:

"The Connecticut troops were destined for Crown Point, under command of Maj.-Gen. Lyman. In August these troops reached the south end of Lake George, where they had their first battle with the French and Indians under Baron Deiskau. It was a hard fought battle, but the French were defeated, their General wounded and taken prisoner, and seven hundred of his troops left dead on the field. The loss of the Provincials was two hundred. Some men from this town were in that battle."

We add the following concerning Mr. Joshua Whitney who was at Lake George Sept. 8th, 1755, and is mentioned in the dispatch:

"Joshua Whitney removed from Canaan, and erected a frame house near where the meeting-house now stands," in the south part of the town of Norfolk. He was a legal voter there at the organization of the town in 1758, and first Town Clerk and first Justice of the Peace in the same year. "The first militia company embodied in this town was commanded by Lieutenant Whitney, who was afterward appointed captain when the company became full." (From a Brief History of the Town of Norfolk, Ct., by Auren Roys, Town and Ecclesiastical Society Clerk, 1847.)

Norfolk and Goshen joined, and North Goshen and South Norfolk are the same neighborhood; so we find persons generally reputed to have lived in Goshen located over the line in Norfolk, and there recorded.—O. M. H.

† Otis M. Humphrey, M. D.

‡ He so strongly favored the Royal cause during the Revolution, that he was obliged to take up his residence in Nova Scotia, until the war was over. His numerous brothers were staunch Republicans—"It will ever be acknowledged by those who were best acquainted with facts, and it should be made known to posterity, that the King of England had not in his extensive dominions subjects more loyal, more dutiful, or more zealous for his glory, than the Americans; and that nothing short of a melancholy persuasion that the measures which, for many years, had been systematically pursued by his ministers were calculated to subvert their constitutions could have dissolved their attachment to that kingdom which they fondly called their parent country. * * * America, thinly inhabited, under thirteen distinct colonial governments, could have little hope of success, but from the protection of providence, and the unconquerable spirit of freedom which pervaded the mass of the people. It is true, since the peace she had surprisingly increased in wealth and population; but the resources of Britain almost exceeded credibility, or conception. It is not wonderful then, that some good citizens of weaker nerves recoiled at the prospect; while others who had been officers in the late war or who had witnessed, by traveling, the force of Britain, stood aloof."—*Essay on the Life of Maj.-Gen. - ii. Cynthia,<sup>6</sup> b. 5 Apr. 1792; m. (1) in 1810, William (son of Col. William) Fuller, of Orwell. "He removed to the State of New York, and was a resident of Buffalo from 1812 until the summer of 1817, at which date he returned to Orwell, Vt., and died Oct. 15th, of the same year. During his residence in the State of New York he was pressed into the service of the United States, leaving his family alone and unaware of the predominant summons that had called him from his pioneer fireside. Long weeks thereafter he returned from the duties so urgent during the conflict of 1812, and heralded his approach at the hour of midnight by the discharge of arms, hearing which, the anxious mother exclaimed 'That's William,' and was soon overjoyed to greet her husband again.

* It has been stated that they were sisters of Gen. David Wooster who was born in 1710, and who fell in the Revolution, in 1777; but on examining the account of his family given in the History of Derby (Ct.) we do not find their names, and from the dates of their births it seems rather improbable that this was the case.

p. 253, foot-note.] In the Revolutionary War, he enlisted and served in the second company recruited in Goshen, in the summer of 1776, by consolidating the best material in the two militia companies then in that town; and which marched for New York about June 1st, of that year, under Capt. Medad (son of Benoni) Hills, and Lieut. Matthew Smith, of East Street, Goshen. In this company Mr. Humphrey was engaged with the British, on the same day of the "Orchard Fight" with the Hessians,—in which was the first Goshen company, under Capt. Goodwin,—the last-named engagement taking place only a short distance from them and a little later in the day. These men afterward saw much hardship, suffering, and sickness, in the war.

Mr. Humphrey was a man of good abilities and information. He was an Episcopalian till he united with the Friends, or Quakers, about 1788. It was his usual habit to pray with his family, till he was quite advanced in years. His death occurred in Goshen, about 1822.* His wife was a member of the Congregational Church in Goshen.

FAMILY 16.

386. Daniel<sup>4</sup> Humphrey, [75] (Ensign Samuel,<sup>3</sup> Lieut. Samuel,<sup>2</sup> Michael,<sup>1</sup>) was born about the year 1750, in Goshen, Ct. He married (1) Naomi Elmore, dau. of Daniel and Mary (Norton) Elmore,* of Farmington, now Avon,† Ct.; and settled on the homestead in Goshen, where he remained till after the birth of his fourth child. Subsequently, he removed to Weathersfield, Vt., at what precise date has not been ascertained, but the first record of his being taxed there is in the year 1789, and the last in 1797;—no record of any intervening tax. The assessments are the same, with the exception that at the first-named date he was taxed for a horse. Here his wife died, probably about 1792. He married (2) Widow Stiles, of Weathersfield, Vt., who died shortly afterward. He was married (3) 29 Sept., 1799, by Esquire Samuel Cobb, to Widow Lois Hardy (mother of Judge Hardy, of Glover, Vt.); “both of Weathersfield” (Weathersfield Records.) She soon after died, and he survived her but a short time. No children by the second or third marriage.

Daniel<sup>4</sup> Humphrey, when a young man, received an injury from a falling tree which disabled him, later in life, and, it is said, finally occasioned his death about the year 1800. Though unfortunate, he is described as a man of integrity, good natural capacity and correct habits.

Children (by 1st marriage):

387. I. DANIEL,<sup>5</sup> was the oldest child, but the date of his birth has not been ascertained. After the death of his mother, he went an apprentice to a chair-maker,—a man of violent temper, who, when in a passion, would beat the boy with a chair-post or any similar object most readily seized. The lad finally ran away and, subsequently, returned to Goshen, Ct., where he was known as “Little Dan,” and was, in 1869, remembered by Judge Noah Humphrey<sup>6</sup> Osborne [Fam. 15, S.<sup>2</sup>] as, for a time, employed by his father, who conducted a tannery and shoemaking; and, also, as * Daniel Elmore (perhaps son of Hezekiah “Elmer,” of Northfield, Mass.), is said to have resided in Farmington, now Avon, Ct., and to have removed to Weathersfield, Vt., and thence to Peru, N. Y., where he died. There is another statement made, that he resided for a time in Northampton, Mass. He married Mary Norton, who is said to have been of Weathersfield, Vt., before her marriage. She probably died in that town.

Mary Elmore, wife of Daniel Elmore, took a deed of about fifty-four acres of land in Weathersfield, Vt., in 1781; and Daniel Elmore took a deed of about two acres, at about the same time. Daniel Elmore deeded his land in 1795, and, the same year, Daniel Elmore of Weathersfield, Vt., Lot Elmore, John Elmore, Asa Elmore and Rhoda Stone of Peru, Clinton Co., N. Y., and Joseph Willard and Mary Willard, of Westminster, Vt., deeded the land formerly owned by Mary Elmore.—Weathersfield Records. Children:

These facts (with the exception of those obtained from the Weathersfield Records.) were furnished by Mr. Samuel E. Elmore, of Hartford, Ct. (1883), who is engaged in collecting records of the Elmore family for publication; and has succeeded in tracing his line of ancestry to Edward Elmer (Elmore) of Cambridge, who came in the Lion, arriving 16 Sept. 1632; went with Rev. Thomas Hooker, in 1636, to Hartford; removed to Northampton, and thence to Windsor; was killed in King Philip's war, 1676. The line of ancestry of Daniel Elmore has not yet been ascertained, but he may prove to be one of Edward Elmore's descendants.

The statement made by Mr. Elmore, derived from sources independent and distinct from this work, that Naomi (dau. of Daniel) Elmore married — Humphrey, is sufficiently conclusive as to her maiden surname, and convinces us that Mr. L. M. Norton was mistaken in supposing it to have been Preston.

† Avon was set off from Farmington in 1830.

having previously suffered the amputation of one leg from the consequences of freezing. A perceptible impairment of his faculties was attributed to the result of blows upon his head, inflicted by his former master. He was erratic and intractable. He afterward found his way to the home of his sister, Mrs. Rhoda Scoville, in the State of New York, in a very destitute condition. With sisterly affection, she clothed him and supplied his wants, and sought to content him with her home; but he soon wandered away and was never afterward heard of by his relations. It is not probable that he was ever married, or lived very long.

Joseph Fairbank, a Methodist minister, and died not long after, it is said, at Weathersfield, Vt. No children.

From the minutes of the N. E. Methodist Conference it has been ascertained that Rev. Joseph Fairbank was admitted to the Conference in 1805, and stationed at Magog, Vt. In 1806, he was stationed at Danville, Vt.; in 1807, at Weathersfield; and, in 1808, at Athens. According to the record for 1809, he was located, but no address is given. After this date, there is no further account of him. We have the statement, from another source, that he was located in Reading, Vt., and that he died in that town.

FAMILY 17.

399. Colonel Jonathan<sup>4</sup> Humphrey, [77] (Jonathan,<sup>3</sup> Lieut. Samuel,<sup>2</sup> Michael,<sup>1</sup>) was born 8 June, 1715, Simsbury, Ct. He married (1) 11 Jan., 1738-9,* Desire† (dau. of Sergt. John and Hannah Marshall) Owen,‡ b. 26 Feb., 1718. They settled in Simsbury, Ct. He was made freeman Sept., 1740. Mrs. Humphrey died 26 May, 1774, æ. 55 years.** He married (2) 6 Oct., 1778,†† Lois (Phelps) Viets, widow of Capt. John Viets. She died 12 Nov., 1810, æ. 92 years.

In the French war, 1756-7, a company was raised in the town of Simsbury, "for the protection of Crown Point" and other service upon Lake Champlain, of which company Jonathan Humphrey was appointed First Lieutenant. His commission, signed by Governor Fitch, has been preserved in the family of one of the descendants of Lieut. Samuel<sup>2</sup> Humphrey. From the Court Records, War, in Hartford State Library, we obtain the following: Jonathan Humphrey, of Simsbury, was appointed by Assembly, 1756-7, First Lieutenant of 1st Regiment, 6th and 7th companies. He declined to serve.‡‡ [See French war letters, p. 137.]

In Noah A. Phelps' History of Newgate Prison, it is stated that the General Assembly, in May, 1773, appointed Wm. Pitkin, Erastus Wolcott and Jonathan Humphrey, Esquires, a committee to examine the old mines at Simsbury, Ct., with reference to their being made a prison. This committee reported to the Assembly, at the October session of the same year, that they had purchased the lease of mines for that purpose.*** They were the committee for fitting up the same as a prison, and were also the first overseers appointed by the General Assembly of Connecticut. Mr. Humphrey, as overseer, signed his name "Joh'n Humphrey," 17 Jan., 1774.

He was selectman for the town of Simsbury; and Representative in the General Assembly, October, 1770, 1772, May, 1773, and October, 1774.

He was a Colonel in the Revolutionary war. "Col. Jonathan Humphrey of Connecticut" is mentioned in Hinman's American Revolution. It is there stated that he was appointed Lieut.-Colonel of the 18th Regiment, June 4, 1774, by General Assembly. March 20, 1777, his regiment (the 18th) then having two companies of 96 men each, i. e. 192 men, was one of the ten regiments sent to Peekskill, under Gen. Wadsworth, at the request of Gen. Washington. From a return of the 18th Reg. Mil., commanded by Col. Jonathan Humphrey, dated July, 1777, it appears that 264 men of this regiment were in service in the Continental line. There were twenty-one companies in the regiment, with an aggregate force of 1149 men, of whom over three fourths were from Simsbury. "Col. Jonathan Humphrey" was one of a committee appointed by General Assembly, May, 1775, to take care of and provide for officers, soldiers and their families.

Colonel Jonathan Humphrey died Sept. 13, 1794, in his 80th year.††† His will was dated March 26th, 1793, and proved December 10th, 1794; inventory taken December 19th, 1794; amount £1022-10-1. He mentions grandchildren; the children of his daughter Desire, deceased; and of his daughter Asenath, deceased, of whom was Asenath wife of David Phelps, Rowena wife of Calvin Barber, Ophelia, Sterling and Young Humphrey. [See Fam. 17. J.<sup>2</sup>] He names also his daughter Lodama and son Jonathan. (Simsbury Probate Records, iii., 1, 2, 3.)

*** These caverns were occupied as a place for the confinement of Tories about the beginning of the American Revolution. The number, at first, did not exceed five or six, and these were guilty of other crimes against the government; but it increased to between thirty and forty. Burglary, robbery and counterfeiting were punished, for the first offence, with imprisonment not exceeding ten years; for the second offence, with imprisonment for life. The prisoners were employed, to a considerable extent, at labor in the mines, until it was found that they could, and did, use their tools to dig their way out to liberty.—Hist. of Newgate.

407. Hon. Oliver<sup>4</sup> Humphrey, [79] (Jonathan,<sup>3</sup> Lieut. Samuel,<sup>2</sup> Michael,<sup>1</sup>) was born 13 Apr., 1720, in Simsbury, Ct. He settled in West Simsbury, now Canton, Ct., about 1742, and was the first magistrate of that town; was made freeman in Sept., 1746. He married, 28 Jan., 1744-5 (Simsbury Records), Sarah (dau. of Francis and Sarah (Mills) Tuller) Garrett, b. 1723; d. 8 Nov., 1821, æ. 98 years.** Francis Garrett was a Frenchman, and his wife was the daughter of John and Sarah (Pettibone) Mills, of Simsbury, Ct., and the widow of Samuel Tuller, by whom she had three sons. After the death of Francis Garrett, by whom she had five children, she married (3) Capt. Joseph Woodford, and died in her 101st year. A century sermon was preached to her by Rev. J. Hallock.

Esquire Oliver<sup>4</sup> Humphrey and his descendants have been influential and conspicuous members of the communities in which they have lived. He was a leading man in the public affairs of his town and the Colony; was representative to the General Assembly Oct., 1766, 1768, and May, 1769; was Justice of the Peace, 1770-1792.* He died 30 Oct., 1792, æ. 72 years.** The will of Hon. Oliver Humphrey was dated Mch. 21st, 1792, and proved Nov. 10th, 1792. He mentioned wife Sarah; sons Reuben and Asher; daughters, to whom he gave as follows: Sarah, Lois and Ruth, £12 each, over and above what he had already given them; Rachel, 20 shillings, above that which he had already given her; and Mary, Esther and Lavinia, £5 each, above what he had already given them. Elizabeth (dau. of Brewster) Higley was a cousin of the firm Governor Jonathan Trumbull of Connecticut, and was, during several years of her girlhood, a member of his family. Lieut. Mills was born in 1749; and died in 1813, æ. 64 years. He inherited the homestead in West Simsbury, where his father was installed pastor in 1759, and continued thirteen years. In 1800, he removed to Barkhamsted, Ct., where he spent the remainder of his life.
- He was an officer in the Revolutionary army, and was intrusted with the command who had in charge a large portion of the prisoners comprising Burgoyne's army. Children:
424. i. Ruth,<sup>6</sup> b. 1771; married, in Simsbury, Ct., 11 Feb. 1793 (Torrington Records), Owen (son of Capt. John† and Hannah Owen) Brown, b. 16 Feb. 1771, Simsbury, Ct.

* Died on board a prison-ship, acc. to another authority.

† Capt. JOHN BROWN, 3d, was a lineal descendant of Peter Brown who landed from the Mayflower, at Plymouth, Mass., in 1620. Peter Brown came to America single, and was by trade a carpenter. In the next thirteen years he was twice married. He died in 1633, leaving four children. His son Peter Brown, 2d, was born in 1632, and married Mary Childt, 15 July, 1658. He removed from Duxbury to Windsor, Ct., and died 9 March, 1691-2, aged sixty years; was buried at Windsor. His date of death is given by Mr. Redpath as 16 Oct. 1692, according to the inscription in the Windsor Church-yard. He had four sons, Peter, 3d, John, 1st, Jonathan and Cornelius. In 1694, they exchanged lands which had belonged to their father with the selectmen of the town of Windsor. John Brown, 1st, b. 8 Jan. 1668, Windsor; d. 4 Feb. 1728. He m. 4 Feb. 1691-2, Elizabeth Loomis, who died 11 Dec. 1723. They had eleven children, three sons, John, 2d, Isaac and Daniel, and eight daughters. Their fifth child, John Brown, 2d, was born 11 March, 1699-1700; m. 14 March, 1725, Mary Eggleston, who died 25 Aug. 1789, æ. 87 years. He died 3 Sept. 1790, æ. 90 years. Res. Bloomfield, Ct.

They settled in Norfolk, Ct.; removed, in 1799, to Torrington, Ct., and, in 1805, to Hudson, Ohio, of which he was one of the principal settlers. He was a tanner and shoemaker. Mrs. Brown died in Hudson, in 1808, æ. 37 years. He married (2) Sarah Root; m. (3) Abi Hinsdale.*

Mr. Owen Brown is described as possessing great firmness of religious character, and yet great kindness of heart. Rev. Dr. Fairchild, president of Oberlin college, writes: "He was a trustee of Oberlin college from 1835 to 1844, and then resigned in consequence of his growing infirmities. He was much esteemed by his associate members for his practical wisdom and staunch integrity." They had two sons, John, 3d, and Ezra, and seven daughters, of whom Mary, the eldest child, died unmarried, æ. 100 years. John Brown, 3d, the oldest son, was born 4 Nov. 1728; m. 2 March, 1758, Hannah Owen, dau. of Elijah and Hannah (Higley) Owen; gr.dau. of Isaac and Sarah (Holcomb) Owen; and gr.-gr.dau. of John Owen, of Windsor, Ct. He removed from Wintonbury (now Bloomfield), Ct., to West Simsbury, Ct., in the year 1755.

John Brown, 3d, was elected, in the Spring of 1776, Capt. of the 8th Co., 18th Reg. Mil. in the Colony of Connecticut. His commission from Gov. Trumbull bears date 23 May, 1776. The order of the regimental commander, Col. Jonathan Pettibone, under "An Act for Raising and Equipping a Body of Minute-Men, to be held in Readiness for the better Defence of this Colony," to enlist and organize his command into such a body, is dated "Simsbury the 11th Day of June, Anno Domini, 1776." The company was soon organized, and marched and joined the army at New York, where he died of dysentery, while in command, 3 Sept. 1776. He left a wife and eleven children, the oldest being but eighteen years of age. His widow died 18 May, 1831, æ. 91 years. Their descendants comprise some of the most able and influential men and women of our country.

Judge Heman Humphrey Barbour, [Fam. 67, S.] in his work entitled My Wife and My Mother, thus describes the sons whose names are given below. "My mother's uncles were much alike, and exhibited remarkable mental and moral qualities. Each was noted among his acquaintances for a retentive memory and power of recollection of past events, tenacity of opinion and principle, originality and independence of thought, excessive jealousy and unyielding prejudices, deliberateness, pithiness and pithiness of speech, and a remarkable power of sarcasm. In religion they were thoroughly Calvinistic in creed, and punctilious and scrupulous in practice."

Captain John<sup>7</sup> Brown, [18302] (grandson of Lieut. Gideon and Ruth<sup>5</sup> (Humphrey) Mills, and great-grandson of Hon. Oliver<sup>4</sup> Humphrey,) was born 9 May, 1800, in Torrington, Ct. When he was five years of age he went, with his parents, to reside in Hudson, Ohio.† He joined the Congregational church in that town when he was sixteen years of age; and soon began to study for the ministry. He visited his friends in Canton, Ct., and consulted Rev. Jeremiah Hallock (434) as to his future course. He advised him to prepare for college at the school of his brother Rev. Moses Hallock, in Plainfield, Mass. This school was, at that time, celebrated for graduating ministers and missionaries. But he was attacked with inflammation of the eyes, and obliged to give up study. He returned to Hudson, O., where he was a tanner and land surveyor until 1826, when he removed to Richmond, near Meadville, Pa., and there carried on the same vocations. While a resident of that town he became a member of the Presbyterian church, with which he remained connected until his death.

In 1835, he removed to Franklin Mills, Portage Co., O., where he mingled speculation in land with his tanning. He is also said to have built warehouses, and to have engaged in business on the canal and the Cuyahoga river; and was considered one of the most enterprising men in Northern Ohio. Owing to several unfortunate investments and the financial crash of 1837, he lost the property which he had accumulated.

In 1839, he entered upon a new pursuit, that of wool-growing and wool-dealing; and, in 1840, returned to Hudson, where his father still lived, and there engaged largely in sheep-raising. In 1842, he removed to Richfield, O., and, in 1844, to Akron, O., where he resided for two years.

Early in life he had been led "to declare, or swear, eternal war with Slavery;" but it is said that while tending his flocks in Ohio with his sons and daughters about him, he first communicated to them his intention of making a more physical demonstration against it. From this time forward he manifested that peculiar intensity and persistency of purpose concerning this object, which was one of his remarkable characteristics. It now became the grand aim of his life to accomplish the fulfilment of what he believed to be his special mission, and all his energies were directed to that end. He sought to amass wealth only to devote it to this cause.

In 1846, he removed to Springfield, Massachusetts, where, in the following year, his family joined him. He was there regarded as a quiet, modest man, of unswerving integrity. Hundreds of wool-growers in Northern Ohio consigned their stock to him to be sold at discretion. He endeavored, at this time, to initiate a system of grading wools before they passed into the hands of the manufacturers, but a powerful combination was formed against him which resulted in disaster. He shipped his wools to England, but found that the price in Massachusetts was better than in Europe. The amount of two hundred thousand pounds was sold in London for half its value, and then re-shipped to Boston.

About this time, 1848-9, he went to Europe on business connected with his merchandise; and also, with an eye to his future campaign against slavery. "He visited wool-markets and battle-fields in impartial succession, and took notice of the tricks of trade and the maneuvers of armies with equal interest." He was noted among wool-dealers for the delicacy of his touch in sorting the different qualities of wool, and his skill in testing them when submitted to him. If three samples of wool were given to him, grown in the States of Ohio and Vermont, and in Saxony, he would distinguish one from the other in the dark, by the sense of touch.

On his return home, in 1849, he heard of Mr. Gerrit Smith's offer to give land in Essex County, N. Y., to such colored men as would live upon it, and clear and cultivate it. By this time, a small colony had already gone to North Elba. Mr. Brown soon presented himself at the house of Mr. Smith in Peterborough, and after introducing himself made this proposal: "I am something of a pioneer, having grown up among the woods and wild Indians of Ohio, and am used to the climate and the way of life that your colony find so trying. I will take one of your farms myself, clear it up and plant it, and show my colored neighbors how such work should be done; will give them work as I have occasion, look after them in all needful ways, and be a kind father to them." Mr. Smith readily consented, and, it is said, gave him a tract of land for his farm. He soon removed from Springfield to North Elba, with his family, where they remained the greater part of the time between 1849 and 1862, and where they lived when he was helping to free slaves in Kansas, Missouri and Virginia. It is believed by some, that he went to North Elba in the hope of enlisting and drilling colored recruits for his company of liberators. This attempt at colonization proved a failure, but through no fault of John Brown.

At the Agricultural Fair of Essex County for 1850, a great sensation was created by the unlooked for appearance on the grounds of a beautiful herd of Devon cattle. They were the first that had been exhibited at the County Fair, and every one was surprised and delighted. The Report of the Society for that year contains the following reference to this event:—"The appearance upon the grounds of a number of very choice and beautiful Devons, from the herd of Mr. John Brown, residing in one of our most remote and secluded towns, attracted great attention and added much to the interest of the fair. The interest and admiration they excited have attracted public attention to the subject; and have already resulted in the introduction of several choice animals into this region. We have no doubt but that this influence upon the character of the stock of our county will be permanent and decisive." In corresponding with a gentleman, about this date, Mr. Brown writes: "I was several months in England last season, and saw no one stock on any farm that would average better than my own."

After the passage of the Fugitive Slave Law in 1850, his efforts were especially active in behalf of the fugitive slave, and in January, 1851, at Springfield, his old home, he formed an organization among the colored people, (many of whom were fugitives) to resist the capture of any fugitive, no matter by what authority. The members of this organization were by him called "Gileadites."

Soon after the repeal of the Missouri Compromise, which opened the broad prairies west of the Missouri river to slavery, was finally consummated on the 25th of May, 1854, five of the sons of John Brown, John, Jason, Owen, Frederick and Salmon, living in or near Akron, Summit Co., Ohio, made their arrangements to settle in Kansas, and established themselves in Lykins County, about eight miles from Osawatomie. The following year, 1855, their father, after removing his family again to North Elba from Akron, O., where they had resided since 1851, went to Kansas, not so much with the intention of settling there, as of fighting against slavery. Thoreau writes concerning him, and the training which he had received in past years:—"He did not go to Harvard. He was not fed on the pap that is there furnished. As he phrased it, 'I know no more grammar than one of your calves'. But he went to the University of the West, where he studied the science of Liberty; and, having taken his degrees, he finally commenced the public practice of humanity in Kansas. Such were his humanities—he would have left a Greek accent slanting the wrong way, and righted up a falling man."

Then followed years of struggle and of sacrifice, involving loss of property, imprisonment and death. The father and five sons, John, Owen, Frederick, Salmon and Oliver, rallied to the defence of Lawrence, in November, 1855. Soon after that town was taken in May, 1856, the two elder sons, John and Jason, were made prisoners and their houses burned by the Missourians, at whose hands they themselves suffered great indignities. On the 30th of August of the same year, John Brown acquired the sobriquet "Osawatomie Brown" by his famous defence of the town of that name against the invaders:—about four hundred armed men opposed by his little company of about forty. On the 21st anniversary of this fight, in 1877, a monument to Captain Brown and his men was dedicated at Osawatomie. It was on that day that his son Frederick fell, a martyr to the cause of liberty, though not belonging, at that time, to his father's force. In 1857, when John Brown returned to his home at North Elba, he took with him the old tombstone of his grandfather, Capt. John Brown, from the burial-place of his family in Canton, Ct. "On this he caused the name of his murdered son to be carved, with the date of his death: and placed it where he desired his own grave to be, beside a huge rock on the hill-side where his house stands, giving directions that his own name and the date of his death should be inscribed there too, when he should fall, as he expected to do, in the conflict with slavery."

He commenced his homeward journey in the last half of the year 1856, traveling with his four sons as companions. He was suffering from illness, and rode in a light wagon with his surveyor's instruments well displayed, a cow tied behind the wagon, and inside, concealed by a blanket, a fugitive slave whom he had picked up on the way. An order had been issued for his arrest, but the dragoons little suspected that the formidable fighter was so near them, until he was beyond their reach, having crossed the border into Nebraska. He went forward to Tabor, Iowa, where he remained a few weeks among friends; in November, he reached Chicago, and made himself known to the National Kansas Committee, then having headquarters in that city. He then traveled eastward, stopping at Peterborough and Albany, N. Y., Springfield, Mass., and Boston, Mass., which he reached early in January, 1857.

His appearance at this time is thus described: "He was close shaven, and no flowing beard, as in later years, softened the force of his firm, wide mouth and his positive chin. That beard, long and gray, which nearly all his portraits now show, and by which he will be recognized hereafter, added a picturesque finish to a face that was in all its features severe and masculine, yet with a latent tenderness in them. His eyes were a piercing blue-gray, not very large, looking out from under brows

‘Of dauntless courage and considerate pride.’

His hair was dark brown sprinkled with gray, short and bristling, and shooting back from a forehead of middle height and breadth; his nose was aquiline, his ears were large, his frame angular, his voice deep and metallic, his walk positive and intrepid, though somewhat slow. His manner was modest, and in a large company even diffident; he was by no means fluent of speech, but his words were always to the point, and his observations original, direct and shrewd. * * His figure was tall, slender and commanding, and his bearing military."

Concerning his character we have the following:

"Napoleon himself had no more blind and trusting confidence in his own destiny and resources; his iron will and unbending purpose were equal to that of any man, living or dead; his religious enthusiasm and sense of duty (exaggerated and false though it was) were yet earnest and sincere, and not excelled by that of Oliver Cromwell* or any of his followers; while no danger could for a moment alarm or disturb him. Though doubtless his whole nature was subject to, and almost constantly, for the last three or four years, pervaded by the deepest excitement, his exterior was always calm and cool. His manner, though conveying the idea of a stern and self-sustaining man, was yet gentle and courteous, and marked by frequent and decided manifestations of kindness; and it can probably be said of him, with truth, that, amid all his provocations, he never perpetrated an act of wanton or unnecessary cruelty. He was scrupulously honest, moral and temperate, and never gave utterance to a boast."

We are not surprised to read: "He inspired every one of his family with this heroic Christianity. His sons were all young fathers; John Browns, junior, every one. His son-in-law, also, was touched with the holy fire from the altar of the old man's soul." And again: "His sons and their friends (the Thompsons) formed the nucleus of his force in all his enterprises to liberate the slave;"—and in that which was to prove his last, and most heroic, they were not to be found wanting. It is not strange that children trained from the cradle to "remember those in bonds as bound with them" and to make sacrifices for the cause of freedom, should have manifested a singular devotion to the work, under the influence of so mighty an example. Even his lullaby song for his children, with which they were all sung to sleep in childhood, was his favorite hymn, "Blow ye the trumpet, blow," sung to the tune of old Lenox. His wife had been pledged to aid him to carry out his designs against slavery for many years.

He and his sons had borne most of the expense of their Kansas campaign, up to the time of his return in 1857, and now his special errand to the Massachusetts Kansas Committee, and * Among his favorite books were Napoleon and his Marshals and the Life of Oliver Cromwell, of whom he was a great admirer. others, was to provide at once for the defence of Kansas by carrying the war into the enemy's country. He said nothing concerning his project of making an invasion into Virginia, although it is evident that, about this time, he began to take more active measures for carrying out the plans which had been in his mind for so many years. Always thoughtful of the welfare of his family, he, in 1856-7, secured an addition to the two farms in North Elba on which his wife and his daughter Mrs. Thompson resided, several friends giving money for this purpose. In 1857, he engaged Mr. Charles Blair, of Collinsville, Ct., to make for him one thousand pikes, which were intended to be put in the hands of freed slaves, and which were carried to Harper's Ferry in 1859. In the autumn of that year he wrote to Theodore Parker: "My particular object in writing is to say that I am in immediate want of $500 or $1,000 for secret service and no questions asked." He also wrote to other friends, at a later date, asking them to aid him in raising money to carry out "an important measure in which the world has a deep interest;" again he calls it "the most important undertaking of my whole life." Early in 1858, he proceeded, with great caution, to unfold his plans to a few in whom he believed he could trust. These friends made many objections, to every one of which he had an answer; and finding he could not be turned from his purpose, they gave him money without probably fully comprehending his plan. We cannot go into details regarding the months that followed, in which he was in various parts of the country, obtaining money and recruits for his great work.

His first appearance in the neighborhood of Harper's Ferry, for the purpose of organizing his attack, was on the 30th of June, 1859. It is said that years before, while surveying professionally in the mountains of Virginia, he had chosen the very ground for his purpose; but there had been delays owing to difficulty in obtaining funds and recruits. His intention does not appear to have been to incite the slaves to insurrection and bloodshed, but to aid them in escaping from bondage, and to act upon the fear and prudence of the slaveholders by increasing their feeling of insecurity concerning the institution which he so deeply abhorred. Brown seems to have had no fears of a servile insurrection. He had been many years engaged in freeing slaves. He had associated with them in all ways and circumstances and knew well their character, and no doubt felt that he could prevent any and all excesses, if indeed, such restraint was required. Whether the attitude of the slaves at the South during the entire four years of the late war, when with every opportunity for revolt, they quietly kept the hearths and homes of their masters, is a confirmation of John Brown's position on this point, may be safely left to the judgment of history. He probably intended to make invasions, similar to the one he had made into Missouri in the latter part of 1858, though on a somewhat grander scale. It is not thought that the taking of Harper's Ferry and the Arsenal there was a part of his original plan. He doubtless argued that it would strike terror to the hearts of the slaveholders to have the place seized by an armed force. When he revealed his method of attack to his small band of twenty-two men, it is said that they declared it would be fatal to attempt it; but he was firm in the conviction that it could be accomplished. The time set for the attack was the 24th of October, 1859, which was afterward changed to the 16th of October, "as it was feared there was a Judas in the camp." Whether this was the case or not, Capt. Brown doubtless had his own wise reasons for the change. On this account some of his men failed to be present. Of his officers (of which he had a large proportion, as he intended to fill up with recruits), Watson and Oliver Brown were captains, Owen Brown, and William and Dauphin Thompson, lieutenants. We do not here propose to go into details, but will mention some of the leading facts, and those in which we are most interested.

On the 16th, Watson and his brothers, Oliver and Owen, received their orders from Captain Brown for the night attack. Watson Brown was, with Stewart Taylor, to hold the bridge across the Potomac; and Oliver Brown, with William Thompson, the bridge across the Shenandoah. This duty was performed by them until the morning of the 17th, at which time the village, with the armory and arsenal, had been quietly captured by Brown and his men. Owen Brown did not cross the Potomac; as he was ordered, with Francis Jackson Merriam and Barclay Coppoc, to remain at the farm as a guard till morning, and then remove the arms to a place decided upon previous to the attack.

One of the first duties assigned to two of the men, Stevens and Cook, after Harper's Ferry should be taken, was to proceed to the plantation of Bellair, belonging to Col. Lewis Washington and situated about four miles south of the ferry, seize him with his arms, set free his slaves, and bring him as a hostage to the captured town. It had been ascertained that he had in his possession the sword of Frederick the Great and the pistols of Lafayette, presented by them to General Washington, and by him transmitted to his brother's descendants; and when these were brought in Capt. Brown belted on the sword of Washington, doubtless remembering that our noble Commander-in-chief was one of the first to give liberty to the slave.—“When Virginia awoke on that October morning, the haughty commonwealth, mother of presidents and of slaves, beheld a gray-bearded old man, wearing the sword of Washington, standing amid the broken fetters of Virginia slaves, with a town of three thousand Virginians, white and black, at his mercy.”

It is supposed that John Brown's purpose was to hold Harper's Ferry a few hours, to get together some of the most influential citizens to be detained as hostages, and then move forward, with his followers, into the mountains of Virginia, with which he had been familiar for many years. There he could intrench himself and carry on a guerilla warfare; and he doubtless hoped for many recruits from among the slaves, who were so numerous in that neighborhood. Before nine o'clock in the morning it seemed to be possible for him and his men to escape from the town, but having delayed, for reasons of humanity,* until it was too late, they were surrounded and their defeat made certain. But John Brown did not surrender. Drawing back his shattered forces into the engine-house, which was near the armory gate, he with a few of his men made a brave resistance. Those who were at the rifle-works and the arsenal, and his son Owen, who was on the Maryland side of the Potomac, could not join him. Both Watson and Oliver were with their father. Watson had been mortally wounded in the morning, but fought bravely during the charge of the Virginia Militia in the afternoon, at which time Oliver was killed. Up to the close of Monday evening John Brown had successfully maintained his position, and although hemmed in by an overwhelming force, he is said to have shown no sign of fear. But this struggle could not long continue. On the morning of the 18th an entrance was forced into the engine-house, and Capt. Brown and his men were captured, their leader receiving two bayonet stabs and several cuts on the head from a sabre. Watson Brown lingered until the 19th, and died at three o'clock on Wednesday morning. Wednesday evening John Brown and the other surviving Liberators were lodged in Charlestown jail, and October 20th, formally committed to jail, there to await trial.

Long before he had written: “I expect nothing but to endure hardness, but I expect to win a great victory, even though it be like the last victory of Samson.” So, strong in the faith that God could make this seeming disaster a blessing to the cause he loved so well, he knew no defeat.

In reply to inquiries made a few days after his capture, prior to his trial, he said:—“I want you to understand that I respect the rights of the poorest and weakest of the colored people, oppressed by the slave system, just as much as I do those of the most wealthy and powerful. That is the idea that has moved me, and that alone. We expect no reward, except the satisfaction of endeavoring to do for those in distress—the greatly oppressed—as we would be done by. The cry of distress of the oppressed is my reason, and the only thing that prompted me to come here.” Concerning his sons Watson and Oliver he said that he had not pressed them to join him in the expedition, but he did not regret their loss—they had died in a good cause.

Some of his friends, anxious to save his life, suggested a plea of insanity. He replied:—“I look upon it as a miserable artifice and pretext of those who ought to take a different course in regard to me, if they took any at all, and I view it with contempt more than otherwise. * * * Insane persons, so far as my experience goes, have but little ability to judge of their own sanity; and, if I am insane, of course I should think I knew more than all the rest of the world. But I do not think so. I am perfectly unconscious of insanity, and I reject, so far as I am capable, any attempts to interfere in my behalf on that score."

During his trial, which was begun when he was so weak from loss of blood and his wounds that he lay on a cot in the court-room, not being able to stand unsupported, he preserved the calm demeanor and displayed the wonderful fortitude so peculiar to him; and when the verdict was pronounced: "Guilty of treason, and conspiring and advising with slaves and others to rebel, and murder in the first degree," he was seemingly unmoved.

When he was brought in to the court-room to receive his sentence, and the clerk asked him if he had anything to say why it should not be pronounced against him, in tender yet clear and manly tones he spoke as follows:

"I have, may it please the court, a few words to say.

"In the first place, I deny everything but what I have all along admitted, the design on my part to free the slaves. I intended certainly to have made a clean thing of that matter, as I did last winter, when I went into Missouri, and there took slaves without the snapping of a gun on either side, moved them through the country, and finally left them in Canada. I designed to have done the same thing again, on a larger scale. That was all I intended. I never did intend murder or treason, or the destruction of property, or to excite or incite slaves to rebellion, or to make insurrection.

"I have another objection: and that is, that it is unjust that I should suffer such a penalty. Had I interfered in the manner which I admit, and which I admit has been fairly proved—(for I admire the truthfulness and candor of the greater portion of the witnesses who have testified in this case)—had I so interfered in behalf of the rich, the powerful, the intelligent, the so-called great, or in behalf of any of their friends, either father, mother, brother, sister, wife, or children, or any of that class, and suffered and sacrificed what I have in this interference, it would have been all right, and every man in this court would have deemed it an act worthy of reward rather than punishment.

"This court acknowledges, as I suppose, the validity of the Law of God. I see a book kissed here which I suppose to be the Bible, or, at least, the New Testament. That teaches me that all things 'whatsoever I would that men should do unto me, I should do even so to them.' It teaches me further to 'remember them that are in bonds as bound with them. I endeavored to act up to that instruction. I say, I am yet too young to understand that God is any respecter of persons. I believe that to have interfered as I have done, as I have always freely admitted I have done, in behalf of His despised poor, was not wrong, but right. Now, if it is deemed necessary that I should forfeit my life for the furtherance of the ends of justice, and mingle my blood further with the blood of my children, and with the blood of millions in this slave country whose rights are disregarded by wicked, cruel, and unjust enactments—I submit: so let it be done.

"Let me say one word further.

"I feel entirely satisfied with the treatment I have received on my trial. Considering all the circumstances, it has been more generous than I expected. But I feel no consciousness of guilt. I have stated from the first what was my intention and what was not. I never had any design against the life of any person, nor any disposition to commit treason, or excite slaves to rebel, or make any general insurrection. I never encouraged any man to do so, but always discouraged any idea of that kind.

"Let me say also a word in regard to the statements made by some of those connected with me. I hear it has been stated by some of them that I have induced them to join me, but the contrary is true. I do not say this to injure them, but as regretting their weakness. There is not one of them but joined me of his own accord, and the greater part at their own expense. A number of them I never saw, and never had a word of conversation with, till the day they came to me, and that was for the purpose I have stated.

"Now I have done."

He then received his sentence with composure,—that he should "be hung in public, on Friday, the 2d of December, 1859." While awaiting the day appointed, he wrote the following characteristic letter, full of noble sentiments:—

CHARLESTOWN, JEFFERSON CO., VA.,
19th Nov. 1859.

REV. LUTHER HUMPHREY:

MY DEAR FRIEND, Your kind letter of the 12th instant is now before me. So far as my knowledge goes as to our mutual kindred, I suppose I am the first, since the landing of Peter Brown from the Mayflower, that has either been sentenced to imprisonment, or to the gallows. But, my dear old friend, let not that fact alone grieve you. You cannot have forgotten how and when our grandfather (Captain John Brown) fell in 1776, and that he, too, might have perished on the scaffold, had circumstances been but a very little different. The fact that a man dies under the hand of an executioner (or otherwise) has but little to do with his true character, as I suppose. John Rogers perished at the stake, a great and good man, as I suppose; but his being so does not prove that any other man who has died in the same way was good or otherwise.

Whether I have any reason to "be of good cheer" (or not) in view of my end, I can assure you that I feel so; and I am totally blinded if I do not really experience that strengthening and consolation you so faithfully implore in my behalf. The God of our fathers reward your fidelity. I neither feel mortified, degraded, nor in the least ashamed of my imprisonment, my chain, or near prospect of death by hanging. I feel assured "that not one hair shall fall from my head without the will of my heavenly Father." I also feel that I have long been endeavoring to hold exactly "such a fast as God has chosen." See the passage in Isaiah which you have quoted.* No part of my life has been more happily spent than that I have spent here, and I humbly trust that no part has been spent to better purpose. I would not say this boastfully; but "thanks be unto God who giveth us the victory, through infinite grace."

I should be sixty years old were I to live to May 9th, 1860. I have enjoyed much of life as it is, and have been remarkably prosperous; having early learned to regard the welfare and prosperity of others as my own. I have never, since I can remember, required a great amount of sleep; so that I conclude that I have already enjoyed full an average number of waking hours with those who reach their "three score years and ten." I have not yet been driven to the use of glasses, but can see to read and write quite comfortably. But more than that, I have generally enjoyed remarkably good health. I might go on to recount unnumbered and unmerited blessings, among which would be some very severe afflictions; and those the most needed blessings of all. And now, when I think how easily I might be left to spoil all I have done or suffered in the cause of freedom, I hardly dare wish another voyage, even if I had the opportunity.

It is a long time since we met; but we shall come together in our "Father's house," I trust. Let us hold fast that we already have, remembering we shall reap in due time, if we faint not. "Thanks be unto God, who giveth us the victory through Jesus Christ our Lord." And now, my old, warm-hearted friend, Good-by.

Your affectionate cousin,

COPY OF A LETTER WRITTEN BY JOHN BROWN TO REV. HEMAN HUMPHREY, D. D.

(The original was in the possession of the late Rev. Z. M. Humphrey, D. D.)

CHARLESTOWN JEFFERSON CO. VA.

REV. HEMAN HUMPHREY D. D.

My dear and much honored Kinsman, Your very sorrowful, kind, and faithful letter of the 20th inst. is now before me. I accept it with all kindness, and I got it yesterday. I have honestly endeavored to profit by the faithful advice it contains. Indeed such advice could never come amiss. You will allow me to say, that I deeply sympathize with you and all my sorrowing friends in their grief and terrible mortification. I feel Ten times more afflicted on their account than on account of my own circumstances. But I must say, that I am neither conscious of being "infatuated" or "mad." You will doubtless agree with me in this, that neither Imprisonment, Irons or the Gallows, falling to one's lot, are of themselves evidence of either guilt, "infatuation or madness."

* Isaiah lviii., 3-8.

† The above letter was written to his cousin Rev. Luther Humphrey, of Windham, Ohio [Fam. 67, S.]; and not published till four years subsequent to his execution, when it first appeared in the Cleveland (Ohio) Herald.

Charlottesville, Jefferson Co. Va. 19th Nov. 1859,
Rev Luther Humphrey

My Dear friend

Your kind letter of the 12th inst is now before me. So far as my knowledge goes as to our mutual kindred: I suppose I am the first since the landing of Peter Brown from the Mayflower that has either been sentenced to imprisonment, or to the Gallows. But my dear old friends; let not <sup>that</sup> fact alone grieve you. You cannot have forgotten how; & where our Good Father (John Brown) fell in 1776; & that he too, might have perished on the scaffold had circumstances been but very little different. The fact that a man dies under the hand of an executioner (or otherwise) has but little to do with his true character, as I suppose John Rogers perished at the stake a great & good man or I suppose: but his being so, does not prove that any other man who has died in the same way was good or otherwise. Whether I have any reason to be of good cheer (or not) in view of my end; I can assure you that I feel so; & that I am totally blinded if I do not really experience that strengthening; & consolation you so faithfully implore in my behalf. God of our Fathers; reward your fidelity. I neither feel mortified, degraded, nor in the least ashamed of my imprisonment, my chain, or my near prospect of death by hanging. I feel assured that not one hair shall fall from my head without my heavenly Father. I also feel that I have long been endeavouring to hold exactly "such a post as God has chosen". See the passage in Isaiah which you have quoted. No part of my life has been more happily spent; than that I have spent here; & I humbly trust that no part has been spent to better purpose. I would not say this boastfully; but thanks be unto God who gives us the victory; through Infinite grace. I should be sixty years old were I to live till May, 9th 1860. I have enjoyed much of life as it is; &

have been remarkably prosperous; having early learned to regard the welfare & prosperity of others as my own. I have never since I can remember required a great amount of sleep: so that I conclude that I have already enjoyed full an average number of waking hours with those who reach their "Three Score years, & Ten". I have <sup>not</sup> yet been driven to the use of glasses; but can still see to read, & write quite comfortably. But more than that I have generally enjoyed remarkably good health. I might go on to recount unnumbered & unmerited blessings among which would <sup>be</sup> some very severe afflictions; & those the most needed blessings of all. And now when I think how easily
I might be left to spoil all I have done, or suffered in the cause of freedom: I hardly dare risk another voyage; if I even had the opportunity. It is a long time since we met; but we shall now soon come together in our "father house", I trust. "Let us hold fast that we already have", remembering that we shall reap in due time if we faint not." "Thanks be ever unto God; who giveth us the victory through Jesus Christ our Lord". And now my old warm hearted friend "Good bye".

John Brown

I discover that you labor under a mistaken impression as to some important facts which my peculiar circumstances will in all probability prevent the possibility of my removing, and I do not propose to take up any argument to prove that any act or motion of my life is right. But I will here state, that I know it to be wholly my own fault as a leader that caused our disaster. Of this you have no proper means of judging, not being on the ground, or a practical soldier. I will only add that it was in yielding to my feelings of humanity, (if I ever exercised such a feeling) in leaving my proper place and mingling with my prisoners to quiet their fears, that occasioned our being caught. I firmly believe that God reigns & that he overrules all things in the best possible manner and in that view of the subject I try to be in some degree reconciled to my own weaknesses, and follies even.

If you were on the spot and could be with me by day and by night, and know the facts & how my time is spent here, I think you would find much to reconcile your own mind to the ignominious death I am about to suffer & to mitigate your sorrow. I am, to say the least, quite cheerful. "He shall begin to deliver Israel out of the hand of the Phillistines." This was said of a poor erring servant many years ago & for many years I have felt a strong impression that God had given me powers and faculties, unworthy as I was, that he intended to use for a similar purpose. This most unmerited honor He has seen fit to bestow, and whether like the same poor frail man to whom I allude, my death may not be of vastly more value than my life is, I think quite beyond all human foresight. I really have strong hopes that notwithstanding all my many sins, I too may yet die "in the faith." If you do not believe I had a murderous intention, (while I know I had not) why grieve so terribly on my account? The scaffold has but few terrors for me. God has often covered my head in the day of battle & granted me many times deliverances that were almost so miraculous that I can scarce realize their truth; and now when it seems quite certain that he intends to use me in a different way, shall I not most cheerfully go? I may be deceived but I humbly trust he will not forsake me "till I have showed his power to this generation & his strength to every one that is to come."

Your letter is most faithfully and kindly written and I mean to profit by it. I am certainly quite grateful for it. I feel that a great responsibility rests upon me as regards the lives of those, who have fallen and may yet fall. I must in that view cast myself on "the care of Him, whose mercy endureth forever." If the cause in which I engaged in any possible degree approximated to be infinitely better than the one in which Saul of Tarsus undertook, I have no reason to be ashamed of it, or indeed I cannot now, after more than a month for reflection find in my heart (before God, in whose presence I expect to stand within a week) any cause for shame.

I got a long and most kind letter from your pure hearted old brother Luther to which I replied at some length. The statement that seems to be going round in the papers, that I came on here to seek revenge for the wrongs of either myself or my family is utterly false. I never intended to convey such an idea, and I bless God, I am able even now to say, I never harbored such a feeling. See testimony of witnesses, who were with me, while I had one son lying dead at my side & another mortally wounded and dying on my other side. I do not believe Gov. Wise so understands me. I think he ought to correct that impression. The impression that we intended a general insurrection is equally untrue.

Now my much beloved and much respected Kinsman, Farewell. May the God of our Fathers save, and abundantly bless you and yours.

JOHN BROWN.*

Our history of the experiences of Capt. John Brown and his sons in Kansas is brief, owing to the scope of this work and the belief that many of the details of the struggle during the years 1855-59 are familiar to the public. But since going to press, an article has been published criticising the character and acts of John Brown while in Kansas, which has called forth a reply from the son John in defence of his father. The specific charge made relates to the part taken by Capt. Brown in the Potawatomie homicides, May 24th, 1856, the moral status of which can only be determined by taking into consideration the attending circumstances.

* The two letters, to his cousins the Rev. Luther Humphrey and the Rev. Dr. Heman Humphrey, seem to have been in answer to letters which they addressed him after his trial and sentence to death. It was an act of tender, kindness for these men to have remembered their kinsman in his low estate, and to have tendered to him in his imprisonment and bonds the gracious consolations of religion. It is doubtless true, that however much Dr. Heman Humphrey sympathized with the slave and abhorred the institution of slavery, yet he seems to have had no sympathy with the violent and revolutionary measures instituted by John Brown, and we may believe referred to them as something of "infatuation" or "madness," in his letter. That John Brown was more in harmony with the Rev. Luther Humphrey in the Western Reserve of Ohio at that date, than with the Rev. Dr. Heman Humphrey, at Amherst, Mass., expressing the conservative Congregational sentiment of New England, there can be no doubt. The first two were nearer to each other in many ways, and it was not unnatural that the latter two should have misunderstood each other. The letters, however, are characteristic and may be considered as the best summing up of the character of the man. The first letter (see fac-simile on the opposite page), was published, see note on p. 310. The second appears first in this work, the publication in the New York Tribune having been from our advance sheets.

John Brown gives an interesting account of his removal, with his four brothers, Jason, Owen, Frederick and Salmon, from Ohio to Kansas, in 1854-5, and of the arrival of his father, brother Oliver, and brother-in-law Henry Thompson, in 1855; the condition of affairs in that territory in 1855-6; the threatened attack upon Lawrence by hundreds of armed pro-slavery men; the murder of three Free State men; and the organization of a rifle company to "provide for the common defence," of which he was chosen captain Feb. 27th, 1856, and of which his father was a member. The border papers were at this time boldly proclaiming as their watchwords, "Death to the Abolitionists!" "War to the knife, and knife to the hilt!" They exhorted the faithful to be in readiness to again march into Kansas. Mr. Brown continues as follows:—

"Early in the spring, Colonel Buford, of Alabama, arrived with a regiment of armed men, mostly from South Carolina and Georgia. They came with the openly declared purpose to make Kansas a slave state at all hazards. A company of these men was reported to us as being encamped near the Maria des Cygnes River, a little south of the town now called Rantoul, I think, and distant from our place about two miles. Father took his surveyor's compass, and with him four of my brothers, Owen, Frederick, Salmon and Oliver, as chain-carriers, axman and marker, and found a section line which, on following, led through the camp of those men. As all government surveyors and other government officials whom these Southerners had heretofore met were known to be pro-slavery men, the disguise was complete and no questions were asked. * * * The elder Doyle was already there among them, having come from the Potawatomie, a distance of nine miles, to show them the best fords of the river and creek." The seeming leader of these men freely admitted, with oaths, that they intended to whip, drive out or kill, all the Abolitionists, such as the Browns.

Some weeks later, in May, 1856, Lawrence was taken by the Missourians, and Capt. John Brown, Jr., rallied the men of his company whose homes were mostly on Potawatomie and Middle Creeks. Word soon came that the force which had captured Lawrence had divided, and was engaged in the work of destruction and pillage in other parts of the territory; also that the Georgians, aided by the pro-slavery residents at Potawatomie, were driving out the unprotected Free State settlers on the creek.

"Up to this time Kansas had endured without retaliation, pillage, arson, and the repeated murder of her peaceable citizens. 'When smitten on one cheek,' she had 'turned the other, also.' It was now considered that whenever her relentless foes came to realize that they were to receive death for death, the day of her deliverance would begin. It was now and here resolved that they, their aiders and abettors, who sought to kill our suffering people, should themselves be killed, and in such manner as should be likely to cause a restraining fear. Father, at this time a member of my company, proposed to return with several of my men. At first I questioned the wisdom of reducing our numbers as we were near a superior force, but as he asked for only a few men no opposition was made. We aided him in his outfit. I assisted in the sharpening of his navy cutlasses. James Townsley who resided near Potawatomie Creek, volunteered to return with his team, and offered to point out the abodes or such as he thought should be disposed of. No man of our entire number could fail to understand that a retaliatory blow would fall, yet when father and his little band departed they were saluted by all our men with a rousing cheer. * * * The men my father caused to be put to death were of the sort which infested the border during the rebellion, or rather until hunted out and summarily exterminated, men who would be found on their farms quietly at work during the day, but at night would mount their horses, ride twenty miles, saw the timbers of a railroad bridge, letting down to destruction not only our troops, but women and children to a common death, and then ride back to their farms before the morning light. The Doyles, Wilkinsons and Shermans [to which families belonged the five men who were executed,] were furnishing places of rendezvous and active aid to armed men, who had sworn to kill us and others." * * *

"To the millions of our countrymen, who know of 'the furnace and the heat' in which 'was forged the anchor of our hopes,' may be safely committed for kindly care and keeping the memory of the John Brown who gave all he had to save Kansas and our Nation from the curse of human bondage."

We add also some of the opinions of the press:—

"It is too late in the day to make or refute such charges. Nobody can now restore Arnold's name to honor, nor consign Ethan Allen's, or Andrew Jackson's, or John Brown's to infamy for cowardice or cruelty. * * *

"The movement in Kansas to give John Brown one of the two statues which Kansas will send to Washington, has aroused the opposition of men who wish themselves or some of their friends to have the honor of such a statue.

"When the truth is fairly told the character of Brown will appear even greater and more tragical than it has hitherto been held."

From another source we have as follows:—

"The conduct of John Brown has been vindicated, his services to the cause of liberty recognized, and his name placed among the modern heroes of freedom, where it is beyond the reach of any assailant."

THE LAST LETTER WRITTEN TO HIS FAMILY.

CHARLESTOWN PRISON, JEFFERSON CO., VA., Nov. 30, 1859.

My Dearly Beloved Wife, Sons and Daughters, Every One: As I now begin what is probably the last letter I shall ever write to any of you, I conclude to write to all at the same time. I will mention some little matters particularly applicable to little property concerns in another place.

I recently received a letter from my wife, from near Philadelphia, dated Nov. 22, by which it would seem that she was about giving up the idea of seeing me again. I had written her to come on if she felt equal to the undertaking, but I do not know that she will get my letter in time. It was on her own account chiefly that I asked her to stay back. At first I had a most strong desire to see her again, but there appeared to be very serious objections; and should we never meet in this life, I trust that she will in the end be satisfied it was for the best at least, if not most for her comfort. I inclosed in my last letter to her a draft of $50 from John Jay, made payable to her order. I have now another to send her, from my excellent old friend Edward Harris, of Woonsocket, R. I., for $100, which I shall also make payable to her order.

I am waiting the hour of my public murder with great composure of mind and cheerfulness, feeling the strong assurance that in no other possible way could I be used to so much advantage to the cause of good and of humanity, and that nothing that either I or all my family have sacrificed or suffered will be lost. The reflection that a wise and merciful, as well as just and holy God rules not only the affairs of this world, but of all worlds, is a rock to set our feet upon under all circumstances—even those more severely trying ones into which our own feelings and wrongs have placed us. I have now no doubt but that our seeming disaster will ultimately result in the most glorious success. So, my dear shattered and broken family, be of good cheer, and believe and trust in God with all your heart, and with all your soul, for he doeth all things well. Do not feel ashamed on my account, nor for one moment despair of the cause or grow weary of well-doing. I bless God I never felt stronger confidence in the certain and near approach of a bright morning and glorious day than I have felt, and do now feel, since my confinement here. I am endeavoring to return, like a poor prodigal as I am, to my Father, against whom I have always sinned, in the hope that he may kindly and forgivingly meet me, though a very great way off.

O, my dear wife and children, would to God you could know how I have been travailing in birth for you all, that no one of you may fail of the grace of God, through Jesus Christ; that no one of you may be blind to the truth and glorious light of his Word, in which life and immortality are brought to light. I beseech you, every one, to make the Bible your daily and nightly study, with a childlike, honest, candid, teachable spirit of love and respect for your husband and father.

And I beseech the God of my fathers to open all your eyes to the discovery of the truth. You cannot imagine how much you may soon need the consolations of the Christian religion. Circumstances like my own, for more than a month past, have convinced me beyond all doubt of our great need of some theories treasured up when our prejudices are excited, our vanity worked up to the highest pitch. Oh! do not trust your eternal all upon the boisterous ocean without even a helm or compass to aid you in steering. I do not ask any of you to throw away your reason; I only ask you to make a candid, sober use of your reason.

My dear younger children, will you listen to this last poor admonition of one who can only love you? O, be determined at once to give your whole heart to God, and let nothing shake or alter that resolution. You need have no fears of regretting it. Do not be vain and thoughtless, but sober-minded; and let me entreat you all to love the whole remnant of our once great family. Try and build up again your broken walls, and to make the utmost of every stone that is left. Nothing can so tend to make life a blessing as the consciousness that your life and example bless and leave you the stronger. Still, it is ground of the utmost comfort to my mind to know that so many of you as have had the opportunity have given some proof of your fidelity to the great family of men. Be faithful unto death; from the exercise of habitual love to man it cannot be very hard to love his Maker.

I must yet insert the reason for my firm belief in the divine inspiration of the Bible, notwithstanding I am, perhaps, naturally sceptical; certainly not credulous. I wish all to consider it most thoroughly when you read that blessed book, and see whether you cannot discover such evidence yourselves. It is the purity of heart, filling our minds as well as work and actions, which is everywhere insisted on, that distinguishes it from all the other teachings, that commends it to my conscience. Whether my heart be willing and obedient or not, the inducement that it holds out is another reason of my convictions of its truth and genuineness; but I do not here omit this my last argument on the Bible, that eternal life is what my soul is panting after this moment. I mention this as a reason for endeavoring to leave a valuable copy of the Bible, to be carefully preserved in remembrance of me, to so many of my posterity, instead of some other book at equal cost.

I beseech you all to live in habitual contentment with moderate circumstances and gains of worldly store, and earnestly to teach this to your children and children's children after you, by example as well as precept. Be determined to know by experience, as soon as may be, whether Bible instruction is of divine origin or not. Be sure to owe no man anything, but to love one another. John Rogers wrote to his children, "Abhor that arrant whore of Rome." John Brown writes to his children to abhor, with undying hatred also, that sum of all villainies—slavery.

Remember, he that is slow to anger is better than the mighty, and he that ruleth his spirit than he that taketh a city. Remember, also, that they, being wise, shall shine, and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars forever and ever.

And now, dearly beloved family, to God and the work of his grace I commend you all.

Your affectionate husband and father, JOHN BROWN.*

Whatever opinion others may have as to the wisdom of his course of action, leading to the sacrifice of life itself, John Brown had no doubt but that this seeming disaster would ultimately result in the most glorious success, and the strong assurance that in no other possible way could he "be used to so much advantage to the cause of good and of humanity." Sustained by this conviction he, after speaking an encouraging word to several of his men in the prison† and bidding them good-bye, rode to the place of execution and ascended the scaffold with a firm tread, meeting death with Christian composure. His body was deposited in the family burying-ground at North Elba, N. Y., as he had requested.

In the war with the South which soon followed, and which was probably hastened by his death and the accompanying events, the name of John Brown, woven into song, became a source of inspiration to our brave soldiers, urging them on to many a deed of valor.‡

† Of the twenty-two men belonging to his force, four did not cross the Potomac. Six were colored men, of whom three were fugitive slaves. Of the entire number, only one, and that Owen Brown, was surviving in 1878. Ten of them were killed or died of their wounds in Virginia, six were hanged, and six escaped.

FAMILY 23.

Mr. Humphrey died in 1790, æ. 63 years. His will was dated Oct. 15th, 1790, and proved Dec. 13th, 1790; mentions wife Margaret; son Joel and two daughters, Elizabeth and Amelia, children by his 1st wife; also sons Noah, Theodore, Chauncey, Enoch, Gideon, Pliny and Friend; and daughters Lavinia Barber, Roxana, Dorothea, and Cecilia Humphrey. The estate was distributed Mch. 11th, 1795. (Simsbury Prob. Rec., ii., 234; iii., 272-275, 289.) His widow married Capt. David Phelps, whom she survived.

513. XII. ENOCH,<sup>5</sup> b. 1777; was, with his brother Dr. Gideon Humphrey, at an early age placed under the instructions of Baron Steuben, the Aid of General Suwarrow, and became a distinguished officer of Engineers. He was offered promotion to the rank of General in the new army, but declined on account of his attachment to his old regiment. He also refused to accept a colonelcy from one of his own regiments, and died as its major. He was in command of Fort St. Philip, Louisiana, at the time of his death; was unmarried. He is said to have fought a duel with a major in the army named Woolsacroft; but he often served his comrades by acting as peacemaker, thus preventing six duels.

Some extracts from Parton's Life of Andrew Jackson†† will show the nature of the services rendered by Major Humphrey at New Orleans, prior to the victory of Jan. 8th, 1815, and how they were regarded by Gen. Jackson.

†† Published 1860; vol. II., pp. 157-159, 162, 173 and 208.

January 1st.—“Upon Jackson’s coming to the front, he found his artillery-men at their posts, waiting with lighted matches to open fire upon the foe, as soon as the dense mass of mingled smoke and mist that enveloped their batteries should roll away. ‘Jackson’s first glance,’ as Mr. Walker informs me, ‘when he reached the line, was in the direction of Humphrey’s battery. There stood this right arm of the artillery, dressed in his usual plain attire, smoking that eternal cigar, coolly leveling his guns and directing his men. ‘Ah!’ exclaimed the General, ‘all is right; Humphrey is at his post, and will return their compliments presently.’ * * * Capt. Humphrey soon caught a glimpse of the British batteries; structures of narrow front and slight elevation, lying low and dim upon the field; no such broad target as the mile-long lines of the American position. Adjusting a twelve-pounder with the utmost exactness, he quietly gave the word, ‘Let her off,’—and the firing from the American lines began. The other batteries instantly joined in the strife. Ere long the British howitzers on the levee and the battery of Commodore Patterson on the opposite bank exchanged a vigorous fire. For the space of an hour and a half a cannonade so loud and rapid shook the delta as had never before been heard in the western world.” But the howitzers “were silenced and overthrown by a few discharges from Captain Humphrey’s twelve-pounders.” * * *

January 7th.—“On the high road, within the levee, and seventy feet from the river, was battery number one, containing two brass twelve-pounders and a six-inch howitzer, commanded by Captain Humphrey, of ‘the eternal cigar.’ This battery commanded the road, and its fire just grazed the side of that redoubt at which Jackson had shaken his head [saying ‘That will give us trouble.’] Humphrey’s guns were manned by regulars of the artillery service, and his howitzer by a party of New Orleans dragoons belonging to the company of Major St. Geme.” * * *

January 8th,—after the conflict.—“The General with particular warmth thanked and commended Beale’s little band of riflemen, the companies of the Seventh, and Humphrey’s artillery-men, who had so gallantly beaten back the column of Colonel Rennie.”

- iii. Dea. Anson Green,<sup>6</sup> b. 3 June, 1801, spent much of his boyhood in his native town, Simsbury; was for a time in the family of Rev. Dr. John Keep, of Blandford, Mass.; learned, in Farmington, Ct., the trade which he afterward followed; at New Haven, Ct., went into the family, employ, and, finally, partnership of Dea. Sherman Blair. He married, in New Haven, Ct., 1 Oct. 1826, Elizabeth (dau. of Abel and Betsey Burke) Ives, b. 4 July, 1805, Woodbridge, Ct.; in 1831, removed to Windsor, Ash-tabula Co., Ohio, whither his older sister Parintha, wife of Thaddeus Humphrey, had preceded him. As he found better facilities, in water-power, &c., for his business, he removed to Huntsburgh and thence to Claridon, Geauga Co., from whence, in 1836-7, he returned to New Haven and Farmington, Ct. In 1856-7, three of his sons, Lewis, Edwin, and Sherman, settled at Topeka, in Kansas, and he, with his wife and three younger children, followed in 1858.

Since 1826, he has been a devout and earnest Christian, under the ministry of such men as Dr. Asahel Nettleton, Dr. Samuel Merwin, of New Haven, Ct., Dr. Noah Porter, of Farmington, Ct.; was one of the original members of the Park St., or, later, the Howe St. Church, New Haven, and among the very earliest adherents of the Anti-Slavery and Total Abstinence reforms. His chosen place has always been that of one whom no party ties could hold if its leaders or principles seemed to him without the sanction of God's word, by which he so constantly tried every man and every principle or party, that a long and warm political discussion once ended by his opponent's saying, "You can't talk with Anson; he quotes too much Scrip." Content to do his work by an unflinching advocacy of good principles, and support of their representatives, except as a servant of the church he has borne no title; but she has repeatedly conferred on him the honorable one of deacon. Furniture maker and dealer. Res. (1883) Topeka, Kansas. Children: (1) Rev. Lewis,<sup>7</sup> b. 8 Sept. 1827, New Haven, Ct.; removed with his parents to Ohio, in 1831, and returned in 1837. From 1837 to 1842, was a pupil of John E. Lovell, in the Lancasterian School of New Haven, Ct.; commenced his classical studies with Dea. Simeon Hart, of Farmington, Ct., in 1846-7; taught in George St. (now Webster) Public School of New Haven, Ct., 1847-9; in the Trenton (N. J.) Academy, 1849-50; studied at Oneida Conference Seminary, Cazenovia, N. Y. Through failing health removed to Dexter, Mich., and there, while tutor in the family of Judge Samuel W. Dexter, supplied the Congregational churches of Dexter and Pinckney, 1853-4.

He was licensed by the Jackson Congregational Association, at Grass Lake, Mich., April 26th, 1854; supplied the Congregational church of Truxton, Cortland Co., N. Y., 1855-6; was ordained at Truxton, by the Cortland Presbytery, Sept. 3d, 1856; was commissioned by the American Home Missionary Society, and started for Kansas Sept. 9th; marched through Iowa and Nebraska with 250 immigrants who were arrested by a U. S. force of cavalry and artillery, at Plymouth, on the Kansas line, Oct. 10th. He preached his first sermon in Kansas, in camp and under guard, on Sunday, Oct. 12th. Was released by Gov. Geary, Oct. 14th, and crossed the Kansas to Topeka. He here found the First Congregational Church of nine members, and remained in charge of the same from 1856 to 1860, building for the church the first house of worship in Topeka, and twice rebuilding it when thrown down by tornadoes. On Nov. 2d, 1856, he administered the first communion; and on Jan 1st, 1857, performed the first marriage ceremony in the future capital of Kansas.

In April, 1857, he was chosen Chairman of the Committee appointed by the Kansas General Association to secure a location for a Congregational College, and in October, 1858, temporary chairman of the Board of Trustees for Lincoln College, which the Association voted to locate at Topeka. July, 1859, he was elected Moderator of the General Association. From 1860 to 1866, was Supt. of Missions in Kansas for the American Home Missionary Society; June, 1865, delegate to The National Congregational Council at Boston.

He married, in Wyandotte, Kansas, 8 June, 1864, Sarah Maria (dau. of Jesse and Emily Chamberlin) Cooper, of Wyandotte, b. 1 Mch. 1840, Irasburgh, Vt. They have no children. In 1866, he was recalled to the First Congregational Church at Topeka, and preached till 1869. During this time, he was also President and Treasurer of the Board of Trustees of Lincoln (now Washburn) College, and Statistical Secretary of the General Association. Since 1870, he has been Chaplain of The Sanitarium, Clifton Springs, N. Y.

Letters on Kansas affairs, from 1856 to '69, were published in the Congregationalist (Boston); the Independent and Home Missionary (N. Y.); the Northern Independent (Syracuse, N. Y.); and the Republican (Cazenovia, N. Y.) His published sermons were those preached at the dedication of the First Congregational Church at Topeka, Jan. 3d, 1864; the First Congregational Church in Atchison, May 14th, 1865; and at a Union Thanksgiving Service at Clifton Springs, Nov. 24th, 1881. He edited (1875-81) The Clifton Chapel Collection of Psalms and Hymns and Spiritual Songs (1500 hymns, 320 pp.), issued, in 1881, by Houghton & Co., Cambridge, Mass.; and, in 1883, a Musical Appendix (40 pp.) to the same volume. (5) Lieut. Sherman,<sup>7</sup> b. 3 Aug. 1835, Claridon, Geauga Co., O.; was taken to New Haven, Ct., on the removal thither of his parents in 1837, and in the schools of New Haven and Farmington,—whither they afterward removed—received such education as fitted him for his future work. Following his father's calling, and in the employ of the sons of his father's old friend and partner Sherman Blair, he continued till the fall of 1856, when his freedom-loving and religious spirit sent him to take part in the first skirmish of our Civil War, already begun in Kansas. Joining his older brother, he shared the march across Iowa and Nebraska, and (self-supporting) as true a missionary as any Home or Foreign Board ever commissioned, took his full share in work, in the Master's name, for a young church and a distracted territory. From training in the work he most loved, in the Howe St. Church of New Haven and the old church of Farmington, he brought a preparation and an earnestness which made him an invaluable helper, whose steady zeal never flagged, and whose firm hope never faltered. When the first "preparatory lecture," in Topeka, opened with a congregation of three, he was one. When, at a later time, the preacher had for his Sabbath service an audience of two, from a three-mile tramp across the prairie through the storm, this young Puritan was one of the number. To him, as Christian or citizen, came no call of duty unanswered; and the more ready and prompt was his response, when for any cause others held back. And so the first blast of our great war found him ready at once to take his place with the sons who, like their sires, for their country's cause:—

Nor child, nor wife, nor limb, nor life,
In the brave days of old."

Under President Lincoln's first call for 75,000 men, he enlisted in the first company raised in Topeka, May 23d, 1861. They were mustered in, June 20th, as Co. A, 2d Kansas Vol. Infantry. After service under Gen. Lyon, at the battle of Wilson's Creek, and in various parts of Missouri, the regiment was mustered out at Leavenworth, Kansas, Oct. 31st, 1861. He re-enlisted Aug. 23d, 1862, and was mustered in with Co. H, 11th Kansas Vol. Cavalry, and appointed Orderly Sergeant; was with his regiment in its various engagements, as at Prairie Grove and Cane Hill; in the latter, was severely wounded. He was commissioned 2d Lieutenant, Jan. 1st, 1865; and was finally mustered out with his regiment, at Fort Leavenworth, Sept. 15th, 1865.

He was elected, for 1867-8, Sheriff of Shawnee County, Kansas. He died at Topeka, 12 Sept. 1871; was unmarried.

To and through these years, he daily proved that truth which another said of him:—"His army life was a part of his Christian life." Five small but closely written pocket diaries everywhere show this. On the same pages stand stories of the march made, and the prayer-meeting enjoyed; the sharp skirmish, and the restful Sabbath, its sermon, text and theme; an "A" battalion drill, or an hour of worship "in tent No. 4" with a few comrades; a hard half-day's work on "the rolls," or a quiet half-hour with his well-worn pocket Testament. The Saturday's advance, the Sunday's rest and service, the Monday's fight, the Tuesday's pursuit or retreat, were with him, all and equally, parts of the daily service which as citizen, soldier, Christian, he rendered to his divine Master. And when, "at home and at rest," they laid him for a little while within the church whose walls his own hands had helped to rear, it was a truth none doubted, when to hundreds of his fellow-soldiers and fellow-citizens one said: * "Whether as an officer of the church; a teacher or superintendent of the Sabbath-school; a soldier or a civil officer; all who knew Sherman Bodwell most intimately, will testify how faithfully and conscientiously he discharged every duty assigned him." The secular press entitled him,† "A good man and true, a modern knight without fear and without reproach." The life he lived can have no clearer explanation and description; and its short record no more fitting close, than the words with which in his last soldier's diary he closes the story of his army work:

"In Camp, Sept. 16, 1865.--So ends my service of (in all) three and a half years, filled with tokens of the loving kindness of Him, who granted me the privilege of standing in my lot, until 'the end of the days. For life & strength to be present (with one exception) on every march, & in every engagement participated in by my company or Regiment; and for the presence with me always of the Holy Spirit re-proving, comforting, strengthening, even when I have been most unfaithful & forgetful of my Christian obligations, I can never, I feel, be thankful enough.

"And they blessed the king and went unto their tents joyful and glad of heart for all the goodness that the Lord had done for David his servant & for Israel his people."

About the year 1800, he removed from Connecticut to Ashtabula County, Ohio, and built the first mill for grinding grain at Rock Creek (Morgan). He afterward erected another on Grand River (Mechanicsville), to which the people came on horseback, within a circuit of thirty miles, bringing their grain and waiting to have it ground. This mill was afterward swept away by a freshet. Later, his house with all its contents was burned; and finally, to complete his misfortunes, his title to the property proved to be insufficient, and he owned, at the time of his death, only forty-three acres of hard clay land in Austinburgh, Ohio. Mr. Humphrey died æ. 97 years. All of his children settled in Ashtabula County, O., excepting the oldest daughter, Mrs. Rebecca<sup>6</sup> McNeil.

Elijah<sup>5</sup> Humphrey was a sea-captain, and was engaged in the merchant service between New London, Ct., and the West India Islands. In 1788, he was lost at sea together with all on board,—his ship, while encountering a terrific storm, having been sighted by a vessel which arrived at New London forty-eight hours after he had sailed from that port. This was his third shipwreck in making the then dangerous voyage to the West India Islands.

‡ Acc. to inscription in the Canton Burying-ground. His age should have been given as 41 years, if his date of birth is correct.

In relating one of these disasters to his sister Lydia he said: "A circumstance occurred which gave us all great joy and undoubtedly prolonged our lives and saved us from starvation until the twelfth day, when we were sighted and picked up by a vessel bound for Spain. We had now been drifting about at the mercy of the winds for about eight days without provisions, they having been lost in the storm which carried away our masts. While in this forlorn condition some of our men were ransacking a lot of store tubs for a few scattered kernels of corn, when they discovered in one of them quite a number of wharf rats which had been entrapped by running in through the bung-hole. They were at once captured and cooked without ceremony, and devoured by us with a more decided relish than that with which we had ever before eaten of the most dainty dish, for no morsel of food ever tasted half so well in my mouth."

In the spring of 1782, about the close of the Revolution, while treacherous savages infested nearly the whole country west of the Hudson river, then mostly a vast and unexplored wilderness, Capt. Humphrey planned a daring and dangerous expedition to Detroit, Mich., for the purpose of trading and the purchase of furs among the Indians. This project he concluded successfully, with the loss of only one man, by the name of Wilcox, who died of dysentery on the return trip, and was buried at Fort Brewerton, on the shore of Oneida Lake.

This expedition left New London, Ct., early in May, and consisted of Capt. Humphrey, one interpreter and sixteen other men, with four small boats in which they carried merchandise, provisions, clothing, etc. They coasted along from New London to New York, then up the Hudson river to the Mohawk, up the Mohawk to Wood Creek, up that creek to Oneida Lake, through that lake to Oneida river, then down that stream to the Oswego river, down the Oswego river to Lake Ontario, up that lake to the Niagara river, and up that river to a point below Niagara Falls. Here they disembarked and carried their boats and merchandise by hand several miles around and above Niagara Falls, and then embarked upon Lake Erie for Detroit, Mich., where they arrived safely in July. There they spent about two months trading, and in the purchase of furs.

In September, having finished their business, they parted from the red-skins on the most friendly terms, and again set sail on board their little squadron for their old home in Connecticut, where, after many hardships and privations, they arrived late in the fall of 1782, and were received with joyful manifestations and congratulations for having successfully accomplished a most daring and hazardous undertaking.*

* Furnished by Mr. George Willmot Humphrey who, in 1841, received the account of the shipwreck from Mrs. Lydia (Humphrey) Webster, [Fam. 9, 217., S.] and of the expedition to Detroit from his father, Mr. Harry Humphrey.

† Or Allyn.

** Allen Humphrey erected a monument in the South Burying-ground, Canton, Ct., to the memory of his brother Harry and sister Chloe, who died in early life. Their dates of death here given are according to the inscriptions on said monument.

Feb., 1755, and died 8 Sept., 1818, æ. 63 years.* He married (2) Sarah (dau. of Capt. Zaccheus and Abigail Barber) Case, of Canton, Ct., widow of Jedidiah<sup>5</sup> Wilcox, [Fam. 2 (22), S.<sup>2</sup>] She was born in 1764, and died in 1830, æ. 66 years.

In 1789, Capt. Humphrey removed to what is now Collinsville, Ct., where he built a house and continued to reside the remainder of his life. He became the owner of about four-fifths of the land on both sides of the river, where that village is now situated. In the year 1792, he, in company with his brother Colonel George<sup>5</sup> Humphrey, erected a forge for the manufacture of iron. It was located on the then east branch of the river, at or very near the site of the old stone shop with a steeple and bell. It was so much damaged by the "Jefferson flood,"† in 1801, that it went into decay from about that time, and was swept away by the great flood of 1804.‡

He filled various important positions; served as captain in the war with England; was representative to the General Assembly from Canton, in 1812 (October session), with James<sup>6</sup> Humphrey, Esq., [Fam. 88, S.<sup>2</sup>] He is described as a man of stately and robust frame, with corresponding strength and resolution, of great public spirit, genial and hilarious disposition, and much goodness of heart. Rev. Jeremiah Hallock, pastor over the church at Canton, alluding in one of his sermons to the power of the devil, said: "He is as much stronger than Capt. Frederick Humphrey, as Capt. Frederick Humphrey is stronger than my little Jerry." [Fam. 18 (434), S.<sup>2</sup>]

Mr. M. S. Dyer, of Canton, Ct., writes (1883): "Of Ezekiel Humphrey's five sons, Ezekiel, Elijah, Frederick, George and Giles, the last three I well remember. They were large men, six feet, two to four inches high, weighing 240 to 320 pounds." He also states that the united height of the seven sons of Capt. Frederick Humphrey was more than forty-three feet.

Capt. Humphrey died 13 July, 1821, æ. 68 years.* His will was dated in 1821, and proved July 6th,** 1821; mentions sons Frederick, Isaac, Alexander, Rufus, Sylvester, Romanta and Correl; daughters Zada, wife of Elias Woodford, and Fanny who was unmarried. 668. Colonel George<sup>5</sup> Humphreys, [213] (Capt. Ezekiel,<sup>4</sup> Ensign Samuel,<sup>3</sup> Lieut. Samuel,<sup>2</sup> Michael,<sup>1</sup>) was born 11 Nov., 1756, in West Simsbury, Ct. He married (1) 7 Aug., 1777, Elizabeth (dau. of Capt. Abraham and Jerusha Pinney) Pettibone, of New Hartford, who was born in 1756, and died 22 Sept., 1784. [Fam. 10 (125), J.<sup>2</sup>; footnote.] He married (2) 5 June, 1785, Rachel<sup>5</sup> (dau. of Esq. Oliver<sup>4</sup> and Sarah Garrett) Humphrey, b. 12 Oct., 1755, West Simsbury, Ct. [Fam. 18 (431), S.<sup>2</sup>] He resided on his father's homestead in West Simsbury (Canton), Ct. In 1792, he, with his brother Capt. Frederick<sup>5</sup> Humphrey, erected a forge for the manufacture of iron. [See Fam. 33, S.<sup>2</sup>]

Geo. Humphreys

He bore an honorable part in the Revolutionary struggle for independence; and, subsequently, filled various military and other offices with credit and distinction; was captain of the militia company in 1784, or prior to that date, and colonel of the 17th Reg. Ct. Militia as early as 1795-6.

An interesting relic in the possession of one of his descendants is a HORN, upon which is engraved, "George Humphrey His Horn Made at Roxbury, November 11th, 1775." Around the large end is also engraved, "Liberty and property," and upon the side some emblems and the figure of a vidette or sentinel with a horn to his mouth. From the above we infer that he was among the men who rallied for the defence of Concord at the opening scene of the war of the Revolution. The horn was probably first used as a signal-horn, then had a bottom put in and was used as a powder-horn, and has now been restored to its original form, and is in the possession of his grandson Solon Humphreys, Esq., of New York.

At the time of his death, he had been Justice of the Peace since 1798, and Judge of Probate since 1806; had also been, for many years, the representative of his district in the State Legislature;—from Simsbury, 1794, '96, '97 (October sessions); 1798 (May); 1799, 1801 (October); 1802 (May); 1803 (May and October);—from Canton, 1806 (first representative),* 1807, 1811 (October); and 1813 (May), the year of his death.

Col. George Humphreys, from all that I have been able to learn concerning him, was one of nature's noblemen. He possessed that native dignity of manner and courtly address and speech which always inspired those with whom he came in contact with a sense of his sterling integrity and nobleness of nature. Mild, considerate, and gentle as a woman, ever regardful of the most dependent or lowly, he was yet a stranger to fear and might well have been termed the Lion-hearted. All the gentle virtues seemed his by inheritance, and received an additional setting from his polished manners. Few public men have more richly deserved and few have with greater spontaneity received and held the confidence of the community, or bequeathed a richer name and memory to their posterity.

In the characteristics of the two brothers, Frederick and George Humphreys, we have an exhibition of that alternation of temperament mentioned in the Introduction of this work, and to which we refer the reader. Similar peculiarities will be noticed in other families, and they doubtless have been noticed by other observers.

~~There~~ There has been much inquiry, and possibly some controversy, with reference principally to the addition or otherwise of the s to the name. General usage seems to favor the name Humphrey without the s, and it is understood to have been very generally so spelled until Gen. David Humphreys return from Europe, about the close of the last century. The subject, tradition says, then received quite a wide discussion, the result being that he had fully investigated the subject when abroad, and had concluded that the s should be added in all cases where it was the surname, and without it when used as a given name, as "Humphrey Humphreys."

We are unacquainted with the steps by which he arrived at this conclusion, or the authorities consulted. But it is quite certain that he ever afterwards, and even before, spelled his name with the s, vide his letters in camp [See pp. 155-158]; and that from this date those Humphreys families more immediately in connection with him adopted the same form and have so continued it.

Referring to the arms of Humphrey Humphreys, Bishop of Bangor [See Vol. I., p. 54], date 1697, we have this identical spelling a century earlier than Col. David's investigations. Whether he took this fact as an authority, or one among several corroborative facts tending to establish this point, is conjecture. But the fact is well understood that he arrived at this conclusion.

Referring to the origin of the name [See p. 1, and opposite p. 243], HOME-FRID, Saxon, and HOMME-VRAI, French, it will be noted that if the name be pronounced HUMPH-REYS, instead of the more original and possibly more correct "Omme-fray"—the H being silent in the French, we shall avoid the sound so often misleading now, and so fruitful of discussion in the past. [See also p. 32.] When we reflect that the English language had its first dictionary within the last one hundred and fifty years, and could scarcely have had an authority in orthography until that period, it will be seen how little our modern rules apply when dealing with names and families dating hundreds of years anterior to the present form of our language.

Col. Humphreys died 16 July, 1813,† at the age of 57 years, from the results of an injury to his right arm, complicated by a defective surgical operation, from which his sufferings were very great, and which finally wore him out.

The will of George Humphreys, Esq., of Canton, Ct., was dated March 8th, 1811, and proved July 28th, 1813. The widow Rachel Humphrey and Decius Humphreys were accepted as executors, July 28th, 1813, and gave bonds in $15,000. He mentions his wife Rachel; daughters Clara wife of Elisha Dyer, Elizabeth wife of Dudley Humphreys, Cornelia, Stella, Emily and Laura; sons George, Decius and Hector. The inventory was dated August 24th, 1813; amount, $19,458.92. (Simsbury Prob. Rec., vii., 79-100.)

Mrs. Rachel Humphreys was a woman of great courage and resolution. In 1818, when her son-in-law, Mr. Abram Griswold, moved to the Western Reserve of Ohio, she and her daughter Emily accompanied him in their own carriage, the mode of travelling requisite in those days in journeys so far west. Some weeks were spent on the way. After leaving their friends in Ohio they went to Orwell, Pa., where Mrs. Elizabeth<sup>6</sup> Humphrey (675), was residing, and thence proceeded to Connecticut. In 1823, Mr. Griswold visited his friends in Canton, and Mrs. Humphreys returned with him to his home in Ohio, where she continued to reside until her death, which occurred 19 Dec., 1830, at the age of 75 years. She was buried in Kinsman, O.

The will of widow Rachel Humphrey, of Canton, was dated April, 1823, and proved April 8th, 1831:—gives Am. B. Society $75, and For. Miss. Society $25; residue to daughters Elizabeth wife of Dr. Dudley Humphreys, Cornelia wife of Abram Griswold, Stella wife of Lester Conc, Emily wife of Ralph Meacham, and Laura wife of Lancel Foote, considering that George Humphreys, Clarissa wife of Elisha Dyer, and sons Decius and Hector Humphreys are suitably provided for in the will of her late husband George Humphreys, Esq. (Simsbury Prob. Rec., xii., 118-122.)

Lancel<sup>6</sup> Foote, of Canton Center, Ct., filled the office of Deacon in the Congregational church for more than twenty-five years. He held a commission appointing him Ensign of the 5th Co., 17th Reg. of Infantry, in the State of Connecticut, which was issued May 30th, 1821, by Gov. Oliver Wolcott; was afterward elected Captain of said company and commissioned by Gov. Wolcott, the commission being dated May 30th, 1822.

He was chosen at various times, by the citizens of the town, to fill nearly all of the important town offices, such as those of Special Assessor, Selectman, Town Treasurer, Town Clerk, Justice of the Peace, and many of the minor ones, and continually held one office or more for fifty years. Was elected Judge of Probate for the district of Canton, in 1849, by the Legislature, and commissioned by Gov. Joseph Trumbull. Subsequently, under the new law governing the election of Judges of Probate, he was appointed by the people to that office, which he held for several years. He was Representative to the Legislature of the State Sessions, in 1833-1834.

* The sermon preached by Rev. D. B. Hubbard, at her funeral in Canton Center, Ct., 22 Sept. 1880, was afterward printed.

He took great interest in educational matters, and acted as School Visitor and Examiner, and commissioned school-teachers for many years. He was County Surveyor several years, and probably settled more estates, as administrator or executor, than any other citizen in Hartford County. Was in active public life more than half a century, and very often called upon from other towns to act as arbitrator in settling disputes of all sorts. He was for years Treasurer of the "Everest Fund." It can be truly said, that he had the confidence of the public to a great degree, and that he labored for the good of the community. Children:

John Howard<sup>7</sup> Foote is an importer and manufacturer of musical instruments at Nos. 31 and 33 Maiden Lane, New York, and Nos. 250 and 252 Wabash Ave., Chicago, Ill. December 12th, 1853, he entered the principal wholesale musical instrument house in New York, at No. 31 Maiden Lane;—July 1st, 1863, succeeded to the business, the old firm retiring in his favor. May 1st, 1868, he established the Chicago branch house, which was destroyed in the great fire of 1871, and re-opened within a month.

In 1882, the officers of the National Museum, under the direction of the Smithsonian Institution at Washington, selected his house as the representative house of the United States, in the line of band and orchestral musical instruments, and invited him to contribute a permanent exhibition of musical instruments and merchandise,—the only one of its kind admitted to the National Museum, also granting him the exclusive right to add to the exhibit of such goods, from time to time. The gift is perpetual, and will remain as long as the National Museum exists.

Mr. Foote has been, since 1850, devoted to business, and has never sought nor held any very important offices. He is, at present, President of the Farmington Valley Agricultural Corporation located at Canton, Ct. Res. (1883) No. 102 Clinton Ave., Brooklyn, N. #### FAMILY 35.

707. Captain Giles<sup>5</sup> Humphrey, [215] (Capt. Ezekiel,<sup>4</sup> Ensign Samuel,<sup>3</sup> Lieut. Samuel,<sup>2</sup> Michael,<sup>1</sup>) was born in 1760, West Simsbury, Ct. He married Elizabeth<sup>5</sup> (dau. of Dea. Abraham<sup>4</sup> and Rachel Case) Case, of West Simsbury, Ct. [Fam. 2 (11), S.<sup>2</sup>] She was born in 1757, and died in 1836, æ. 79 years. Her mother, Rachel Case, was a daughter of Capt. James and Esther (Fithin) Case, of Simsbury, Ct., and a sister of Jeremiah Case who married Judith<sup>4</sup> Humphrey, [Fam. 5 (126), S.<sup>2</sup>] They resided in Burlington, Ct. The dates of birth of their children are recorded at Bristol, from which Burlington was set off in 1806. Capt. Humphrey died in 1816,* at Burlington, Ct.

It is a fact worthy of notice that Giles Humphrey and his four brothers, like their father, all bore the title of captain, the oldest two, Ezekiel and Elijah, being sea-captains, and the others, Frederick, George and Giles, captains of the same militia company, in the order of their ages. Reuben Humphrey [Fam. 65, S.<sup>2</sup>], who married their sister Ann Humphrey, was also at one time captain of this company, and likewise Asher Humphrey [Fam. 66, S.<sup>2</sup>], who married their sister Chloe Humphrey. Mr. M. S. Dyer, an aged resident of Canton, Ct., to whom we are indebted for the above information, mentions the names of numerous Humphreys who have filled important positions, and states that during the seventy-eight years since the incorporation of the town of Canton, in 1806, it has twenty-three times been represented in the State Legislature by those bearing that name. He adds as follows: "I send you the within to show the esteem in which the Humphreys family have been held. There have been more offices held by the descendants of Michael Humphrey outside of the name, in the Case, Mills, Barber, Wilcox, Higley and Pettibone families, than of those bearing the name of Humphreys itself. The Dyer, Bidwell and Hallock families have had a good share in proportion to their number. In Simsbury the number has been greater than in Canton in proportion to the population. A majority of our town officials are to-day descendants of Michael Humphrey, and I think it is the same in Simsbury. The Humphreys name has at no time since 1806 been more than four per cent. of the population, and to-day (1884) is not more than one and a half or two per cent. yet it has always held a very large proportion of the town offices."

Mr. Humphrey removed with his young family from Connecticut to western New York, finding his way through the then wilderness by the aid of blazed trees. He located quite a tract of land in Harrisburgh, Lewis Co., which he held until his death, on portions of which some of his children afterward settled near him.

His son Horace writes that he was a large man, over six feet in height, and two hundred pounds in weight. He was very benevolent, but was ever seemingly unconscious of his good deeds. "If there was a poor, broken-down old man, for instance, that no one seemed to own, he would give him a home and a place by the hearth through the winter months. Many a waif and stray he used to shelter, feed, and clothe;—he never turned any away empty-handed." He died in Harrisburgh, N. Y., 29 Sept., 1855, æ. 84 years.

958. Jonathan<sup>5</sup> Humphrey, [273] (Isaac:<sup>3</sup> Ensign Samuel:<sup>3</sup> Lieut. Samuel,<sup>2</sup> Michael,<sup>1</sup>) was born 21 Mch.,* 1771, in Goshen, Ct. He married, 31 May, 1792, Rachel (sixth child of Sergt. John*) Dowd, b. 15 Sept. 1774; and, in a few years, removed to East Bloomfield, Ontario Co., N. Y. In the spring of 1799, he purchased a tract of wooded land in that town (then known as "Number 10, Phelps' and Gorham's Purchase,") which, in the following autumn, he exchanged for another nearer the school-house. Several of his brothers and brothers-in-law settled near him, then in the prime of life, with rising families and honest purposes to hew out their own future from the wilderness. Here, in mutual aid, and friendly, unostentatious companionship, the men labored to clear and cultivate their farms for the maintenance of their families; while the women, from the home-grown flax and wool, spun and wove the comfortable fabrics needed to clothe their large households. Thus Jonathan<sup>5</sup> Humphrey, a type of the American pioneer farmer, passed a life which, though laborious, was cheerful and happy, finding his enjoyment in seeing the forest vanish before him, and in sympathetic intercourse with his friends. He died in East Bloomfield, N. Y., 10 Apr., 1835,† æ. 64 years. Mrs. Humphrey died in that town, 13 Dec., 1841, æ. 67 years.

* John Dowd was a conspicuous man in the early settlement and history of Goshen, Ct. He served with distinction in the French War, in the company of Capt. McNeil of Litchfield, in which Ashbel Humphrey (Fam. 11, S.1) was one of his comrades. By trade he was a gunmaker, and was a celebrated marksman. Though not, as known, in active service in the Revolution, he was a zealous and active patriot, and it is said that on one occasion he snapped a loaded pistol at his old friend and neighbor, Ashbel Humphrey, intending to shoot him for his toryism. John Dowd was known as an excellent citizen and a devout Christian. It was his singular habit, during prayer in church, to keep his right hand raised as in voting or taking a solemn obligation, and also during the sermon, if it pleased him. In 1835, the whole number of his posterity was computed at two hundred, of whom thirty-one had died.

Hon. Guy Carlton<sup>6</sup> Humphrey, till the age of ten years, resided with his parents at Orwell, Vt., enjoying and improving good school advantages. About this time his father met with financial misfortunes, and soon after removed to Somerset, N. Y., then a new and wild country. Here he had small opportunities for further education. Until the age of twenty, he resided at home, laboring on his father's farm, and then learned the cooper's trade. About this time, he imbibed the desire to teach school, and set himself about preparation therefor by study after the usual day's work. In the fall after attaining his majority, he passed his examination as a teacher before the Superintendent of Common Schools, and during the eight following winters successfully pursued that avocation, devoting the summers to farming and mechanical labor.

Politically, he early espoused the cause of the Anti-Slavery Party, and his first vote was one of only eight cast in his town, at that election, in its interests. He ever afterward adhered to the same principles and party. He was elected Town Clerk in 1848; Superintendent of Common Schools in 1852, which office he held four years; Supervisor, 1858, '60, and '61; in the year last mentioned was Chairman of the Board of Supervisors of Niagara County, N. Y.; was a Member of the Assembly of the State of New York, representing a constituency of about 24,000, two terms, from 1864, in which he served in Committees on Charitable and Religious Societies, Public Printing, Manufacture of Salt, and Agriculture. ## FAMILY 51.

998. Russell<sup>5</sup> Humphrey, [292] (Thomas,<sup>4</sup> Ensign Samuel,<sup>1</sup> Lieut. Samuel,<sup>2</sup> Michael,<sup>1</sup>) was born 23 Jan., 1765, in Goshen, Ct. He married, 7 Feb., 1789, Mary Hodge, born 16 Sept., 1767, probably in or near Bennington, Vt.* They settled on a farm in Rensselaerville, Albany Co., N. Y., where they passed their lives, and where he died 10 Jan., 1813. But little knowledge of them has been preserved. Family traditions represent him to have been somewhat lacking in the robust physical characteristics both of his ancestors and his descendants;—to have been of a very happy and amiable disposition, indulgent and patient in his family, a general favorite among his neighbors and acquaintances, and in belief a Universalist.

Mrs. Humphrey is remembered as a woman of distinguished energy, decision and firmness of character, and of great capacity for housekeeping and general business affairs. Late in life she joined the Methodist church. She died 14 May, 1838, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Electa Smith, where she spent a part of her time during her last years.

Children (born in Rensselaerville, N. Y.):

999. I. ELIZABETH<sup>6</sup> (or BETSEY<sup>6</sup>), b. 12 Nov., 1789; married, when about fourteen years of age, Gilbert (second son of Capt. Daniel†) Shays, b. 7 July, 1780. She died 24 Sept., 1872, at the residence of her son Russell<sup>7</sup> Shays, in Richmondville, N. Y., aged nearly 83 years. They at first resided with his father at Bridgewater, N. Y., then for a short time with her parents, and finally settled in Decatur, Otsego Co., N. Y., where he cleared for himself a new farm. There they resided till his death, which occurred 11 July, 1854, at the age of 74 years. Children:
1000. i. Mary<sup>7</sup> (or Polly<sup>7</sup>), born in Bridgewater, N. Y.; married Samuel Givins, of Decatur, N. Y.;—afterwards removed to Etna, Tompkins Co., N. Y., and there died. Child: (1) Gilbert<sup>8</sup> (Givins), res. (1883) Etna, N. Y.

1003. iv. Elisha,<sup>7</sup> b. 6 Dec. 1814, in Decatur, N. Y.; removed to the Black River country, N. Y.; married Clarissa Alexander, and had two children, who, together with both parents, are said to be deceased, and that family extinct.

* Her granddaughter, Miss Olivia D. Smith, has heard her relate that at the Battle of Bennington they could, in the Hodge home, hear the balls pass through the air; and that their cattle were driven away. She was then ten years of age.

† Capt. Daniel Shays is known to American history as the leader of "Shays' Rebellion" (as against alleged extravagant and oppressive fees and taxation, under the new Government, after the Revolution). He had fought as Sergeant at Bunker's Hill and, subsequently, had served in the Patriot Army with the rank of Captain. After his pardon, he at first settled near Livingstonville, N. Y., and afterward removed to Bridgewater, N. Y. He was of Irish descent, and, in later civil life, was always known as "General" Shays. In his old age he received a pension for his services in the Revolutionary War. He died 29 Sept. 1825, æ. 85 years. [See Fam. 28, J.: p. 159.]

1121. I. ALMIRA HANNAH,<sup>6</sup> b. 8 Jan., 1817; was married, in Caledonia, N. Y., by Rev. Dr. Donald C. McLaren, 1 Oct., 1846, to David (son of John and Hannah Reynolds) Starkey, M. D., of Smithville, Chenango Co., N. Y., born in that town, 28 Mch., 1812. No children. She is a lady of high attainments, and we are indebted to her for records of her father's family.

Dr. Starkey attended the College of Physicians and Surgeons of Western New York, and received his diploma from that institution, in 1835. He has, for many years, had a large practice as surgeon and physician, but has now discontinued it, and is extensively engaged in agricultural and horticultural pursuits. He is (1884) a leading and influential citizen of Chili, Monroe Co., N. Y.

He settled in Kalamazoo, Michigan; has held many important positions of trust and honor, in town, county and state, and has ever discharged his official duties with fidelity and to the satisfaction of his constituents and the people. He has represented his senatorial district in the Michigan State Legislature several terms, and was President of the State Agricultural Society of Michigan for many years. He has been solicited to accept of a nomination for governor, but declined on account of his private business affairs. He has been assignee, administrator and executor for several large estates, and has had the guardianship and care of a number of orphan children. He is a Trustee and Treasurer of the Michigan Female Seminary; Trustee of the Michigan State Asylum for the Insane; Treasurer of a Life Insurance Company;

* See foot-note concerning the Dickinson family, [Fam. 14 (337), S.] The name of this daughter of Col. John Dickinson is there given Anna Steven, but Mrs. Starkey does not give the middle name, and it is therefore here omitted.

1127. Ira<sup>5</sup> Humphrey, [388] (Daniel,<sup>4</sup> Ensign Samuel,<sup>3</sup> Lieut. Samuel,<sup>2</sup> Michael,<sup>1</sup>) was born 22 June, 1779, in Goshen, Ct. After the death of his mother, and at about the age of fourteen years, he went to reside in the family of Dr. Asa Carter, of Weathersfield, Vt., who was a practising physician in that town as early as 1788, and continued with him until he was about twenty-two years of age. In 1801, he was rated for a poll-tax in Weathersfield.* About that date he removed to Phelps, Ontario Co., N. Y., where he resided several years. He there married, at the residence of the bride's father, on Thanksgiving Day, in November, 1806, Abigail (second dau. of Ebenezer and Sarah Gould) Field, of Conway, Mass., afterward of Phelps, N. Y. She was born 16 July, 1789, in Conway, Mass. In 1810, they removed from Phelps to Junius (now Clyde), Wayne Co., N. Y., where he and his brother Luman,<sup>5</sup> who also located there, engaged in clearing up a heavy forest tract for a farm. In June, 1836, he removed to Concord, Mich., where he resided until his death, which occurred 21 Apr., 1845, at the age of nearly 66 years.

Mr. Humphrey had superior natural endowments and a good degree of culture, and his opinions and judgment were much prized and relied on, in matters of business, by all who knew him. He was a man of few words, of placid, even and happy temperament, tall of stature and of prepossessing manner. He was, for many years, an Elder in the Presbyterian church, and lovingly manifested the spirit of the Lord Jesus in every phase and circumstance of his life.

The following is from the obituary notice prepared by his pastor, Rev. Calvin Clark: "As an officer in the church, and in his life, he exemplified the spirit of his Divine Master, and at death he was sustained by that hope which maketh not ashamed."

Mrs. Humphrey survived her husband many years, and died in Concord, Mich., 3 July, 1870, æ. 81 years. The stamp of this family is well indicated by a remark of a daughter-in-law, Mrs. Anna C. Humphrey: "None of father's descendants are dissipated, even to the use of tobacco." To her we are indebted for valuable assistance in obtaining records of members of this branch of the Humphrey family.

FAMILY 63.

1142. Luman<sup>5</sup> Humphrey, [389] (Daniel,<sup>4</sup> Ensign Samuel,<sup>3</sup> Lieut. Samuel,<sup>2</sup> Michael,<sup>1</sup>) was born 22 June, 1782, in Goshen, Ct. His own account of his youth was that, his mother dying in his boyhood, in the town of Weathersfield, Vt., whither the family had removed (probably preceded by her parents, Daniel and Mary (Norton) Elmore,* with their family), he was taken to bring up by a Mrs. Upham, of Weathersfield, Vt., whose husband, it was said, had previously left and joined the Shakers. He was kindly and humanely treated by her until her husband's subsequent return to his family, after which he was subjected to much rigor and unjust privation, so that, at his majority, he was dismissed in destitution and illiteracy. He then began life for himself by work for wages through the summers and attending common school during the winters, and by private study, till he had acquired a useful English education. The assessment of his poll-tax for 1804 is on the Weathersfield Records. Not very long after attaining his majority, he joined his brother Ira<sup>5</sup> Humphrey, who had removed to the State of New York, and, subsequently, located with him at Junius (now Clyde), N. Y., and with him engaged in clearing a heavy forest tract for a farm. In the war of 1812, Ira<sup>5</sup> having been drafted as an army recruit, he volunteered and served as his substitute.

In Junius, he became acquainted with and formed an attachment for the country school-teacher, Philena Dryer, second daughter and child of Samuel and Philena (Robbins) Dryer,† of Victor, N. Y. She was born in West Stockbridge, Mass., 25 April, 1793. They were married, in Junius, N. Y., at the house of Capt. Redfield, whose wife was a cousin of the bride, 23 Feb., 1815, and at first settled in Junius, where he was still engaged in clearing land. About 1817, he removed to Victor, N. Y., and there purchased and occupied a wild tract, which he cleared, cultivated and resided on till 1837, when he again sold and removed with his family to northern Indiana, township of Millgrove, where he settled upon another new farm, improved it and made it his home till his death there, of acute pneumonia, 30 Jan., 1841, æ. 59 years.

He was a man of medium but compact stature, originally of much physical force, energy and endurance, though later in life his health was much invalidated for several years. He was firm, candid and patient in purpose, restless under debt, and trustful of the integrity and motives of others to a fault, and to his own great pecuniary injury. He was unobtrusive, quiet and retiring in manner, but cheerful, humorous and domestic, and eminently social with his friends;—a man whom none knew but to love.

Always a total abstainer himself, he early and through life arrayed his influence uncompromisingly against the social curse of drink. After his settlement in Victor, the erection of his farm * See foot-note to Fam. 16 (386), S., concerning the Elmore family. Since that was printed it has been ascertained that Sophia, Susan and Polly, there given as children of Daniel Elmore, were children of his daughter Mrs. Mary Willard. Daniel Elmore, probably born in 1730, is said to have lived in Sunderland, Mass., in 1755, and in Farmington, Ct., in 1761. His sons Lot and John were born in Northampton, Mass., and, probably, his daughters Naomi and Mary.—Acc. to Mr. Samuel E. Elmore.

We wish here to correct the date of birth of Rhoda [Humphrey] Scoville, dau. of Daniel and Naomi (Elmore) Humphrey, [Fam. 16 (390), S.] Rhoda was born 25 Apr. 1787; and died at Harrison, Potter Co., Pa., 1 Nov. 1864, æ. 77 years.

Naomi (Elmore) Humphrey, wife of Daniel Humphrey, was said, by her daughter Mrs. Rhoda Scoville, to have died soon after the birth of her sixth child, which also died and was buried with its mother.

† Philena Dryer was the second of eleven children of Samuel and Philena (Robbins) Dryer. Philena Robbins was born 25 Nov. 1767; and died in Victor, N. Y., 30 Nov. 1845. Samuel Dryer, the eighth of eleven children of John and Mary (Read) Dryer, was born in Rehoboth, Mass., 18 Feb. 1765; and died in Victor, N. Y., 6 May, 1837. He was married to Philena Robbins, at West Stockbridge, Mass., 18 Nov. 1790. His oldest brother Israel was in the Patriot Army, and was killed in the battle of Bunker Hill. After the birth of four children at West Stockbridge, where Samuel Dryer at first settled, he removed, about 1799, to Westford, Vt., where the remaining seven of his children were born; and thence, about 1812, to Victor, N. Y.

John Dryer (father of Samuel) was son of John Dryer, whose wife's name has not been ascertained. He was a German, or, more probably, a Hollander, and a weaver by trade, living in London; and was seized by a press-gang on the street and compelled to ship on board an English vessel, from which he escaped by jumping overboard, in a New England port, and swimming ashore. In his old age he became blind, and often gave this account of himself to his grandchild, Daniel Dryer (afterwards of Victor, N. Y.), who was accustomed to wait upon him and read the Bible to him. He lived to his one hundredth year, and died of injuries received in being thrown from a wagon. (Communicated by Prof. Charles R. Dryer, M. D., Fort Wayne, Ind.) It is believed that from this progenitor every individual of the name in America has descended.

buildings constructed of heavy timbers, required, as usual, a "raising," or "bee," to which the voluntary aid of all the neighbors was invited, and expected as a matter of usage and mutual courtesy. Provision of entertainment of food or spirits, or both, was also customary. For the former he made, on this occasion, the best and most bountiful preparations possible, but no spirits were furnished. The neighbors generally knowing his principles and habits came, and the raising began, and evidently expecting by the emergency to compel his acquiescence to usage, they soon intimated to him their expectation of spirits, or the intended alternative of abandoning the work. He replied that he was sorry to appear to any of them inhospitable or mean. Anything in his power excepting spirits was freely at their disposal, but the supplying of this was contrary to his sense of right, and impossible; and that, if it was the only alternative, his timbers would remain unraised till they rotted. The men abandoned the work and went away. He said but little, but there was much discussion of the case through the neighborhood, till some time afterward, by common consent among themselves, most of the same men, unasked, returned and completed the "raising."

He was a Methodist—"Father Humphrey" in church and society, in later life, and his house was the usual welcome rest and temporary home of the itinerant preachers of that denomination. Many years after his death, Hon. Samuel Rawson, his adjoining farm neighbor in Victor, said of him, "He was the most conscientious and strictly honest man I ever knew."

After his death, his widow, whose energy, frugality, spirit of independence, and fortitude in trials and adversity had distinguished her through her married life, maintained a home for her children and encouraged and aided in their education, till all had engaged in their own life work. She died in Millgrove (Orland P. O.), Ind., at the home of her daughter Mrs. Wilder, 10 Sept., 1860, æ. 67 years, having through an active and devoted life exemplified the exalted character of a Christian wife and mother.

1144. II. CHARLOTTE DRYER,<sup>6*</sup> b. 2 Feb., 1817; was married in Gilead, Branch Co., Mich., (a town adjoining Orland, Ind.), at the residence of Mr. Emerson Marsh, a brother-in-law of the bridegroom, 22 Sept., 1852, to Rev. Obed (son of Obed and Experience Smith†) Dickinson, b. 15 June, 1818, Amherst, Mass. After the death of his mother in 1842, Mr. Dickinson commenced a course of study for the ministry. He entered Marietta College in the fall of 1845, and graduated in the summer of 1849. In the fall of the same year, he became a member of the Theological Seminary at Andover, Mass., receiving his diploma in August, 1852.

Rev. Obed Dickinson and his wife sailed from New York, via Cape Horn, for Oregon, as Home Missionaries, Nov. 13th, 1852, and arrived at Portland, Oregon, March 4th, 1853. They were immediately stationed at Salem, by the older ministers of the Territory. On arriving at their field of labor, they found a Congregational church of four members already organized, but with no house of worship, and with small means to build. In the years 1861 to 1863, however, the Church had gathered sufficient strength, and after the usual trials incident to such a work, a commodious house of worship was completed, and dedicated August 28th, 1863, to the great joy of all concerned. During these last few years, especially after the civil war began, the question of slavery, in the now newly organized State of Oregon, had excited a great amount of feeling. The pastor of the church at Salem taking strong grounds against human slavery, both in and out of the pulpit, it was thought best by many of its members that another minister should be called, which was accordingly done, and in April, 1867, he resigned his place to his successor, Rev. P. S. Knight, who, in 1882, was still in charge and preaching, with great acceptance, to the people.

These years of pioneering had been attended with much hardship, privation and sickness in his family, and to supplement his precarious support he had begun, in a small way, the cultivation and sale of garden seeds. This, which he has continued since the termination of his pastorate, now (1884) constitutes one of the leading industries of Salem, where he and his family still reside. He continues to occupy vacant pulpits from time to time, but has never again sought settlement as a pastor.

Colonel Humphrey resided in Simsbury, Ct., where he was a merchant, and a man of standing and influence. Like his father he was distinguished for his military services. In the Revolutionary war, he was in the company of Captain (afterward Major) Elihu<sup>5</sup> Humphrey, 1775-6, and was "Clerk of the Roll." It is said concerning him that he "was a most charming companion; his social airs and pleasant countenance gained the affection and good wishes of all." [Fam. 17, J.<sup>2</sup>] He was appointed Second Lieutenant, by the General Assembly of Connecticut, in October, 1776. When he was made Colonel has not been ascertained. He was one of the executors of the will of Major Elihu<sup>5</sup> Humphrey, and, in 1779, was appointed guardian of his six children.

Col. Jonathan Humphrey died 19 March, 1812, and was buried near Major Elihu<sup>5</sup> Humphrey, in Hop Meadow Burying-ground. Receipts for legacies from his estate were signed, July 22d. 1814, by Eunice Bissell, Titus L. Bissell, Lydia H. Humphrey, Laura G. Bacon, Richard Bacon, Jr., and Nancy Humphrey. (Simsbury Prob. Rec., vi., 523.)

His widow survived him sixteen years, and died 26 July, 1828. The will of Lydia G. Humphrey, of Simsbury, was dated May 16th, 1828, and proved Aug. 18th, 1828: Lydia H. Humphrey executrix: mentions her dau. Laura G., wife of Richard Bacon: dau. Lydia H. Humphrey: and grandchildren: Richard Bacon, Jr., Harriet H. Bacon, Laura E. Bacon, Moses T. #### FAMILY 65.

He entered the Army of the Revolution, as a private, and was engaged in the battle of Long Island. He was Captain of the militia company, prior to 1784 [See Fam. 35, S.<sup>2</sup>]; Major of militia; and Brigade Major and Inspector of the First Division of Connecticut Militia (two brigades, or nineteen regiments), 1791-1795.

He was a man of fine talents and useful attainments, and enjoyed the confidence of his fellow-citizens, who conferred upon him several important offices. In Simsbury, he was elected Justice of the Peace when about twenty-five years of age, and served from that time until his removal to Onondaga County, N. Y.; was also Representative to the General Assembly, 1779, '91, '93, (May Sessions);—at the last-named date with Daniel<sup>5</sup> Humphrey, [Fam. 22, J.<sup>2</sup>]‡

Major Humphreys made arrangements with the Wadsworths to emigrate to the "Genesee country," in Western New York, and take up land in company with them; but before the time for his departure, he received the appointment of Superintendent of Newgate, at Simsbury,—the first State prison in Connecticut. This he accepted, holding the position for five years. [See Fam. 17, S.<sup>2</sup>] At one time, when the prisoners mutinied and determined to set fire to the prison, one of them, being very much attached to May,<sup>6</sup> the little son of Major Reuben,<sup>5</sup> informed the father of the plot in order that he might save the life of the child. Thus their plan was defeated.

The portraits of Hon. Reuben Humphreys and his wife were painted by one of the prisoners, and are now (1884) in the possession of Mrs. P. L. Perine (1198), who writes that they were painted in 1800. Mrs. Humphreys is holding her daughter Eliza, then a babe of a few months, afterward Mrs. S. C. Parker, and the mother of Mrs. Perine. The topaz pin represented in the portrait is still in Mrs. Perine's possession. The coat of arms of the Humphreys family is painted in one corner of the picture.** Mr. R. H. Farnham says of these portraits: "They were painted by a convict in the old Simsbury prison; but many years afterward his picture was repainted, by some other painter, so as to show him as an old man. In the original, he was in military costume, with a cocked hat, the position of Superintendent of the Newgate prison being a military one, under the laws of Connecticut."

* Nancy, dau. of Jonathan Humphrey, was baptized March, 1792, by Rev. Samuel Stebbins, of Simsbury, Ct.

† She was born 20 June, 1761, acc. to the records of Mr. George D. Humphreys, [Fam. 112, S.]

** This coat of arms bears a fesse and three griffins' heads erased. Mrs. Wilcox [Fam. 70, S.] states that Judge Humphreys supposed, for some reason, that he was descended from a branch of the family in Wales. This coat of arms has occasioned some discussion. We give the original copper plate engraving surmounted by the picture of the Judge. It is the more remarkable from having been engraved by one Mr. Stiles who was a convict in the Newgate prison. It is engraved upon copper taken from the pit over which the prison was built, and is probably one of the earliest efforts of the kind in this country. I do not regard the arms as of any authority. My idea is that some tradition of family arms existed, and that this Stiles from some source obtained this three Griffins heads. On p. 53, the three nags heads in No. 9, of arms is seen, and may have been the original of the three Griffins heads, and the fact of this being a Welch family may have given currency to the idea of the Welch descent. The Masonic plate is from the same source and date.

The only other relic Mrs. Perine now has is a small leathern trunk, with the initials R. H., in brass nails, on the top of the cover.

Mrs. Sarah G. Sharp (1197) has one of a pair of silver knee-buckles set with brilliants, which were formerly worn by her grandfather Reuben Humphreys, whose name is engraved on the same. She has also a copy of his coat of arms.

Major Humphreys removed to Onondaga Hill, some four miles east of Marcellus, in Onondaga Co., N. Y., about 1801.* About 1807, he agreed to pay ten dollars annually towards the support of Rev. Levi Parsons, if he was settled as pastor in Marcellus. Near the year 1817, he commenced making his summer residence in that town, occupying a house which was then, and for more than forty years afterward, called the "Green House," on account of its color.

In 1804, he was appointed, by Gov. Morgan Lewis, first Judge of Onondaga County, then embracing almost the entire western portion of the State. The commission, which is now in the possession of Mr. Moulton G. Farnham, reads as follows:

The People of the State of New York, by the grace of God, free and independent; to all to whom these presents shall come, greeting: Know ye that we have assigned and constituted, and by these presents do assign and constitute Reuben Humphrey of our County of Onondaga, Esquire, to be the first Judge of our Court of Common Pleas, to be holden in and for our said County of Onondaga, with full power unto him, the said Reuben Humphrey, to exercise, fulfill, do and perform all powers and jurisdiction which unto the office of first judge of the said court do or may belong, and do hereby authorize and empower the said Reuben Humphrey, together with the other judges and assistant justices of our said Court of Common Pleas, to be holden in and for our said county, or any three of them for the time being (whereof we will the said Reuben Humphrey or either of the said judges of the said court for the time being to be one), to hear, try and determine by a jury of twelve good and lawful freeholders of the said county, all suits, quarrels, controversies and differences cognizable in our said court, and arising in our county aforesaid, between any of the good people of our said State there, according to the laws and ordinances in that behalf made and provided, and to award execution therefor, and use and exercise all powers and jurisdiction to the said court belonging.

To have and to hold, exercise and enjoy the said office of first judge of the said Court of Common Pleas to be holden in and for our said county of Onondaga, with all the powers, jurisdiction and authorities thereunto belonging, unto him the said Reuben Humphrey for and during such time as he shall well behave himself therein, or until he shall attain the age of sixty years.

In testimony whereof, we have caused these our letters to be made patent, and the great seal of our said State to be hereunto affixed, witness our trusty and well beloved Morgan Lewis, Esquire, Governor of our said State, General and Commander in Chief of all the Militia, and Admiral of the Navy of the same, by and with the advice and consent of our Council of Appointment at our City of Albany the Third Day of July One Thousand Eight Hundred and Four, and in the Twenty Eighth year of our independence.

MOR'N LEWIS.

Passed the Secretary's office the Twelfth Day of July 1804, Jasper Hopper.

Commission to Reuben Humphrey, Esq'r, as First Judge.

Recorded.

This office he held until his election, in 1807, as Representative to the Congress of the United States for the Sixteenth District of New York. Having served one term of two years, he declined re-election. He was a Member of the Senate of the State of New York for the Western District, from 1811 to 1815, the 34th, 35th, 36th and 37th Sessions; and an active and earnest friend of the Erie canal in the days of De Witt Clinton.†

* About 1801, acc. to The Centennial History of the Town of Marcellus; in 1802, acc. to Mr. M. S. Dyer; in 1803, acc. to some of the descendants of Major Humphreys.

† The building of this canal, the most influential factor in the development of the State of New York and of the Western States, then so-called, incurred an unwonted degree of hostility and opposition. It was called "Clinton's big ditch," and the idea of digging a canal along-side of the Mohawk river was likened to the wisdom displayed in the old Dutch houses, where a big hole was made for the entrance of the dog and a little one for the cat, and when the Judge invited his brother Capt. Asher to visit him in his new home in the then West, he replied that he would do so as soon as Clinton's Big Ditch was opened, which he clearly believed would never be.

Hon. Reuben<sup>5</sup> Humphreys is described as a large, muscular, and portly man, whose usual weight in the prime of life was about two hundred and fifty pounds; and several of his children partook largely of his physical characteristics. He died at Marcellus, N. Y., 11 Aug., 1832, æ. 75 years.* Mrs. Humphreys died 1 Apr., 1827, æ. 68 years.* She is said to have been fully the equal of her husband in intellectual powers.

Judge Humphreys was a man of might and renown in those days. Early in military life, and all his days in public life,—always in positions of trust and influence, he developed those habits of push and energy for which his mind and physical nature so well qualified him. His stalwart form and sturdy hand and will gave direction and force to whatever his mind espoused. His energetic and business wife managed the household and farm, while he managed the world outside. Still he had a mind for a joke, and he could laugh as heartily and joke as keenly as the best. On one occasion he was lamenting his large family, when his grandmother, then nearly a hundred years old, said "Why Reuben, children are a blessing." "Yes," he replied, "so is snow a blessing, but who wants it twelve feet deep," alluding to his twelve children. His mother was very proud of him, and her inquiry, "Have you seen Esquire Humphreys, my son, the Major?" may indicate the mother's idea of his position and consequence.

It is said of him that he was somewhat given to eccentricities. "One Sabbath, the choir in church sang a hymn to the tune of 'Antigua,' and it so disturbed the old gentleman in his peace of mind, that immediately after the services he met the choir, and by paying the chorister one dollar, obtained from them the promise that they would not sing it again in that church, so long as he should live. Thus it was always said that Judge Humphreys bought 'Antigua.' The choir lived up to their contract."†

- Mr. Farnham studied law in his father's office and at a law school in Ballston Spa, N. Y., from 1850 to 1852; was admitted to practice, but has never followed the profession. In April, 1857, he established himself in Lecompton, Kansas, as a Real Estate and Loan Agent, but subsequently removed his business to Topeka. In September, 1860, he returned to New York State, and located at Batavia, N. Y. In the spring of 1864, he organized the First National Bank of Batavia, of which he was the first President, and a Director for some years. He moved to Attica, in 1869, and has held the offices of Justice of the Peace and Supervisor of the town; built the Attica malt-house in 1882, and is now conducting it. Res. (1884) Attica, N. 1185. IX. HELEN,<sup>6</sup> b. 26 July, 1797; died at Prattsburgh, N. Y., 17 May, 1846, æ. 49 years. She resembled her father;—was large, of noble presence, and dignified and amiable character. She married (1) about 1820, Benjamin Leonard, a younger brother of Cutler Leonard, husband of her sister Ann<sup>6</sup> Humphrey. Soon after this marriage, these two brothers with their wives went to Illinois, and settled near the Wabash river. They had not been there very long before both husbands were taken sick with chills and fever, at that time so prevalent through that part of the country, and both died and were there buried. The date of death of the husband of Helen is obtained from a memento given to her soon after his death, which reads "Sacred to the memory of Benjamin Leonard, who died August 31st, 1820, aged 35 years." In the meantime the sisters were both taken sick. So soon as they recovered sufficiently, they started for their old home in Marcellus, N. Y. It was a long, tedious journey; and they were so feeble that they were carried, a part of the way, on a bed.
- After Mrs. Helen Leonard's recovery, she married (2) in Marcellus, N. Y., 5 Feb., 1822, Abner Parcell (son of Moses† and Elizabeth Arnett) Lyon, b. Jan.

* Mr. R. H. Farnham states that the family of Hector Humphrey did not add the s to their name until within the last twenty years (1884).

† Moses Lyon, born in 1763, at Lyons Farms, N. J.; married, in 1787, Elizabeth Arnett; removed to Prattsburgh, N. Y., where he resided until his death. They had thirteen children, two of whom died in infancy; the others lived to mature years and all married.

1799, Elizabethtown, N. J. He was a tanner by trade, as his father had been. A few years after his marriage he went into the mercantile business. In 1855, he moved to a farm, on which he remained until about 1869, when he located at Naples, N. Y., where he continued to reside until his death, 10 Mch., 1878.

In his younger years he was quite a politician. He held the office of magistrate at the age of twenty-six years, and it was recorded as noticeable that he was the youngest magistrate ever elected in the town. He was an eminently pious man; was a deacon in the Presbyterian church for many years. Two years before his death, when more than seventy-five years old, he represented the Presbytery of Steuben, in the General Assembly at St. Louis. *Children (by 2d marriage; born in Prattsburgh, N. #### FAMILY 66.

He was captain of the militia company in which his brother Reuben and his wife's brothers, Frederick and George Humphreys, had been officers. During the war of 1812, when those who were exempted from military duty on account of age or infirmity formed themselves into companies, chose their officers, and held themselves in readiness to march at a moment's notice, Asher and Frederick Humphreys were sergeants, and George Humphreys captain of a company called "Silver Greys;" but never saw active service. [See Fams. 33 and 34, S.<sup>2</sup>]

Mr. M. S. Dyer, of Canton, Ct., sends us the following reminiscences:

"Capt. Asher Humphreys I well remember. I was raised within three-quarters of a mile of him and was about twenty years old when he died, and so long as I went to school saw him daily, as our school-house was not more than ten rods from his house. He kept a hotel, up to about 1820, which was for many years one of the most noted in this region. He was a man of great colloquial powers, well-informed on the current topics of the day, and could entertain his guests to their satisfaction.

"I well remember the Silver Grays. It was a sort of burlesque, something like the Putnam Phalanx of the present time. Col. Joseph Dyer [Fam. 7 (170), S.<sup>2</sup>], I think, was the captain. The most of the company were Revolutionary soldiers and discharged officers of militia companies. They had very little idea of going to fight, unless in case of invasion.

* It has been an unsettled question whether the final s belongs to the name of Humphreys, and if so at what time it was added. I have a deed of land made by my grandfather Capt. Asher Humphreys to my father Dr. Erastus Humphreys, dated 14 May, 1806, in which Asher Humphrey signs his name without the s. But in the same instrument drawn up by Dr. Solomon Everest, Justice of the Peace, all of the Humphreys are signed with an s. This seems to confirm the traditionary statement that the s was adopted as a result of information obtained through Col. David Humphreys during his sojourn abroad, and in consequence of the investigations made by him in England. Previous to that time I do not find it, nor do I generally find it used out of the immediate branch of the family. Later information shows, however, that some branches of the family, see pages 53 and 54, and arms Nos. 9, 15, 16, 17, and 18, where the final s is used, see also note in connection with Fam. 65.—F. H.

"Col. George Humphrey wrote his name without the s, and Mother remembers when her Father made the addition to his, at the suggestion of his brother Hector, [Fam. 113, S.] who, on his way home from college at one time, had paid a visit to the Col. or Gen. David Humphreys, of Humphreysville, and by him been convinced that the 's' belonged to the name, and as will be seen Col. George so signs his name after the silhouette."—Miss Sarah Brown.

"Capt. Asher carried on a large farm, which he sold a year or so before he died. The house that he built and occupied (directly across the street from my house) was burned eight or ten years since. The house built by Esq. Reuben Humphreys [Fam. 65, S.<sup>2</sup>] is now standing in good condition. The house built by Esq. Oliver Humphrey [Fam. 18, S.<sup>2</sup>], before 1760, is now standing in good order, about two hundred yards from me. The house built by Oliver Humphrey, son of Asher, is standing in good condition, about sixty or seventy yards from me.

"Capt. Asher was a large man, of fine personal appearance, and much respected in the community. I do not think he ever sought offices, as I am sure he might have had them had he been so disposed." He was, all through life, at times affected with the asthma, which may have had something to do with his leading a more quiet life than his relatives. His wife was a woman of great energy and business tact, and during her life had much to do in carrying on the business of the house and farm.

THE HUMPHREY ARMS.

The COATS OF ARMS which we have given in the frontispiece of this number are interesting, if not important, in many ways; and few families have so rich and imposing a collection. In considering them, it should be remembered, that in heraldry everything has a meaning,—nothing is accidental,—and family histories are thus traced when all other indices fail.

The history of their possession has been already given in the preface to the American families, on page 93, and we have now only to consider their meaning. To those versed in heraldry it is plain, but at the risk of repeating a thrice-told tale, we will give their story as we read it.

The oldest coat of arms is doubtless the one numbered as 5, "Quarterly, Argent and Sable." The simplicity of colors and device indicate the very infancy of heraldry, and they are probably as ancient as any arms in Europe. Indeed, Glover and other ancient authorities in heraldry do not give their origin: and on page 28, line 39, in the history of the Humphreys engaged in the Crusades, we find these arms mentioned as of those conspicuous in the wars for the recovery of the Holy Sepulchre.

The next oldest arms I take to be that of No. 1, "Sable, four Pallets Ermine." These doubtless originated in Normandy, and indicate a judicial celebrity, and likewise an origin at or near St. Malo, where, as we note on p. 49, the ermine was the city arms, and was emblazoned with the portcullis or city-gate. So honorable had this ermine and sable become, at least in the estimation of Sir John Homfray, pp. 1 and 33, that his horse was so caparisoned, and his picture so painted and hung in the British Museum: and we see Ozias Humphrey as tenaciously clinging to it, in one instance placing it beneath his picture, p. 58, and in his book-mark, on the next page, marshalling it with the next arms, No. 2, in the picture. This antedates the Conquest.

The next and perhaps most conspicuous is No. 2, "Or, on a chevron, between three Fleur-de-lis, Sable as many Bezants." The field of gold and the fleur-de-lis indicate the affiliation with royalty, and the anterior use by the wearer of the fleurs-de-lis before they were exclusively appropriated by the crowns of France and England. This connection is sustained by the history of the kinship of William the Conqueror with Humphrey de Bohun, and other renowned Knights of the name who were his relatives as well as companions in arms, see pp. 18, 20. The bezants indicate the large use of these gold pieces of the value of some £15 in the purchase of Christian captives taken in the Holy Wars, and thus redeemed by this wealthy and valorous knight. These arms also antedate the Crusades, and the chevron and bezants were added after those events.

Arms No. 3, "On a field of red, a cross budded argent, pierced in the centre and charged with twelve escallop shells sable." This and the two arms, Nos. 4 and 6, are simply "Crusader Arms;" the charge of the escallop shells indicating also a pilgrimage to the tomb of St. James, see p. 4 of introduction. The certificate adds, that all these arms appear to be very ancient, and to have been brought into the Herald's office at its first institution in 1340.

The reflection and inquiry I would like to follow is this:—Here is an honorable, and even conspicuous family history, running back at least some thirty generations, and all that period, notwithstanding the diversified and numerous crossings, still in some good degree maintaining its characteristics and peculiarities, if not its prominence and supremacy. For I think it maintainable that the Humphreys of to-day are in the main what they were a thousand years ago. The same love of adventure; the same self-reliance; the same contempt of fear or danger; the same poetic temperament; the same respect for law; the same restlessness in a beaten path, and desire and impulse for something new; the same grace, urbanity, and easy dignity of manner, and chivalrous devotion to the sex—instinctive and natural from childhood to old age—the same grace of language, keen sense of humour and sparkling wit, the best story tellers, and most enjoyable companions; and the ready ability to acquire, and the facility of meeting an emergency; all these exist in the name to-day as they have done, so far as we are able to gather, infer or learn, for hundreds of years in the past. If I am not misled, and am correct in my observations, it forms one of the most wonderful facts in natural history.

I account for it on biological and physiological grounds. That the hereditary germ follows the male line of ancestry, while the environment and nutrition is supplied from the maternal line, and that the conformation of brain development and its molecular disposition following the line of ancestry finds, in whatever position it may be placed, or whatever it may have to learn, a condition and disposition of brain molecules, which in the nearer or remote ancestor have acquired this disposition and development, and so the new to be learned finds the instinct of the old through which the new is already half learned when it is proposed or presented. And so it also happens that the evil and the wrong or the new, which has never been practised in the ancestor, in the past, finds no corresponding molecular disposition of brain in the offspring of the present, and can only with difficulty—and awkwardly, if at all, be practised; and thus it is that genealogical lines and family traits are preserved and perpetuated.—AUTHOR.

FAMILY 67.

Solomon<sup>5</sup> Humphrey settled in West Simsbury, Ct., where he resided till 1785, when he removed to that part of Bristol which is now included in Burlington, Ct., and there remained till 1813.† In that year, he went to reside in Barkhamsted, Ct., where he passed the remainder of his life, dying in that town, 24 Dec., 1834, æ. 81 years. He was a Revolutionary soldier, and drew a pension. He was a man of sterling character and deep piety. His grandson, Judge Heman Humphrey Barbour, writes concerning him: "I remember very clearly his pleasant and sedate countenance, and his easy dignity, urbanity and quietness of manners. He was a natural gentleman."‡

Notwithstanding great adversity of circumstances and limited opportunities, through their zeal for the education of their children, Mr. Humphrey and his wife secured for them very good, early, religious and scholastic acquirements, and laid the foundation for that love for learning and devotion to usefulness, and for the eminence and distinction in their descendants, to which the Christian civilization of our land is so much indebted.

With only the ordinary educational advantages of the common school, during his minority, Luther<sup>6</sup> Humphrey began to prepare for college at about the age of twenty-four, and graduated at Middlebury College, Vt., in 1813. In 1814, he entered the ministry, and, in March, 1815, was ordained as a Missionary to the Western Reserve, Ohio,—then called New Connecticut. In the following May, he set out on his way to Ohio, visiting schools or preaching almost every day on the journey, so that he did not reach his place of destination till the 2d of August. He was installed pastor in Burton, Geauga Co., Ohio, 25 Oct., 1815. Late the same year, he returned to Becket, Mass., for his wife; and, the January following, with his goods packed in a wagon, started with his wife and youngest sister for his parish, which they reached in forty-two days. They settled in a "hired log-house; borrowed two chairs, made three stools, ate upon a chest, slept on the floor, and were truly happy." He was here settled over two townships five miles square, and labored half of the time as a missionary. He continued here in this work thirteen years; subsequently, for a short time, he labored in Vienna, Trumbull Co., Ohio, with great spiritual success. He afterward received and accepted a call to a pastorate in Connecticut, where he remained two years. In 1830, he removed to Michigan, and resumed pastoral and missionary work in Cass County, then a wilderness with a sparse population, with only one bridge,—and that a poor one of logs—across any of the streams between there and Detroit, a distance of 170 miles. This region was mostly without roads, the points of the compass being the chief guide across prairies and through forests. On one occasion, in making a journey of thirty miles in a sleigh, in midwinter, to fulfill an appointment to preach, he lost his way in the forest at night, his sleigh became locked fast by a tree, and he was compelled to remain there till daylight, his feet and hands becoming frozen. He proceeded on his journey however, and preached to his waiting congregation at two o'clock the next day. On this field his first wife died, and he married his second. They removed to Windham, Portage Co., O., where he resided until his death. In this arduous work he had been engaged for about thirty-six years. He was a glorious type of the American pioneer clergyman, and a noble example of Christian zeal, benevolence and faith. [See fac-simile of letter of Capt. John Brown to Rev. - ii. Judge Heman Humphrey,<sup>7</sup> b. 19 July, 1820; was married (1) in Barkhamsted, Ct., at the residence of the bride's father, Thursday, 23 Oct. 1845, to Frances Elizabeth Merrill, the Rev. R. S. Hazen, (Cong.) performing the ceremony. She was born 25 May, 1824, in Barkhamsted, Ct., and was the oldest child of Merlin and Clarissa (Newton) Merrill, of B., and a distant relative of her husband.* After their marriage they went to Indiana, and resided in Columbus, Bartholomew County, where Mr. Barbour had formerly been engaged in the practice of law, he having been admitted to the bar in June, 1841. In 1845, a short time before his marriage, he had been elected Senator for three years.

In May, 1846, there was a call for three regiments of volunteers from Indiana to serve in the Mexican war, and, after mature deliberation, it was decided that he should enlist. The company to which he belonged was soon after filled, accepted, and ordered to New Albany, where it remained till July 8th, when it was sent forward, by the way of New Orleans, to the Rio Grande. Mrs. Barbour went to New Albany and remained with her husband until July 7th, and soon afterward returned to her old home in Barkhamsted. There he followed her in the fall, having obtained leave of absence from his regiment, which was encamped on the Rio Grande, without any prospect of active service. He returned to his military duties in February, 1847, and was mustered out of service at New Orleans, June 26th of that year. He held a commission as Lieutenant.

In the latter part of 1847, they settled once more in their western home, and Mr. Barbour resumed the practice of his profession. In 1849, he was ordained an Elder of the Presbyterian church in Columbus, of which they were both members. He was also teacher of the Bible class, and chorister. A few months later, on account of continued sickness in his family, he was led to decide upon a removal to Connecticut, and in the spring of 1850 we find them residing in Hartford. This change of residence proved to be a favorable one, bringing health to the household, and, gradually, success in business affairs. But, in 1857, they were sorely afflicted in the death of two of their sons, and, in 1861, in the death of their only daughter. The loss of these children was borne by the mother with great Christian resignation, but little did her friends realize that she would so soon follow them to the grave. She died in Hartford, October 17th, 1863, and, with her infant son, was buried October 21st, near her beloved children who had passed on before her. For an account of her noble life and character we must refer the reader to the work entitled My Wife and My Mother, which contains many tributes to her worth.

I find the 'look,' and disposition and manners in one of my brothers, and in one of my sons, and in several of the connection, removed several degrees from my mother's family. The evidence to me is, that these traits have run in the Humphreys at least from the first Samuel who married a daughter of Simon Mills; they may have been longer in the family."—My Wife and My Mother, Genealogy, pp. 50, 51

He attended, some years, the academies of Amherst and Easthampton, Mass., and studied law with Roger H. Mills, Esq., of New Hartford, Ct., and in the Yale Law School. In 1849, he went to Wolcottville, Ct., and commenced the practice of an attorney-at-law; was successful in business and highly esteemed in the community. He was elected to various offices in the town; was Judge of Probate; Town Clerk and Treasurer nineteen years, 1851 to 1870; was sent to the Legislature two terms, 1850 and 1865; and was Senator from the Fifteenth District, in 1870. He contributed $1,035.00 towards the new Congregational church edifice; was elected Deacon, 15 Feb. 1868; was also a diligent laborer in the Sunday School. In 1870, he removed to Hartford, Ct., and entered into the practice of the law with his brother Heman Humphrey<sup>7</sup> Barbour. 1269. III. BISSELL,<sup>6</sup> b. 5 Nov., 1792; d. in Kalamazoo, Mich., 11 Aug., 1855, æ. 63 years. He married (1) 23 Mch., 1823, Content Rathbun, a native of Hartford, Ct. He married (2) in Batavia, N. Y., 19 Mch., 1839, Eliza (Ganson) Carpenter, widow of Clement C. Carpenter, a former lawyer of Batavia, and dau. of Major James Ganson, of Le Roy, N. Y. She died in 1858, at Kalamazoo. No children.

Bissell<sup>6</sup> Humphrey was for many years a very popular and widely known hotel keeper and stage proprietor. His first hotel, the old "Eagle Tavern" in Batavia, which he built in 1824, was destroyed by fire in 1834, and the disaster nearly ruined him. He however managed to rebuild it soon afterwards, and it is now known as the "Saint James." He was for a time part owner, and later, was sole proprietor of the extensive line of four-horse stages operating between Canandaigua, Rochester, Batavia and Buffalo, before the days of railroads. His brother Hector was associated with him in business while he remained in New York State. Upon the completion of the first railroad through to Buffalo, about 1844, he removed his stage business to Michigan, and established lines from the western terminus of the Michigan Central Railroad, which was then being built, through to New Buffalo, Chicago, and other points, and continued to operate them until the railroad was completed, when the Chicago line was withdrawn, and he confined his operations thereafter to his lateral lines, from Jackson to Lansing, Kalamazoo to Grand Rapids, etc., during the remainder of his life. Upon his removal to Michigan, Mr. Humphrey at first resided in Marshall; but he afterward went to Kalamazoo, at which time his business was so extensive that he was the owner of over two thousand horses.

He was a quiet, undemonstrative man in most respects, but at the same time was always social and obliging with his friends. His bearing and deportment were unmistakably those of a well-bred man, who had seen a good deal of life. He always dressed with scrupulous neatness and excellent taste; was punctilious in his observance of the rules of good breeding, and probably no man was ever more careful not to infringe upon the rights or injure the feelings of others. His generosity was a proverb. After he became a resident of Michigan, which in those days was a strongly democratic state, he was,—being himself a democrat,—repeatedly urged by his partisans to run for Congress and for Governor, at times when a nomination by that party for either of those offices would have been equivalent to an election; but he invariably declined political honors.

Lot<sup>5</sup> Humphrey entered the Patriot Army, in the American Revolution, when sixteen years old, with many other lads of about the same age. He witnessed the hanging of Major Andre. He treasured many reminiscences of the war to the end of his life, and used to mention the care manifested by General Washington towards his youthful and inexperienced soldiers, in cautioning them not to expose themselves to capture by crossing the lines, and in similar personal intercourse and expressions of interest in them and their welfare.

1389. Theodore<sup>5</sup> Humphrey, [510] (Noah,<sup>4</sup> Capt. Noah,<sup>3</sup> Lieut. Samuel,<sup>2</sup> Michael,<sup>1</sup>) was born, probably, in Simsbury, Ct. He married Cynthia (?) Woodford. He is said to have died in Farmington, Ct., where he had resided.

Mrs. Cynthia Humphrey, of Simsbury, Ct., and Chauncey Wheeler, of Farmington, Ct., were appointed administrators on the estate of Theodore Humphrey, of Simsbury, Ct., December 23d, 1820. Six months were allowed for creditors; inventory taken January 4th, 1821. (Simsbury Prob. Rec., viii., pp. 510-12; ix., p. 500.)

FAMILY 76.

1390. General Chauncey<sup>5</sup> Humphrey, [511] (Noah,<sup>4</sup> Capt. Noah,<sup>3</sup> Lieut. Samuel,<sup>2</sup> Michael,<sup>1</sup>) was born, probably, in Simsbury, Ct. He married Amanda Sheldon, and settled at Albany, N. Y., where he held a commission as Brigadier-General; was Inspector-General in the war of 1812; and is said to have been a splendid officer. He was at one time Captain of the well-known Burgesses Corps of Albany. He was one of the building committee of Albany Academy, in 1815; and was a Director of the Albany City Bank, which was incorporated in 1834.

March 21st, 1823, fifty Canadian horses came into the city of Albany harnessed to a single sleigh. They had been purchased at Montreal, for the Philadelphia market, by Mrs. James Warren and Major C. Humphrey. Gen. Humphrey died 18 Oct., 1852, at Middlebury, Vermont.

Children:

1391. I. CORREL,<sup>6</sup> M. D., born in 1805; studied and graduated at Union College, as A. B., 1821; began the study of medicine with his uncle Dr. Gideon Humphrey; attended lectures at the University of Pennsylvania, and there graduated. He made diligent use of the advantages of study afforded by wealth; for two or three years practiced at Albany, N. Y.; was admitted to Albany County Medical Society, in 1831; was active during the cholera season of 1832; and, after several years practice, sailed for the East Indies, as surgeon on board the Edward, partly for the sake of travel and scientific studies, and partly on account of his health. On board, he had a fall, from the effects of which he died a few days after the ship's arrival at Calcutta, May 21st, 1834.

He was an intelligent and careful physician, and was regarded as a young man of much promise. He had a symmetrical figure, an erect carriage, a clear brunette complexion, a full black eye, and a prompt, easy, prepossessing manner, with refined and cultivated tastes.*

At an early age he lost his father, and was for a time placed under the instructions of Baron Steuben, who had been the Aid of General Suwarrow, of Polish memory; and at the close of the Revolution was acting as Adjutant-General of the American army.† When fourteen years old, impelled by that spirit of adventure which eminently characterized his course of life, he left home and on foot made his way to Fort Niagara to join his brother Enoch, who was in the army and there stationed, and who, in later years, so highly distinguished himself in the battle of New Orleans, by his intrepidity in command of the artillery. [Fam. 23 (513), S.2] Our country, at that early date, was almost a wilderness in those regions, but the boy overcame all obstacles and arrived at Fort Niagara, shoeless and with bleeding feet. Being wild and erratic, he spent most of his time with the Indians, of whom he was passionately fond, joining them in their hunting excursions, and oftentimes sleeping beneath the snow, wrapped in his blanket.

It is impossible to track him through all the wanderings of his eventful life. He was in the army for a time; afterward devoted himself to the study of medicine, in New York City, and graduated at the old King's (now Columbia) College. He was appointed surgeon of a French man-of-war at the age of twenty-four; was afterward surgeon at the Hospital on Lake Ponchartrain below New Orleans; was also surgeon on board of various ships, sailing to almost every quarter of the known world. He visited the West Indies, and was present during the bloody revolution of San Domingo, and was instrumental in saving many of the foreign residents from massacre.

In 1806, he joined the Miranda Expedition, which was intended to revolutionize a portion of South America, and was appointed surgeon on board the ship Emperor. They were attacked by a Spanish fleet and captured, with the exception of one or two small vessels, upon one of which he escaped. His vessel fell into the hands of Spanish buccaneers, and those on board were condemned to walk the plank, or work in the mines. The former was his lot, and after being in the water three days, sucking his shoe for sustenance, he was picked up by a French vessel and carried to France. There, after numerous adventures, he was arrested as a spy and condemned to be shot at sunset. He was extricated from this perilous situation and set at liberty through the intervention of a French officer whose name he remembered and who chanced to be in that vicinity.

During the war of 1812, he was a surgeon at the fort at the mouth of the Mississippi. He settled in New York City, where he commenced the practice of his profession; but inducements were offered him to move farther South, and he located in Delaware County, Pennsylvania, where he became very eminent. After residing there for many years, he went to Philadelphia, still pursuing the practice of his profession, which was widely extended here also, where he was celebrated for his personal magnetism, and wide practical success.

As age began to mark its progress upon his physical powers, he became weary of the excitement of a city life, and daily contact with the world, and purchased a home on the confines of Burlington, N. J., where he lived in almost total seclusion. After a long residence in that town, he removed to Beverly, N. J., where he spent the remainder of his days. Exceedingly fond of the writings of ancient philosophers, he passed his time in reading, meditation, and the cultivation of his grounds,—for he was a devotee of nature.

Time evolved symptoms of the dreary affliction which awaited him. Days, weeks, months, years dragged slowly on, developing the dreaded truth of utter blindness. No one can depict the agonies he endured mentally. Excluded from the enjoyment of the various beauties of nature, his mind dwelt on the memories of the past, and engaged in deep and quiet research into cause and effect. As age progressed he seemed to acquire renewed power and vigor of intellect, until at length he ceased to lament the loss of his physical sight, as by that instrumentality the mental and spiritual had become so richly gifted.

Dr. Humphrey continued in the practice of Allopathy for many years, when he formed the acquaintance of Dr. Hering, of Philadelphia, about 1834, and was induced to investigate Homeopathy. He resisted, for some time, the established principle of the Homeopathic system, Similia Similibus Curantur, but, broad and progressive in his views and an earnest seeker after truth, he investigated the subject carefully, successfully experimented upon himself for an affection of the liver engendered by a residence in Africa, became a convert of Hahnemann's theory, and adopted it in his extensive practice with wonderful success. That a physician like Dr. Humphrey, at an advanced period of his life, should be willing to cast aside early prejudices and candidly examine the claims of a new system of Medical Philosophy, does honor to his heart as well as to his head. It was undoubtedly his capacity for analysis that led him, in the maturity of his years, to embrace the profound views that the great Hahnemann had given to the world. His conversion to this system of therapeutics was brought about by witnessing its effects upon a patient of his own, whose fractured leg had failed to unite, until after the administration, by advice of Dr. Hering, of Philadelphia, of the proper Homeopathic remedy—in this case, phosphate of lime.

Dr. Humphrey's literary remains are not numerous, consisting mainly of contributions to the Medical Journals. In a treatise on the comparative merits of the Old and New School Systems of Medicine, he has demonstrated the decided pre-eminence of the latter, and placed broadly in the light the defects and inferiority of the former; and his "Humphrey's Ruoff," published in 1841, has passed through many editions, and is still a standard collection of Homeopathic clinical results.

So protracted a life as that of Dr. Humphrey was of course beset with many trials. The loss of his pious and devoted wife, and of his interesting daughter, Mrs. Adelaide J. Hardcastle, as well as the total blindness with which he was afflicted, he bore with manly fortitude and philosophic resignation; and the friends who commiserated him were cheered by the contemplation of his heroic spirit and by the genial flow of humor and pleasantry, indicating the kindness of his heart, and which welled up spontaneously to the last.

His only surviving daughter, Mrs. Eliza L. Moore, watched over the expiring hours of her father's life with an affection and fidelity that afforded the strongest evidence of her filial love; and which, as we believe, will ensure to her the blessings of that great commandment of Mount Sinai, "Honor thy Father and thy Mother." Dr. Humphrey died in Beverly, N. J., 3 Aug., 1872, æ. 93 years. In accordance with his own wishes, his remains were placed in the family burial lot at Mount Hope, Delaware Co., Pa., with the following inscription upon his monument, giving expression to his own convictions of truth:

"Believing in no death—but that every soul is a primitive spark, a divine element Incorruptible and Immortal."

1409. ii. Gideon Emmet,<sup>7</sup> b. 21 Aug. 1842, New York City. At an early age he manifested an analytical tendency. When his inclinations were more fully developed, he entered the Scientific Department at Yale College, New Haven; after his graduation, accepted the position of assayer of the Gould and Curry Mines, Virginia City, Nevada, where he remained several years, employing his nights in the study of languages and scientific works. His devotion to science increasing with knowledge, after the mines closed he rejected flattering proposals made to retain him in San Francisco, Cal. His predilections carried him to Germany, where he located in Heidelberg; entered the University there, and was also a pupil in the private laboratory of Prof. Bunsen. After some years of close application he graduated as Doctor of Philosophy, bearing away the highest honors of that ancient and celebrated seat of learning. He then returned to this country, and entered upon the practice of his profession as analytical chemist; was for a time Assistant Professor of Inorganic Chemistry in Yale College. He is a scientific investigator and writer; made discoveries in science at an early age. His laboratories are at No. 69 Liberty St., New York City.

- iii. Harry Humphrey,<sup>7</sup> b. 2 July, 1844, New York City. At an early age he received a severe shock from a fall, which paralyzed the nerve of hearing, and gradually caused deafness and loss of the faculty of speech. He commenced his studies in the language of signs, under the supervision of David Bartlett who had an Infant Class of Deaf Mutes at his private residence in Poughkeepsie, N. Y. After a few years he became a pupil of the Hartford institution, and at ten years of age commenced the study of drawing under the instructions of Prof. Bail, of New Haven, Ct. When his course of study at Hartford, Ct., was finished, he went to Europe and became a pupil of Prof. Hubner of Dresden; but preferring the modern French School of Art, he went to Paris and placed himself under the instructions of Prof. Gerome of the Ecole des Beaux Arts, enjoying not only his teachings, but also those of Yvon and Boulanger. His enthusiastic devotion to art rendered him a favorite with his masters. While under these valuable instructions he first saw one of the works of Mariano Fortuny—the greatest painter of the Modern Spanish School. This was a wonderful revelation to him. He found here a sympathetic vein adapted to his own genius. He went to Spain, and at Madrid met Fortuny—a firm friendship was formed between them, which continued until the death of the great artist. At Rome, they occupied the same studio, and the influence of Fortuny was such that Moore has been pronounced the “Fortuny of America.”

He also visited Morocco, and devoted himself to the study of Moorish life and character. His painting of “Almeh,” which represents a Moorish dancing girl in one of the Halls of the Alhambra during the Moorish occupation, is considered one of his richest productions. It was on exhibition at Philadelphia during the Centennial, as was also another picture painted by him, called “The Moorish Merchant.” Several of his other pictures have arrived in this country. His likeness of his grandfather, Dr. Gideon Humphrey, is considered a wonderful work of art.

Mr. Moore came to America in 1875, remaining for some time in New York City, where he had his studio. In 1881, he was in Japan executing orders; but intended soon to return to Europe, and locate in Paris.

Friend<sup>5</sup> Humphrey was left in his fourth year, by the death of his father, to the training of his resolute and patriotic mother who, when her country required, fitted out and sent her oldest son into the Revolutionary army at the age of fourteen years, charging him not to turn his back to the enemy, and assuring him that if he did she would never again receive him. Friend obtained such an education as the limited opportunities of the time and place afforded. When about fourteen years of age, Judge Burt, a tanner of New Hartford, Ct., having taken an interest in the lad, induced the boy to reside with him and learn the trade. A few years later he removed with him to Lansingburgh, N. Y., where he was also, for a time, with Mr. Roswell Forsyth, a tanner, afterward a resident of Albany, N. Y. When in his nineteenth year, he was baptized, and united with the Baptist church in Lansingburgh, leading always an earnest, consistent Christian life.

In 1811, when Mr. Humphrey was in the 24th year of his age, he moved to Albany and engaged in the business of tanning and currying, and a few years after opened a store for the sale of hides and leather. His tannery, which was located in the northern part of the city, was run for many years, but the work here was discontinued some time before his death, as the hide and leather trade had become so extensive as to require his undivided attention. He commenced business on quite a limited scale, as he had little or no capital, but by careful management his means increased rapidly, and he soon became one of the leading dealers in the State. In those early days, before railroad conveniences were known, the State tanners had little or no intercourse with New York City after the river was closed by ice in the fall of the year, and then Albany, being easier of access from the interior of the State, and deriving considerable importance from being the seat of the State Government, received quite a large amount of trade. He always stocked up very largely with hides in the fall, which he sold during the winter to the Greene County tanners, as well as to those from other sections. He then bought and stored large quantities of their leather, for which he found a market as soon as the river opened in the spring. He was generally accounted the largest dealer in Calcutta hides outside of the cities of New York and Boston, and his judgment in this class of stock was so good that regular dealers often paid him a commission to buy for them from the importers.

In the autumn of 1819, Mr. Humphrey was elected an Alderman in the city of Albany, which position he held at intervals for seven years, until 1832. He was one of three Supervisors appointed to superintend the building of a tread-mill in Albany, April, 1823; was the democratic candidate for Supervisor in 1824; Supervisor of the Fourth Ward in 1832, and of the Third Ward in 1837; in 1838, was chosen by the whig party. He was elected Representative, in 1826, 1828, on the Jackson ticket; in 1832, 1833 (Anti-regency), of the Fourth Ward; was defeated as the whig candidate for the Assembly from Albany County, in 1835, although having a decided majority in the city. He was elected a State Senator in November, 1839. This office, at that time, carried more responsibility than at present, as the Senate was also the Court of Errors, which was the highest court in the State, occupying the position now held by the Court of Appeals. On this account the best and most judicious men in the State were chosen by the people. He was elected Mayor, by the whig party, in April, 1843 and 1844; was defeated by twenty-four votes in 1845; and again elected 10 Apr., 1849. He never sought political distinction, and often, when urged to take a nomination, refused his consent. He was a candidate for the suffrages of his fellow-citizens at least twenty times.

Mr. Humphrey was conspicuous in the Albany celebration of the completion of the Erie Canal in 1825. He was one of the Incorporators and a member of the first Board of Directors of the Merchants Insurance Company, 1824, 1826; and a Trustee of the old Albany Savings Bank. He was one of the three Vice-Presidents chosen at the organization of the City Tract Society, August 4th, 1835, and was the President in 1849. He was a member of the first Board of Trustees of the Albany Medical College in 1838, and one of the Governors of the Albany Hospital in 1850.

During the greater part of his life, he enjoyed uninterrupted health; and his stalwart, well-proportioned frame, his countenance, his gait, manner, and tones of voice, made on every one the impression of a strong, self-possessed man, having a "sound mind in a sound body." The first severe shock which his health received was experienced in the performance of the duties connected with the Mayoralty of the City, in the year 1849, during the prevalence of the Asiatic cholera. His health and strength continued gradually to fail, till his final sickness commenced, during the winter of 1853 and 1854, and death released him from his suffering on the night of Wednesday, March 15th, 1854. His funeral took place from his residence in North Pearl Street, and was attended by the merchants of Albany in a body, their stores being closed as a token of respect for the deceased. A funeral sermon was preached on the ensuing Sunday, March 19th, by the Rev. Dr. Hague, his pastor, in the Pearl Street Baptist Church, of which Mr. Humphrey had been an active and prominent member from its organization, and of which he was an officer for many years.

At a special meeting of the Common Council, called immediately after his death, the Mayor of Albany, Hon. William Parmelee, after alluding to the loss sustained by the city, closed as follows:

"During the years 1843, 1844 and 1849, Friend Humphrey was Chief Magistrate of this City, and presided at this Board. Most of us knew him well, and some were intimately associated with him in the administration of his duties. It therefore need hardly be added that in the discharge of these duties he manifested the same ability and fidelity, the same single-minded devotion to the public good, and the same kind-heartedness, benevolence and urbanity, which were so characteristic of the man at all times and in all situations, and which so eminently won for him the confidence and esteem, as well as personal regard and affection, of all who knew him.

"It is for the purpose of giving expression to these feelings in the only way now remaining, to unite our regrets with those of our fellow-citizens, and offer our sympathies to the friends most deeply bereaved, that you to-day have been called together.

In accordance with the above, resolutions expressive of sympathy with the friends of the deceased, and of their sense of the great loss sustained by the City of Albany in the removal of one of her most prominent citizens, were passed by the Common Council, who also attended the funeral in a body. The State Senate, on motion of Hon. Mr. Crosby, seconded by Hon. Mr. Dickinson, passed resolutions of a similar tenor, and adjourned for the purpose of being present at the last obsequies of the deceased.

Thus died, after a life of great usefulness, an able representative, and one of the fathers of the hide and leather trade. While he accumulated great wealth, he was also distinguished for great benevolence. There was no enterprise or charity which commended itself to the wise or the liberal to which Friend Humphrey did not open his heart and his purse. His public benefactions were no more liberal than his private charities, and while thousands mourned his loss, none could reproach his memory.

In 1851, Mr. Humphrey had admitted two of his sons, Theodore Friend and James Hoyt, as partners in his house. At his death they succeeded to the business, and, with a younger brother, Mr. Correl Humphrey, formed the well-known firm of Friend Humphrey's Sons.*

The date of his birth has not been found on the records, but the widow of Eber<sup>6</sup> Humphrey, who was living in 1882, at the advanced age of 103 years, stated that he was the oldest child of Samuel<sup>5</sup> Humphrey. He married Zeruah Wilcox, of Canton, Ct., dau. of Sergt. Ezra Wilcox who married Mary<sup>4</sup> Humphrey. [Fam. 3 (55), S.<sup>2</sup>] They are said to have resided in La Fayette, N. Y.; but a letter of inquiry sent to that address, in 1882, was returned.

Mr. Humphrey was a leading citizen in the county; was for many years a Justice of the Peace, and held many positions of trust and honor. He and his wife were members of the Protestant Episcopal Church and regular attendants upon its communion at Worthington, seven miles from their residence. He died on his homestead, 16 June, 1823, æ. 57 years. Writes his only surviving child (1883), Mrs. Sarah<sup>7</sup> Wilson, of Iowa City, Iowa: "I think, from what I can remember and from what mother has told us, that he was very patient, kind and good. He died with lingering consumption. I was quite young and cannot remember very much, only the death-bed scene.—it was so calm. They raised him up, and he sang the hymn through commencing,—

Is this our mortal frame,

Our life how poor a trifle 'tis
That scarce deserves a name.'

"He was a good singer and a good Christian; and so passed away one of the best of earth. They went into the back-woods and endured the hardships and disadvantages of pioneer life, with very few privileges and little society. Their children were all baptized in their infancy and educated in the Protestant Episcopal Church."

Mrs. Humphrey died 10 June, 1833, æ. 65 years. Their grandson, Mr. Russell C.<sup>8</sup> Hall (1476), of Lewis Center, O., adds these observations:—"Among all the grandchildren there is not, nor ever has been, one that became addicted to the use of intoxicating drinks. But in the communities where they live they are known as positive temperance men and women, and always ready to take advance ground in all movements to build it up in society. In the late war, I know of thirteen that were soldiers in the Union Army, not counting uncle Aaron's family. In politics, of the nine families, all were whigs and abolitionists, and then republicans, except one daughter's family who have been and are democrats. In religion, every family, with the same exception, has furnished active workers in the Church and Sabbath-School. In education, all of our aunts, at some time, were teachers in the public schools, and each family of grandchildren has furnished one or more teachers for our common and higher grade of schools, and I have never known of one that did not succeed."

Children:

1449 I. DORCAS,<sup>7</sup> born Saturday, 5 June, 1790; married, in Delaware County, O., 23 Feb., 1817, Ralph Richardson; and there died, 14 Oct., 1821, æ. 31 years. He died 12 Sept.; 1823, æ. about 40 years. Children:

* This may have been Isaac (son of Isaac and Bathsheba Humphrey Case, [Fam. 6 '75, J.] We have not ascertained the names of his wives, but Mrs. Wilson thinks the name of her mother's mother was Dorcas, and that her mother had two brothers, Isaac who lived in Ohio, and Ambrose, and a half-sister Sarah (for whom Mrs. Wilson was named), who married Oliver Cromwell Phelps.

The mother of Dorcas Case died when she was young, and she kept house for her father and brothers. She used to relate the following incident: Early one morning Mr. Gideon Mills [Fam. 18 '423, S.], who was very intimate with her father, drove quite a distance to bring a hare which he had caught and made ready for cooking, and gave it to her to prepare for breakfast, intending to partake thereof with Mr. Case. Finding that he had not yet arisen he went to his bedroom and called him, saying, "Arise Isaac, and eat the savory meat that Gideon hath brought thee."

H., son of Samuel and Mary (Russell) Hall, of New Hampshire. His parents died in his childhood and he was brought up by his uncle James Willington Hall, residing for a time near Lake Champlain. He removed to Onondaga County, N. Y., in 1812, and afterward to Worthington, O.; finally settled, in 1830, on a new farm in Liberty Township, Delaware Co., O., and engaged in brick-making. In politics, he belonged to the whig party; was the first Secretary of the Delaware County Temperance Society, organized about 1835, and for a long time continued to fill that position. He was an early and earnest advocate of free schools, and for many years a devoted officer and worker in the church and Sabbath-School of the Methodist Episcopal communion. He united with the church about 1840.

"Mrs. Eliza' (Humphrey) Hall was a lady of great firmness of character and kindness of heart. She was exceedingly retiring in her disposition,—pure and peaceable as the dove. The suffering and needy had in her a reliable friend. No case of worthy charity ever left her door without a substantial blessing from her hand. She was greatly devoted to religious principles, and early taught and impressed her children with the beauty of the Christian's faith. They all now, with the Christian's hope, 'rise up and call her blessed.'" She died at Powell, O., 5 Aug., 1872, æ. 69 years. Mr. Hall died in that town, 15 Mch., 1862, æ. 63 years. Children:

FAMILY 87.

During the war of 1812, Col. Humphrey was ordered to New London, Ct., which was then blockaded by the British fleet under the command of Com. Hardy, where it was expected that an attack would be made by the enemy. He marched with the 17th Ct. Regiment, Aug. 3d, 1813; —is said to have been a noble-looking officer. The Company of Artillery was composed of enlisted State troops, commanded by Capt. Sereno Pettibone, Lieut. John Barber, Jr., and Lieut. (afterward Colonel) Decius<sup>9</sup> Humphreys. [Fam. 112, S.<sup>2</sup>] No engagement took place at this time, as the British troops did not attempt to effect a landing.

In 1822, he removed to the State of New York, where he was a farmer, afterward a hotel keeper, and a grocer. He died at Skaneateles, N. Y., where he had resided, 4 Nov., 1850, æ. 80 years. He was a Royal Arch Mason;—Master of Village Lodge No. 29, and belonged to the Chapter at Aurora, Cayuga Co., N. Y.

1557. VI. CORREL,<sup>7</sup> b. 13 May, 1804; was educated at the district school and, later, at the Academy in Canton, Ct., of which Benjamin Ely and Rev. Pierpont Brocket were former instructors. He then learned the trade of clockmaking at Bristol, Ct., with Birge, Case & Co., and afterward traveled for about three years in the Southern States, for Erastus, Harvey, and John Case, a clock company. At the close of his work, after settling with him, they presented him, 27 June, 1827, with a valuable silver watch, which is still in his possession. On the inside of the case is this inscription: "This watch was presented to Correl Humphreys, at Canton, Hartford Co., Ct., by Erastus Case and Co., for faithful services performed while in their employ in Alabama, Mississippi, Kentucky, and Tennessee."

In the year 1834, he traveled through those States repairing clocks, then went down the Mississippi river to Carleton, near New Orleans. He there stopped at the house of a friend, who had been down to the city and brought home with him a paper giving an account of the massacre, by Seminole Indians, of Major Dade and one hundred and ten men who were encamped upon a prairie. Gen. Edmund Pendleton Gaines, U. S. Army, commanding at that point, called upon the Governor of Louisiana for volunteers. Mr. Humphreys* went to New Orleans and volunteered under Gen. P. F. Smith, in a company of riflemen; in twenty-four hours about fifteen hundred men were enrolled. They went by water to Pensacola, Florida, where they landed and drew arms and then sailed for Fort Brook, Tampa, on Tampa Bay. From this point they went forward to Dade's battle-ground, where they gathered the officers and men who had been killed, and buried them. Mr. Humphreys was in all the engagements that followed, during 1835 and 1836, until peace had been concluded. The volunteers were then taken to Charleston, S. C., and honorably discharged. After being drawn up in line, a letter was read from the Secretary of War, thanking them for their promptness and fidelity in rallying around the standard of their country and protecting the women and children from the murderous and bloodthirsty Seminoles. From Charleston, Mr. Humphreys took passage for New York, and thence went to his father's residence in Skaneateles. Capt. Henry L. Thistle wrote to Col. A. P. Humphrey that his son was one of his most brave and trusty soldiers.

* He informs us that he has always spelled his name Humphreys. His father did not add the s to his surname.

Mr. Humphreys is a Free Mason; was initiated, 3 July, 1827, into the same Lodge of which his father was a member; and now belongs to Skaneateles Lodge, No. 552; also belongs to the order of the Sons of Temperance and the Independent Order of Odd Fellows. Res. (1884) Skaneateles, N. Y.

1636. XV. Hon. WOLCOTT JULIUS,<sup>7</sup> b. 11 Nov., 1817; married, 30 Mch., 1841, Amanda (dau. of Major William S.) Martindale, of Dorset, Vt. No children. He has been a farmer, tanner, and merchant; has been President of the National Bank of Warsaw, N. Y., for sixteen years.

When twenty years of age, Mr. Humphrey entered the New York State Militia; in 1840, was elected Colonel of the 9th Regiment, 8th Brigade, N. Y. State Artillery; resigned in 1844. He has held various town offices; in 1850, was Census Marshal in six of the towns of his county; in 1849, '53, and '60, was Postmaster, which position he resigned. In 1850, he was elected to the New York Assembly, and was returned to the same in 1851,—his political talents and constant activity giving him a leading position in that body. He was Chairman of the Committee on Railroads, and reported the Central R. R. Bill, authorizing the railroad consolidation and establishing the existing restrictions. He was also selected, by caucus, to take charge of the Prohibitory Liquor Law passed at that session, and made an able speech in its behalf. In 1855, he removed to Bloomington, Ill., where he was instrumental in securing the return of the late Owen Lovejoy to Congress, against Judge Davies. After a three years' residence there, he returned and resumed business at North Java, N. Y., from which place he removed, in 1864, to Warsaw, Wyoming Co., N. Y., where he now resides (1884). During the war, he was enrolling officer for the U. S. Government, and was mobbed while in discharge of his duties.

Hon. W. J. Humphrey has served two terms in the New York Senate; was first elected, in 1865, from the 30th District (Wyoming, Livingston and Allegany Counties), by 5,240 majority, over the late Judge Hastings, of Livingston; and became a member of Committees on R. R., Internal Affairs and Printing, and Chairman of the Committee on Roads and Bridges. In the session of 1868, he was Chairman of the Committee on Commerce and Navigation, a member of the Finance Committee, and Chairman of the Committee on a joint Library. He is a faithful and indefatigable worker, a good debater, and possesses fine talents as a political organizer; was a whig, so long as that party existed, and then a republican. He is a gentleman of fine presence, great nervous energy, warm friendships and good impulses.*

Mr. Humphrey was one of the first pioneers in the Antislavery movement, and was a member of the first Antislavery Convention held in Hartford in the winter of 1835 or '36, when the members were driven from the City Hall and compelled to take private quarters. This was soon after the murder of Mr. E. P. Lovejoy, in Alton, Illinois, whose brother addressed the Convention. For several years Mr. Humphrey was the youngest man in Hartford County who was identified with this cause, and was one of three who first voted the Antislavery ticket in Canton. He was the last candidate of the Free-soil party, for Senator of the Third District in Connecticut, before the organization of the Republican party. He has twice represented his town in the State Legislature, in 1859 and 1872, and has held minor offices continuously; was several years Justice of the Peace, until he declined the appointment.

Mr. Humphrey has been for many years a well-known vocalist and music teacher; has been a member of the Congregational church in Canton Center for forty-seven years; a deacon in the church for the past twenty-five years; a member of the choir for sixty years, serving as chorister forty years, having been chosen to that position at the age of eighteen. Though now advanced in life, he is a regular attendant upon church services, and deeply interested in all matters pertaining to the welfare of man and the interests of Christ's kingdom.* Res. George<sup>5</sup> and Rachel<sup>5</sup> Humphrey) Humphreys, b. 22 Feb., 1786. [Fam. 34, S.<sup>2</sup>] He studied medicine under the tuition of Dr. Philander<sup>6</sup> Humphrey, of Hartland, Ct., [Fam. 42, J.<sup>2</sup>] and practiced his profession a few years in that town; also resided for a time at Granville, Mass., where his oldest two children were born. He subsequently removed with his family to Orwell, Pa., where he continued to reside until his death. He was a successful and honorable member of his profession, and a citizen of character and influence. We add the following: "Died at Orwell, Bradford Co., Pa., on the 26th of April, 1826, after a protracted and distressing illness which he bore with fortitude and Christian resignation, Dr. Dudley Humphrey, aged forty-two.

"In the death of Dr. Humphrey the church of Christ, society, and the neighborhood in which he lived, have lost one of their brightest ornaments.

"As a husband and parent he was affectionate and kind;—though very diffident he was affable and familiar in his manners. He was an able physician, punctual in his attendance on the sick. He did not shun the cottage of the poor, but was attentive to their calls and administered not only medicine but also consolation to them in their distress.

"About five years since, he made a public profession of his faith in Christ and united with the Church, and soon after was chosen a Deacon and a ruling Elder, the duties of both of which offices he discharged with fidelity and to the satisfaction of his brethren. Although a cloud of darkness, at some particular times in the course of his sickness, appeared to hang over his mind, near the close of life the cloud was removed. He renounced the world and there is reason to think he died the death of the righteous man. On the 30th instant his remains were committed to the grave. A very appropriate sermon was delivered on the occasion by the Rev. Salmon King, to a numerous and attentive audience, from these words,—'Devout men carried Stephen to his burial and made great lamentation over him.'"

"After a long and painful illness, she passed away, having furnished a bright illustration of true Christianity. She trusted implicitly in the satisfaction of Christ for justification in the sight of God, and in union with this, she earnestly endeavored to live holy,—not to sin being a great care of hers, and a striking characteristic, to seek the things of others rather than of herself,—their temporal and eternal happiness. The graces of meekness and patience shone brightly in all her sufferings. Her testimony is a living one, and will be remembered long by all who have known her. It tells them that she sleeps in Jesus, and will be one of those whom God will bring with him at the last day. Her whole life was a psalm of love, and her memory is still cherished as a holy remembrance." Mr. Farrar is a builder; res. (1884) Orwell, Pa. Children:

He married Vashti (dau. of Moses) Wright, of Austinburgh, Ohio, where they settled. She was born in 1798, and died in 1845, æ. 47 years. Mr. Humphrey was extensively engaged in the early manufacturing and mercantile enterprises of the country, having a farm, mill and distillery. He was lost on Lake Erie, 19 May, 1835, on the schooner Parrott, which was freighted with merchandise and bound for Detroit. He was enterprising, liberal and public-spirited, and was much devoted to the civil, social, educational and religious improvement of the country; was a member of the Presbyterian church. Several of his sons were residing, in 1884, at Ashtabula, O.

Major Humphrey served in the war of 1812; was commander of the Post at Cleveland, Ohio, at the time of Gen. Hull's surrender at Detroit. During his absence from home, the Indians made a raid on Claridon, and robbed several families of their cooking utensils, &c. Mrs. Humphrey secured her property by burying most of it in the ground.

Major Humphrey died 22 Dec., 1825, at Claridon, O., and was there buried. Several years after his death, his widow married — Winter, whom she survived a number of years. She continued to reside on a part of the Humphrey homestead, which she had occupied since the death of her first husband. She died at Claridon, O., 14 Apr., 1868, æ. 94 years; and was there buried. She retained her faculties to a remarkable degree until her death. At the age of eighty-seven years she harnessed her horse and drove seventeen miles to Chagrin Falls, O., to visit her daughter, Mrs. Goodwin.

FAMILY 103.

Harry<sup>6</sup> Humphrey was only seven years old when his father was lost at sea. He afterward lived for a time with his brother Allen, who promised him a clerkship in a store when he should attain a proper age. But on a certain occasion becoming suddenly displeased with him, because he had neglected to suitably care for and blanket his horse after his arrival home late at night, he decided that he should learn a trade, and much against his wishes he was accordingly bound out, at the age of fourteen, to James Hicks, a saddler and harness-maker, of Bennington, Vt., until he became of age. He was always so much chagrined at the course taken by his brother, that he worked but little at his trade after finishing his apprenticeship. This disappointment in his early expectations had a depressing effect upon his character and actions through life.

We find on the Simsbury Probate Records, V., 268, the following entry: "Dec. 9th, 1802, Harry Humphrey of New Hartford settled with his guardian Riverius Bidwell." He was a brother of Thomas Bidwell, Jr., who married Lavinia<sup>5</sup> Humphrey, [Fam. 18 (440), S.<sup>2</sup>] Mr. Humphrey probably at this time, when twenty-two years of age, came into possession of a legacy from his grandfather Capt. Ezekiel<sup>4</sup> Humphrey, [Fam. 9, S.<sup>2</sup>]

At the date of his marriage he settled in Glens Falls, N. Y., and continued to reside there, and in that vicinity, for fourteen years. The widow of Capt. Elijah<sup>5</sup> Humphrey married Mr. James Olcott and resided in Pompey, about three miles west of Delphi, N. Y. In the fall of 1818, not long after the death of Mr. Olcott, Mr. Harry Humphrey went from Queensbury, N. Y., to live with his mother at Pompey and take charge of the farm, residing with her until her death, which occurred in April, 1825. He removed to Delphi, N. Y., in 1832; and, in 1851, after the death of his daughter Chloe, went to reside in Phoenix, N. Y., with his son, Mr. George W. Humphrey. He there died, 14 June, 1852, æ. 71 years; and was buried in Delphi with other members of his family. He was incapacitated for active labor many years on account of organic disease of the heart, which ultimately caused his death.

He was a man of extensive reading; and was well-informed on the general topics of the day, being gifted with a remarkable memory; was especially interested in the civil and political history of the country. His opinion was much valued in the community, and points in question were often submitted to him for decision. For this reason he received by general consent the honorary title of "Judge" the latter part of his life.

Samuel,<sup>2</sup> Michael,<sup>1</sup>*) was born 20 Mch., 1777, in Canton, Ct. He married, in Durham, Greene Co., N. Y., 14 Mch., 1801, Eliza (dau. of Matthew† and Betsey Stringham) Boughton, of Durham, N. Y., born 25 July, 1784. Mr. Humphrey was an extensive contractor and jobber, building roads, bridges and docks, in company with his brothers Alexander, Rufus and Sylvester. He went to Durham as a contractor on the Susquehanna turnpike, and settled in that town. He was very social, hospitable and genial in his disposition, and the neighbors frequently remarked that "Uncle Isaac's laugh could be heard half a mile." He was very kind and affectionate in his family, but decided in the government of his children. Benevolence and charitableness were marked traits in his character, and it used to be said that "all the poor in the neighborhood would never suffer if they could find Isaac Humphrey." He was the leading man in all the improvements of the town; was a strong Jefferson and Jackson democrat. Always accustomed to sign with his friends, he in that way lost considerable money. Later in life, he settled down and followed the occupation of a farmer until his death. He engaged largely in stock-raising, generally keeping from forty to sixty head of cattle. He died in Durham, N. Y., 13 Jan., 1856, æ. 79 years. Mrs. Humphrey died in Durham, 24 Nov., 1849, æ. 65 years.

† Matthew Boughton went at an early date from Connecticut to Harpersfield, Delaware Co., N. Y.; afterward removed to Durham, N. Y.

Several members of this family were remarkable for their large stature, as were also their Humphrey ancestors. [See Fam. 9, S.<sup>2</sup>] Mr. Isaac Humphrey was six feet and three inches in height, and six of his sons were more than six feet.*

When Mr. George Humphrey was a young man he went on a voyage to the West Indies; was taken prisoner in the Algerine war, but was liberated after a few months, when peace was declared.† He served in the war of 1812, and was in the New London campaign. [Fam. 87, S.<sup>2</sup>]

Like other members of his father's family he was of large stature. Mr. M. S. Dyer, who was thirty years old at the time of Mr. Humphrey's death and who had been accustomed to seeing him from his earliest remembrance, writes as follows: "In your Introduction to the Humphreys Genealogy you allude to the resemblance or 'Humphrey look' that pertains to the name. This is fully established in my mind by the portrait of Ozias Humphrey being a most perfect resemblance to George Humphreys, Jr., son of Col. George Humphreys." [See p. 59.]

He had good intellectual abilities and a remarkable memory, being able to repeat any lengthy article in prose or verse after hearing it once; was a good musician, and acted as Fife-major in the militia. He composed several pieces of music. He died in New Hartford, Ct., where he had resided, 6 Dec., 1836, æ. 54 years. His house and farm in New Hartford are now (1884) owned and occupied by Mr. Andrew Barnes.

1893. II. HARRIET,<sup>7</sup> b. 23 Dec., 1806, New Hartford, Ct. She inherited her father's strong intellect and memory, and furnished many interesting facts concerning the Humphreys family for this work. One who had always been acquainted with her said that she never forgot anything she had once known. She was much respected in Canton, Ct., where she resided. She died of paralysis, at Canton Center, Thursday, 7 Feb., 1884, æ. 77 years; was unmarried.

* According to Miss Harriet Humphrey, this branch of the descendants of Col. George Humphreys have never added the s to their surname, although some of their ancestors thought it should be so written.

† Mr. M. S. Dyer states that George and Oliver (son of Asher) Humphrey [Fam. 187, S.] went to sea when about fifteen or sixteen years old. They were taken by the French and were prisoners on board the French seventy-four gun ship La Vengeance, during her engagement with the U. S. Frigate Constellation in 1797.

After his marriage Colonel Humphreys continued to reside in his native town, where he was engaged in farming, as also in other enterprises,—at one time in the manufacture of buttons, under the firm of Humphreys & Osborn.

In the early part of the war of 1812, there was a Regiment of Artillery organized in Hartford and Tolland counties, one company of which was formed from Simsbury, Granby, Canton, and New Hartford. Decius Humphreys, then twenty-three years old, was commissioned as First Lieutenant at its formation. They were immediately ordered to New London, where they were stationed in 1813, acting as State troops and not under the orders of United States officers. [See Fam. 87, S.<sup>2</sup>] Capt. Sereno Pettibone was captain of this company; after Capt. Pettibone's retirement Lieut. Humphreys was chosen Captain, which office he held for three years. He was then elected Major, and a year later, Lieutenant-Colonel, and shortly after, Colonel of the First Regiment of Connecticut Artillery, which office he held for three or four years. He had the offer of the position of Brigadier-General, which he declined, not far from the year 1821.

About the year 1826, he removed to North Canton, Ct. He was appointed Justice of the Peace, in 1830, when the office was vacated by the death of Hon. James<sup>6</sup> Humphrey [Fam. 88, S. 2], who had filled that position continuously since the incorporation of the town of Canton in 1806.

In 1842, Colonel Humphreys removed to Huron, Ohio, and, in 1853, to Muscatine, Iowa, where he continued to reside until his death, which occurred at the residence of his son, Mr. Seth Humphreys, 14 June, 1878, in the 90th year of his age. In all his relations in life he was respected and esteemed as a man of the highest probity of character, and was greatly beloved by all his family and friends. He was of large frame, over six feet in height, and of pleasing address. Mr. May Humphreys, in 1856, said to the writer, that he remembered Col. George Humphreys, the father of Decius, as one of the finest specimens of an old school gentleman he ever knew,—a man of elegant manners, of imposing presence, and who resembled Gen. George Washington more than any one he ever saw. The great veneration of his father's memory was one of the notable features of the character of Col. Decius Humphreys.

M. in his 19th year, and the degree of M. D. in his 21st year. He afterward studied and practiced with Dr. Mason Cogswell, of Hartford, then practiced in Granby, Ct., and later in Collinsville, Ct. In 1849 he went to California and, in 1851, his family followed him. They at first resided in Washington, on the Sacramento river, opposite the city of Sacramento; in 1853, removed to Petaluma, where Dr. Brown died of apoplexy, 30 Jan., 1862. He continued in the practice of his profession until his death; was also an earnest worker in the cause of public schools, wherever he resided; and, in 1860, was the Republican candidate for State Superintendent of Public Instruction in California.

He was an active, growing, cheerful and happy Christian, and certainly left the world better for his having lived in it. A monument was erected to his memory

Mr. M. S. Dyer writes: "The aptitude of the Humphreys to learn and retain, was illustrated in David, son of Col. Decius, and brother of Solon Humphreys, of New York. While David was at school at Amherst he wrote a short poem which he showed me. I read it over twice, and the next time I saw him I repeated the whole of it to him. He remarked that he wished he could remember as well. I told him he could if he would try. After two or three months he called on me and said that he had followed my instructions and could repeat anything that he carefully studied, telling me to write one hundred names of any persons or places, and he would read them and repeat them the next day. I wrote the one hundred names of any that I could think of, mostly ancient, some modern. He read them over twice, handed the paper back to me, and the day or two after called and repeated them forward and backward without a mistake. I never saw any other person that could do it."

- Mr. Seth Humphreys has in his possession an account of some of the descendants of his great-grandfather, Capt. Ezekiel<sup>4</sup> Humphrey, which was prepared, about 1852, by his brother Mr. George D. Humphreys with the assistance of his father, who had carefully preserved the records of his branch of the Humphreys family. In 1869, Colonel Decius Humphreys wrote a letter to the author, expressing his willingness to advance this work, which was then in progress, and referring to sources of information which showed his long familiarity with the subject, and the desire which he felt that the genealogy should be brought to a successful issue.

FAMILY 113.

The mother of Hector Humphreys earnestly desired that he, her youngest son, should become a minister of the Gospel. With this intention he was entered, in 1811, as a student in Latin with James Hotchkiss, teacher of the High School in his native village. From this gentleman he received his first taste of English poetry, in certain volumes which he won as premiums for distinction in scholarship. His summers, at this period, were passed chiefly in laboring on the farm, while the winters were devoted to school, according to the prevailing practice in that part of New England. July 29th, 1813, after the death of his father, he was placed under the guardianship of Mr. William Stone, of Canton, Ct.†

His course of preparation for College was conducted in part by the Rev. James Beach, of Winsted, in whose family he resided for that purpose: and while there in 1813, during the war, he was selected by the citizens as orator on the occasion of a celebration of the 4th of July. He had then only just completed his sixteenth year,—and the selection of one so young for such a duty, if not very judicious, is at least a remarkable proof of the maturity, both of mind and manliness, to which he had already attained. His preparatory studies were finished at Westfield Academy, in Massachusetts, under the care of Rev. Francis L. Robbins; and he entered Yale College as a Freshman, in September, 1814, as one of a class of one hundred. Although the collegiate course is not always a reliable indication, and the rule is not without its exceptions,—in his case the future life was foreshadowed,—“The boy was father to the man.” He devoted himself diligently to the appointed studies, with that persevering, self-relying industry which always characterized him;—and his college course was a succession of triumphs, terminated at the Commencement of 1818, by his taking the first honors, without a rival, in the estimation of the faculty or his classmates, to dispute his claim. While in college he became a member of the society called the Brothers in Unity.

An incident derived from one of his classmates, illustrates the thoroughness which characterized his preparation of the most difficult branches of academic study. This gentleman having occasion to take down from its quiet slumber on an upper shelf his copy of the ponderous Euclid which challenged the diligence of the student of that day, opened its pages at one of the most difficult problems known to mathematical science,—when the first words that met his eye, written in large letters on the margin, was the laconic and expressive phrase, which every collegian will understand, “Humphreys stuck!” Such a record shows the rareness of the occurrence; in fact it was said to have been the only instance of a defective recitation in his entire College course of four years.

During his first year at College he became the subject of a revival which embraced a large number of students, and was admitted into the communion of the Congregational Church by Dr. Dwight. Notwithstanding this, however, after taking his degree in 1818, he resolved, to the great grief of his devoted mother, to become a lawyer. With this object, he accepted an appointment to keep the Hopkins Academy, in New Haven, which charge he retained for two years, devoting a portion of his time to law studies in the office of Seth P. Staples. In due time he was admitted to the bar, and opened an office in New Haven, which he occupied for about one year, having received from Governor Wolcott the appointment of Judge Advocate for the State. Circumstances however inclined him, at this time, to turn his attention to theological studies, and especially to read ecclesiastical authors favorable to Episcopacy. And now, at last, the prayers of his excellent mother were about to be answered, though in a way different perhaps from what she had contemplated. The result of this investigation was, not only to change his doctrinal views, but to induce him to abandon the profession upon which he had just entered with such prospects of success, and to become a candidate for the ministry. He removed to the City of New York to pursue his theological studies; and was admitted to the order of Deacon, March 21st, 1824, in Trinity Church, New Haven, by Bishop Brownell, having previously, on the same day, received the rite of confirmation at the hands of the same estimable prelate.

Washington (now Trinity) College, at Hartford, had just been organized, and he was immediately appointed tutor, and in the following year, Professor of Ancient Languages in that institution; and soon became a leading member of its faculty, which, presided over by Bishop Brownell, numbered among its members. Professor (afterward Bishop) Doane, of New Jersey, Bishop Horatio Potter, of New York, the Rev. Dr. Hawkes, and other men of kindred minds and attainments. During his connection with Washington College he officiated with great acceptableness and with marked success, as Rector of St. Luke's Church, Glastonbury, about eight miles from Hartford; and in this church he was ordained Presbyter, March 6th, 1825, by Bishop Brownell. Dr. Humphreys received the degree of S. T. D. from Trinity College in 1833.

He is described as a man of dignified appearance, which was increased by his large stature—six feet and four inches. His eyes were very dark and his hair jet black, continuing thus through life. The reputation and prominence which he had attained, during his seven years' connection with Washington College, pointed him out as a suitable person to fill the vacancy which had occurred in the presidency of St. John's College, Annapolis, Md., to which position he was called in the spring of 1831, while yet only in the 34th year of his age. From that time until his death, January 25th, 1857, in St. John's College, a period of twenty-six years,—his name and fame, his talents and best energies, are identified with the history and progress of St. John's,—and have worked out for him a monument more enduring than marble, more noble than "sculptured urn, or animated bust." St. John's was, at that time, in an exceedingly depressed condition. It had not recovered from the paralyzing effects caused by the withdrawal of the State's annuity from its funds. It was but just beginning to revive its vigor and renew its growth. Of the means at its command, there was little besides the venerable hall, and a small remnant of the endowment, restored as if in pity by the hand of the spoiler. There was not a semblance of a cabinet, or a chemical apparatus, if such things had ever been—certainly no laboratory. Of an astronomical and philosophical apparatus, besides the excellent old telescope still in use, there could scarcely have been more than a dozen available pieces. As to the Library, the student of that day in search of miscellaneous reading would have stirred up clouds of ancient dust, and have been struck with awe at the curious old tomes, some in black-letter, some bound in vellum, mostly theological works, which, though a perfect treasure to the learned antiquarian, were not precisely the food to satisfy the literary appetite of a freshman or a sophomore. The liberal bequest of Mr. Lewis Neth, shortly after added a choice collection of miscellaneous books, which has been subsequently increased by accessions made by a literary society of the College, and, from time to time, by occasional purchases, and such presentation of works as were procured principally through the personal influence of Dr. Humphreys. Coming, as the new President did, from the richly endowed and well furnished institutions of the North, he might well have been appalled at the work to which he had been invited. A man of less energy of character would have shrunk from the effort; but he saw in the discouraging circumstances that confronted him only incentives to greater exertion. To his persevering efforts, and personal influence with members of the Legislature, is also in a great measure to be attributed the passage of the Act of Compromise of 1832-3, by which tardy and inadequate reparation was made for the grievous wrong that had been committed. The admirable philosophical apparatus which the College now possesses was entirely of his selection:—the cabinet, so rich in specimens of shells, minerals and earths, was collected principally by his own personal exertions and influence; and the laboratory, that creation of his later days, which he took such a noble pride in making complete in all its parts, was exclusively his work.

During all this time he was laboriously engaged in various duties of the College, hearing several recitations each day, and preparing lectures at night on different branches distinct from his proper chair. His own department was that of "Moral Science," and in the liberal construction which he gave to its range, he made it embrace,—Moral Philosophy, Political Economy, Logic, Rhetoric, Belles-lettres, Elocution, Intellectual Philosophy, Evidences of Christianity, Analogy of Religion, Animal and Vegetable Physiology, the Laws of Nations, and the Constitution of the United States. Besides these studies, under his own proper chair, the limited number of the faculty required that he should take a portion of other branches. Under this distribution, the higher classics, both Greek and Latin, were taught by him during almost his entire connection with the College. Practical Astronomy also, or the use of astronomical instruments in observations on the sun, moon and stars, for the calculation of time, latitude and longitude, were taught by him at the same time and illustrated by lectures written and oral. Before the organization of the present chair specially for those branches, Chemistry, Geology and Mineralogy were taught exclusively by him, and in part, also, some of the leading topics of Natural Philosophy. Now those who have ever been brought into the relation of pupil to Dr. Humphreys know that this varied course of instruction was something more than merely nominal. Each of the enumerated studies had its own text-book, which was thoroughly examined, explained and illustrated. Besides the oral and experimental lectures elicited by the daily recitations, there were stated courses of written lectures, each an hour in the delivery, illustrating with severe and faithful minuteness the several branches taught. I have seen a list, in his own handwriting, of the titles of these lectures, with headings of their varied subjects, which embraced fourteen in Political Economy, twenty-seven in Latin and Greek Literature, twenty-seven in Chemistry and Geology, thirty-four in Natural Philosophy, and six in Astronomy,—making one hundred and eight lectures delivered by him in the regular annual course, besides the several recitations of each day!

But notwithstanding the variety and severity of his official duties, he did not confine his labors to these, nor yet neglect the claims of friendship or society. It was only by the systematic arrangement of his time and the special occupation of every hour, that he accomplished what he did. And thus, besides contributions to scientific journals, and the occasional delivery of popular lectures, he was ever ready to give to his clerical brethren such aid as his health and the necessary relaxation from his stated duties would permit. These services were not alone occasional, but he repeatedly and for months together had charge of St. Anne's Church during a vacancy or the temporary absence of the Rector; and, in the period of his residence here, he found time to write and preach not less than three hundred sermons. In 1840, a Committee of the Maryland Convention nominated him for the office of Bishop, then vacant by the death of Dr. Stone. This nomination he declined.

Unostentatious and unassuming, shunning rather than seeking popular applause, he preferred the path of duty to the path of fame. Disdaining all mere sham, he aimed only at the real and the true. Imitating the processes of nature, that seeks by gradual accretion to build up her most enduring monuments, he was content with the patient, faithful discharge of every-day duty, adding line to line and precept to precept, trusting to time and to results to prove the excellence of his work. Perhaps indeed, he carried this self-renunciation too far. Perhaps it was due to his own reputation and to the laudable pride of friendship, that the light which diffused so rich a radiance, should not so exclusively have confined its beams to the recitation room and the lecture hall. But Dr. Humphreys seemed to have little of the prevalent ambition of the day, to give the productions of his mind a visible form in print. His scientific articles were generally published without his name; and he repeatedly refused earnest requests for the publication of addresses and Baccalaureate discourses, which would have added to his reputation and produced a salutary impression upon the public mind. A single sermon, printed at private request in alleviation of personal bereavement, and two Commencement addresses, comprise, it is believed, all that he had published under his own name. Only those who have been privileged to hear his lectures, or have had access to the voluminous manuscripts, all marked by that neatness and love of order which was a part of his character, can know what a rich store of concentrated wisdom, of well-digested learning, made attractive by vigor and beauty of style and a rare felicity of illustration, lie buried from the world.

Although from circumstances and the bent of his mind, his time was chiefly employed in the cause of science, he never forgot the sacred obligations which were upon him as a Clergyman. In the way and at the times before referred to, he performed no small amount of clerical duty. In these, his personal ministrations were gentle and consoling; while his sermons were earnest and forcible in style and delivery, and marked by solemn fervor and depth of religious conviction. But it is not alone in parochial work that the duties of the clerical office are illustrated. That part of its commission which prescribes the obligation "to teach" is perhaps in no way more fitly complied with than in the work of Christian education. Of the responsibilities of that work Dr. Humphreys entertained a deep sense. Debarred by the express letter of its charter from giving to St. John's anything of a "sectarian" character, he sought not to evade the prohibition. Yet he labored to make it, in the whole scope of its teaching, a school of sound morals; and so used his personal influence and admonitions with the young minds committed to his care, as to strengthen and mature the germs of religious culture, and to train them up to consecrate their faculties to the service of God.

It remains now only to speak of our departed friend as the man and as the citizen. In both these relations you know how exemplary was his life and conversation. The traits which I have described as distinguishing him as the teacher, were manifested in every other relation. In fact they permeated his whole character, and made it one of uniform consistency and beauty. But it was in retirement that it shone most brightly, and those who enjoyed the closest intercourse with him appreciated it most. With them, the slight reserve of manner, which might be noticed on first acquaintance, melted away, and he appeared in all the genial warmth of his nature. What a delightful companion he then became, it was the privilege of not a few here before me to know. His stores of varied knowledge, his refined wit and keen sense of the humorous, combined with a happy blending of dignity and affability to impart a peculiar charm to his conversation. The same qualities were exhibited in his letters, and made it a high and valued privilege to be his correspondent. Few men have had warmer friends, and few have returned affection with a warmer sympathy. Of guileless simplicity and frank truthfulness himself, he was loth to distrust the sincerity of others. "With much sagacious insight into men, (it has been well said of him,) anything like policy or concealment was foreign to his nature." His heart was the home of every kindly impulse, and he ever took a lively interest in what concerned the welfare and happiness of his friends. With what intensity his affections gushed forth towards those who were nearest and dearest to him, this is not the time or occasion to speak. As a citizen, he took an intelligent interest in public affairs; and, without obtruding his opinions upon others, or yielding a blind adhesion to any party organization, he never failed to exercise his rights as a freeman, and to vindicate them by an independent and manly avowal. His patriotism was as ardent as his nature and comprehensive as his country. As a Christian and a clergyman, he adorned his profession. His religion was not of that kind which wastes itself in fitful emotions; it was practical and habitual, and shone steadily in his daily walk. His piety was of that cheerful type, which taught by precept and example, that religion was never intended to make man gloomy and morose, or to debar him from the rational enjoyment of the innocent pleasures of life. In short, we may sum up his character by describing him as a noble exemplar of that highest type of man, an accomplished Christian gentleman.* [See foot-note on opposite page].

He lost his health in the first part of the campaign in Mexico, and died at Carlisle, Pa., 9 Nov.,* 1847. æ. 25 years; was a Lieutenant in the United States Army at the time of his death.
1931. III. ELIZA MOTT,<sup>7</sup> b. 19 Aug., 1824, Hartford, Ct.; married, at Annapolis, Md., 6 Jan., 1852, Lieut. Samuel Marcy, U. S. N., b. 4 July, 1820, in New York City, oldest son of Gov. William Larned Marcy,† of New York, who married a daughter of Benjamin Knower, of Albany, N. Y. He entered the United States Navy, March 15th, 1838. His first tour of duty commenced on the West India Station, in June following his appointment, where he remained two years. His services were continued in the Pacific and Mediterranean Squadrons. When he presented himself before the Board of Examiners for confirmation of his warrant, his knowledge of seamanship and remarkable capacity for the profession he had chosen secured for the young officer a perfect success, and he passed at the head of his class. He was for several years Assistant Professor of Mathematics, and Assistant Executive Officer of the Naval Academy at Annapolis, Maryland. Ardent in his desire for active service, so valuable were his scientific acquirements regarded by the Department, that he was long retained in the Academy while his own wishes would have led him to seek more active duties. Of the whole term of Lieut. Marcy's duty in the Navy, he had been about fourteen years at sea, eight and a half at the Academy, and one and a half unemployed. Few officers can show so active a life in that branch of the public service. At the opening of the Civil Rebellion, Lieut. Marcy left the Academy and entered on active duty as Executive Officer of the steamer Pawnee. In this capacity he was off Charleston at the bombardment of Sumter. He subsequently served, for a short time, as First Lieutenant of the Frigate Potomac, from which vessel he was ordered by the Department to the command of the sloop-of-war Vincennes, one of the blockading squadron off the mouths of the Mississippi. To his zealous devotion and earnest sense of duty, in this responsible station, his life became the sacrifice.

He was determined that, so far as his ship could maintain the blockade, no vessel should escape. He had already made several captures when, on the morning of the 23d of January, 1862, two vessels were seen apparently on fire, having grounded near the outlet after vainly attempting to run the blockade. With the view to secure possession of the vessels and cargoes, Lieut. Marcy instantly dispatched two boats from his ship, in one of which was placed a heavy pivot gun. While with characteristic energy and activity he had entered personally upon this duty and was engaged in directing the operations of firing, the gun recoiled, fell upon and fatally crushed his body and limbs. He was taken up tenderly and carried back to his ship, where he survived for six days, watched by the affectionate solicitude of those who had learned to love and admire his manly character, and to respect his zeal and devotion to his country. His remains were taken to Albany for interment. Funeral services were held in Calvary Church, corner of Fourth Ave. and Twenty-first St., New York City, Rev. Dr. Hawkes, rector.

† At the time of Gov. Marcy's death, which occurred July 4th, 1857, this was written concerning him:—"Every office he received from the people was returned to them graced by his acceptance of it, and made honorable by the manner in which its duties had been discharged. He was an efficient Comptroller. He preserved the purity of the ermine. His senatorial robe was without spot or blemish. He was an upright Chief Magistrate. He was an effective Secretary of War. And he was confessedly a wise, fearless and accomplished Secretary of State. The brilliant diplomatic achievements of his last four years most appropriately close and crown a life of stirring incident, high aspiration, great labor and greater usefulness."—Albany Evening Journal.

The peculiar features of the character of Lieutenant Marcy were a nice sense of personal honor and of official duty, love of his profession and an earnest desire to elevate it by acts of gallantry and devotion. Simple in his tastes, kind and gentle to all who came in contact with him, he was always beloved by those whom he commanded, because he mingled regard for others with a proper respect for himself. No officer of his rank in the service had more entirely the confidence of his superiors. No one who knew him could fail to respect the nobleness of his character, or to admire the beautiful symmetry and high culture of his mind.

Lieut. Marcy was one of the most valuable officers in our Navy, and his private worth was greater than ordinary words can make known. Exceedingly refined in his social character, a gentleman of cultivated tastes, and thoroughly appreciating all that makes life enjoyable, he was also a sincere Christian and a devoted husband and father. We happen to have become acquainted with an incident during the last year of his life which may well be mentioned. He was passing through Richmond, Virginia, in the spring of 1861, on his way to Norfolk to join his ship, expecting to sail from thence to Charleston on unknown service, either to relieve Major Anderson or to commence the war, he knew not which. Pausing over the Sabbath at Richmond, his mind was led by circumstances of a very touching nature to review the later years of his life, and being in St. Paul's Church at morning service, and seeing the members of the class for confirmation take their positions, he was prompted, though a stranger, to walk forward and join them, and thus received confirmation from Bishop Meade. The happy inspiration of the moment did not pass away. He was a sincere and devout Christian to his last hour. His death is a sad blow to a family that knew better than all others his worth, and to the country which can ill afford to lose such men.*

1938. VI. LOUISE,<sup>7</sup> b. 24 Oct., 1832, Annapolis, Md.; married there, 6 Jan., 1852,—the same day with her sister Eliza,—Lieut. Robert Randolph Carter, U. S. N., b. 15 Sept., 1825, Shirley, Charles City Co., Va., son of Col. Hill* and Mary Braxton (Randolph) Carter, of Shirley, Va.

Robert Randolph Carter entered the Navy in March, 1842; was a midshipman on the U. S. S. Falmouth until August, 1843, when he was transferred to the Frigate Savannah of the Pacific Squadron, during the Mexican war. This squadron took California and held the capital, Monterey, until a Governor was sent from the United States. Midshipman Carter was afterward transferred to the U. S. S. Erie, returning in June, 1848,—making his first cruise over six years. He passed his examination at the Naval Academy in 1849. In 1850, he served in the first expedition in search of Sir John Franklin, under Captain De Haven, remaining in the Arctic regions eighteen months. He returned from the Polar seas in December, 1851, and in January, 1852, married as above stated.

In 1853, he served as Acting Lieutenant in the North Pacific and China Sea Exploring Expedition, under Commodores Ringgold and Rodgers, two and one half years, and was sent home on sick leave in 1855. He was stationed at Norfolk Navy Yard, in 1857 and 1858, and served in the La Plata Exploring Expedition, under Commodore Thomas Jefferson Page, three years; was in Washington bringing up the work of the Expedition when the late Civil War broke out, when he resigned and entered the C. S. Navy as Lieutenant.

Lieut. Carter was at Havana when the war ended. He took one of Collie's blockade runners to Glasgow; obtained a British master's certificate, and took a steamer from London to Brazil and the River La Plata. He returned to Virginia in 1866, and has since resided on a portion of the Shirley plantation which his father settled on him. The address of this family is (1884) Bermuda Hundreds P. 1958. I. NATHAN OLIVER,<sup>7</sup> Esq., b. 16 Nov., 1816; died of consumption, in Braceville, O., 3 July, 1879, æ. 62 years; was unmarried. He received a common school education, and commenced teaching when he was seventeen years of age. He studied law under Hon. David Tod, and was admitted to the bar in November, 1837, soon after his 21st birthday. He was a candidate for Prosecuting Attorney of Trumbull County, in 1838, but, his party being in the minority, was not elected. He was elected, however, in 1842, 1844, and again in 1850. After the death of his father in 1847, he left Warren, Ohio, where he had been residing about fifteen years, and returned to Braceville, thus rendering home pleasant for his mother and three sisters, as he was "one of the best of sons and an affectionate brother." He was an honest, upright man, and enjoyed the confidence of the community in which he lived. He was Township Treasurer for many years; was chosen Justice of the Peace in 1870, and continued to hold that office until the year of his death, although the majority of the town were of a different political party from himself.

She was the daughter of Judge Calvin and Laura Grant (Risley) Pease, of Warren, O., and widow of George Washington Tallmadge, of Tallmadge, Summit Co., O., son of Augustus Tallmadge of Revolutionary fame.

* See foot-note to Family 11-250, S., concerning the Beach family.

Calvin Pease Humphrey, Esq., of Akron, O., has contributed the following biographical sketch of his father:—

At the commencement of the present century there existed in the township of Goshen, Litchfield Co., Ct., a sort of lane terminating in a cul-de-sac called, from the number of families of the name residing therein, "Humphrey Street." [See page 253.] This lane lay some half a mile west of and parallel to the main north and south township road known as "East Street." Abutting upon Humphrey Street was a long, unpainted wooden dwelling consisting of a story-and-one-half house with its gable end to the street, with a succession of similarly formed structures projecting rearward therefrom, each smaller than its immediate neighbor in front, the whole suggesting an enormous stranded telescope. In this building was born the subject of this sketch, Van Rensselaer Humphrey.

His father was a farmer who cultivated some adjoining acres, and a farm lying some miles to the north, near what was known as "Rock House Mountain." It is a matter of profound regret that, at this writing, there exist no accurate sources of information as to the early youth of the son. By the death of the last member of his father's family some years ago, these were lost, and all that now remains is the recollection of facts long since narrated by the son, and treasured up in the loving memory. From these however it appears that the early life of the son did not differ from that of other country boys of that time; his surroundings, habits of life, sports and occupations were substantially the same. He assisted, as he became able, his father in the farm work, and soon was an expert in the use of farming implements, a familiarity with which he retained and exercised during his life. His physical growth was unusually rapid until, as he used laughingly to say, he weighed two hundred at the age of twenty. While still a boy his great strength and skill in the use of farm tools enabled him to command wages in excess of those ordinarily paid to farm hands.

His education was gained in such common schools as were then available; but so great was his proficiency in his studies that as early as his seventeenth year, possibly earlier, he began teaching school in his native town. At the time he applied to the Examining Committee for permission to teach, an incident occurred which illustrates the fearless independence of thought that characterized his after life. A belief in the doctrines of the Bible was a prerequisite to such permission; but when that point was reached he declared that he did not, and would not, believe that "the sins of the father" were, or should be, "visited upon the children." How the matter was adjusted by the Committee is not known; it only appears that he received the sought "permission."

During the time that he was engaged in teaching he commenced the study of the law under Theodore North, Esq., then a prominent attorney of Litchfield County, and prosecuted his studies with such application that, as his certificate now before the writer certifies, "At a court of Common Pleas holden at Litchfield * * * on the fourth tuesday of September A.D. 1820," he was duly "admitted an attorney and counsellor at law before all the courts of Common Pleas in this State, &c." Of his conduct as a law student, his legal preceptor, Mr. North, thus testifies in a certificate given by him to his pupil, May 11th, 1821, shortly before the departure of the latter from his native State: "He pursued his course of legal studies in my office with uncommon attention and diligence."

In June, 1821, soon after their marriage, he and his young wife emigrated to Ohio, and took up their abode on the Connecticut Western Reserve, in what is now Summit County, but which was at that time a part of Portage County. After investigating the merits of the different small towns then starting in that county, and spending some time in Norton and Twinsburgh, he finally settled in Hudson, where he continued his residence through life. His energy and ability, coupled with his pleasing address and fine social qualities, soon made him a favorite with and a leading person among his townsmen.

On the 2d day of July, 1822, at a term of the Supreme Court of the State of Ohio held at Ravenna, in Portage, by Hon. Calvin Pease* and Hon. Peter Hitchcock, Judges of said Court, he was, on the recommendation of Darius Lyman, Esq., duly examined, admitted and sworn as Attorney at Law and Solicitor in Chancery within the State of Ohio. From this time he entered upon a successful career as a lawyer, and rose so rapidly in his profession that in a few years he was engaged in nearly every important case in Portage and Medina Counties. This enviable position he retained until he took his seat upon the bench in 1837.

In 1824, having been elected to that office by his townsmen, he was by Governor Morrow duly commissioned a Justice of the Peace for the town of Hudson for the term of three years, from the 19th of May of that year. At the December term, 1828, of the United States Circuit Court for the Ohio District, he was duly admitted to practice in the Federal Courts in the State. In the year 1828, he was elected to the House of Representatives of the Legislature of Ohio, and was re-elected to the same office in 1829.

In 1837, having been by the Legislature of Ohio duly appointed to the office, he was, on the 21st day of January, of that year, by Governor Vance commissioned, for the term of seven years, as President Judge of the Court of Common Pleas of the Third Judicial Circuit of that State, which then comprised the counties of Trumbull, Ashtabula, Geauga, Cuyahoga and Portage. He at once entered upon the discharge of his official duties, and continued upon the bench until the end of his term, at the close of the year 1843;—but any extended notice of this official service would be beyond the scope of the present sketch.

His court was held in the midst of his professional associates, among whom were such men as B. F. Wade, who succeeded him upon the bench, Joshua R. Giddings, R. P. Ranney, David Tod, and many others of national reputation. Among the earliest cases brought before him was a peace warrant prosecuted against Joseph Smith, Jr., the Mormon prophet.

Of his judicial ability and conduct, a contemporary has said: "As Judge of the Court of Common Pleas his decisions were remarkably correct. His quick and penetrative insight stood him in good stead there. His invariable kindness and impartiality, and the apparent ease with which he disposed of business, gave to his administration a general and hearty approval."†

During his residence in his new home he had entered heartily into all projects looking to the improvement and growth of the town. His professional labors were often employed in behalf of Western Reserve College, and tended in no small degree to assist that institution in its early struggles for existence. Every laudable undertaking found in him a ready and active ally. As his practice increased he acquired property and erected several dwellings and one hotel, all of which are still standing (1884). At the close of his judicial term he returned to the bar and at once entered upon a large and lucrative practice.

In addition to the prosecution of his profession he engaged extensively in farming, fruit culture, and sheep and cattle raising. In these pursuits he found relaxation from legal labors, and a never-ending source of pleasure. Upon a fine farm, not far from his town residence, he adopted new and approved methods of husbandry and cultivation, raised choice and rare varieties of fruits and introduced improved breeds of sheep and cattle.

When the project of connecting the cities of Cleveland and Pittsburgh by a railroad was first agitated, he became an active and earnest advocate of the plan; his name appears first in the list of incorporators of the Cleveland and Pittsburgh named in the special act incorporating that company, passed March 14th, 1836, by the Legislature of Ohio; and from that date he contributed not only money, but time in visiting points along the line of the proposed road and eloquently urging co-operation in the project until its completion. He soon after became interested in other railroad enterprises. A road running from Hudson to Akron, Ohio, since continued to the State capital and known as the Cleveland, Mt. Vernon and Delaware, owes its existence in no small degree to his labors. Another road known as the "Clinton Line" with a continuation westwardly called the "Clinton Line Extension" was projected, the uniting terminus of each road being Hudson. This was intended to be a main east and west line between New York and the far West, and in its organization and subsequent progress he took a prominent part, being a Director of one company and President of the other. About this time he substantially abandoned the general practice of the law, and for some years devoted himself almost exclusively to the furthering of these railroad enterprises, and litigation incident thereto. These projects were in a forward condition, stock had been subscribed, rights of way secured and a large part of the road-bed completed, when the financial embarrassment of 1857 put a check upon this and many like undertakings and finally stopped their further prosecution. He then returned to the general practice of the law, in which he continued until the time of his death.

At the breaking out of the Civil War he became an earnest advocate of the Union cause, and at the request of Governor Tod visited many parts of the State, holding large meetings and urging enlistments.

In 1864, he was a delegate at large to the National Convention at Chicago which nominated General McClellan for president. This was his last public act. While in attendance at the convention he received the first shock of the disease that finally terminated his life; but with that thoughtful kindness that ever prompted him to avoid causing pain to others he concealed this from his family, and it was by them only known after his decease. On September 5th, 1864, at his home in Hudson and in the midst of his family, came the second shock of apoplexy, and without warning he passed painlessly and peacefully away, at the age of 64 years.

Physically he was a model of manly beauty; over six feet in height and straight as an arrow, with broad shoulders and round form, what would have seemed corpulency in a smaller frame became in him symmetrical proportion. His open, manly face and bluish gray eye invited acquaintance and encouraged confidence, but there was always a quiet dignity about him that repelled any undue familiarity.

In his family he was kind, loving and indulgent; in society his social qualities made him an ever welcome guest and companion of the intelligent and refined; and in his intercourse with the world at large he was a ready protector of the weak and wronged, and a helper of those in distress.

His conduct upon the bench was particularly marked by two characteristics that have become traditional;—uniform courtesy to the members of the bar, and kindness and encouragement toward young practitioners. His ability and method as an advocate are thus stated by the contemporary before quoted: "He was cool and imperturbable, tall, large, though not unwieldy or fleshy, but full and rounded out at every point—a manifest embodiment of muscular strength. His manner was deliberate; his voice loud, clear, of large compass and never harsh. His sarcasm, not frequent, and seeming ever to be held back in reserve, and never sought after, always hit its mark. His humor was inexhaustible and spontaneous, and his wit forthcoming at will. His imagination was splendid, but would have been improved by early discipline. His arguments were not distinguished for consecutive reasoning, but they seemed to be guided by a kind of insight into the essential elements of his case, so that, if his imagination at any time outstripped his logic, there was an inner light that still lured him back to the essential points, which he seldom failed so to group together and enlighten as to give them effect. While another would go directly to the leading points of his case and press them to their inevitable sequence, Humphrey swept in much of the surrounding mass, which, under his glowing imagination, took the color of his leading points."

He was a close observer of nature, from which his illustrations and similes were largely drawn, particularly when using ridicule as a weapon. Once of a certain ungraceful and ungracious attorney he said, "He gets up just like a cow." Whoever has noticed that domestic animal in the act of rising will recognize the force of the simile. On another occasion, defending a desperate case of breach of promise of marriage, he laughed the case out of court by suddenly turning upon his client, who was by no means handsome, and, assuming the early Connecticut vernacular, exclaiming: "Look at the critter! Who would ever love him? His mouth looks like a hole in a bee tree." Sarcasm and ridicule were however rarely resorted to. He was especially careful of the feelings of others, and never gave an unprovoked wound.

He was withal modest and retiring to a degree that often prevented his ability and character being understood; and in some of the most trying legal contests he was satisfied to do and let others receive the credit.

Such in brief are the principal incidents and events in the life of one who is identified with the early growth and development of north-eastern Ohio.

Isaiah Humphrey was the youngest of a large family of children, and was much indulged by his parents and older brothers and sisters,—in short was the autocrat in the family. He received a common school education; was considered when young remarkable for nothing in particular except a passion for history. This he commenced reading at a very early age, and his fondness for it seemed to grow with his years, so that in after life he was often called upon to act as referee on disputed points of a historic nature.

In the autumn of 1820, he accompanied his parents to Ohio, where they located on the Western Reserve, or New Connecticut as it was then called, in the township of Twinsburgh,† Summit County, remaining there until their deaths, which occurred some years later. Isaiah worked on the farm with his father until his mother died. This event took place when he was about nineteen years of age. His love for her was an affection of the loftiest ideal nature, and after her death he left home and wandered away to the Southern States, keeping up no correspondence with the surviving members of the family. They in fact gave him up as dead.

Soon after leaving home he enlisted in the Regular Army and rose to the rank of Orderly Sergeant, which was thought to be quite an honor for one so young. He remained in the United States service over three years, and only after a long sickness with yellow fever, in the hospital at Natchez, where he lay six weeks, was he discharged. He then turned his face homeward for the first time in all his weary wanderings. On his arrival he found his father still living, and the other members of the family somewhat changed in their circumstances and relations, but located not far from the old homestead.

He soon began to feel the want of more education and to consider where it could be obtained. Twinsburgh Institute, then in its infancy, was the only academy in his section. The principal, Rev. Samuel Bissell, a graduate of Yale College, took him under his personal supervision, and after two years and six months of close application called his education finished. He then for a short time engaged in teaching.

He now commenced the study of law with his brother, Hon. Van Rensselaer Humphrey, of Hudson, O., who was seven years his senior. With him he remained awhile, sometimes in the office and sometimes engaged in other business; but managed notwithstanding his varied duties to accomplish considerable desultory reading. In the meantime he had purchased a farm of fifty acres in Twinsburgh, and had taken his bride to the home he had prepared for her. He continued the study of law under many difficulties, and was finally admitted to the bar, 12 Sept., 1842, nine years after his marriage. He had at this time five little children.

During all these years he had been an active member of the State Militia, his experience in the regular service particularly fitting him for this duty. He was three times commissioned as an officer in the 1st Rifle Regiment, 1st Brigade, 20th Division:—as Captain of the 7th Company, 29 Dec., 1837; as Lieutenant-Colonel, 27 Sept., 1839; and as Colonel, 14 Sept., 1840. He resigned his commission 24 Aug., 1846, and the militia soon after disbanded. He was afterward a leader and active worker in that filibustering movement called in history the Patriot War, including an invasion of Canada.

In 1851, he removed to Boston township, Summit Co., O., where he had bought quite a large tract of land. At the breaking out of the war for the Union, he took an active part in raising troops, and went hither and thither about the country making speeches, and rousing the people to action; was at one time tendered the colonelcy of a colored regiment, but his affairs at home would not permit of its acceptance. He was strongly antislavery in sentiment, and rejoiced when the emancipation of the slaves took place. He died in Boston, O., 1 Mch., 1877, æ. 69 years. Mrs. Humphrey's P. ## FAMILY 123.

William G. Humphrey's education was practical, having been acquired mainly in the school of experience, as he left his studies in his twelfth year. At an early age he manifested unusual mechanical skill and ingenuity, and during his business life invented many improvements in machinery, among which were "Humphrey's Direct Action Steam Mill" and the "Humphrey Double Action Pump."

In 1835, he removed from Connecticut to Parma, Cuyahoga Co., O., where with his brother, Dudley Sherman Humphrey, under the firm name of Wm.‡ & D. S. Humphrey, he engaged in the manufacture of clocks, lumber, etc. In 1849, the two brothers went to Townsend, Huron Co., O., purchased a large tract of land, and commenced lumbering on an extensive scale. They built mills and plank roads and furnished employment for a great number of men. What was an almost unbroken forest at that time is now adorned by two thriving villages, broad acres of pasture, meadow and orchard lands.

Mr. Wm. Humphrey was President of the Centre Plank Road Company, and one of the principal movers in the enterprise:—in fact, was the animating force in the completion of the work. The lumber manufactured by him and his brother was mostly sent to an eastern market through Milan, as the nearest shipping point for water transit; hence they became the most extensive patrons of the plank road. He was soon the largest land-holder in the township, and continued to be until his death.

* When Townsend, Ohio, is mentioned in connection with this family the township in Huron County is the one to which allusion is made,—not the town bearing that name in Sandusky County, in the same State.

† Merritt Hyde was born 2 Jan. 1794, at Oxford, Ct.; married, in Roxbury, Ct., 25 Jan. 1815, Sally Boyd, born 22 Mch. 1794, in Roxbury, Ct. He was a descendant in the sixth generation from Humphrey Hyde, who emigrated from England to this country previous to 1665, and was an extensive land-holder in Fairfield, Ct., at that date.

He was physically and mentally of the magnificent Humphrey type. His height was six feet, and his weight ranged from two hundred and twenty-five to two hundred and fifty pounds. His intellect was in keeping with his grand physical proportions. He was cool, self-reliant, and always in full command of his forces, no matter what was the emergency. When, as was frequently the case, one of his employees met with an accident requiring surgical skill, like the crushing of a hand or the breaking of an arm, he was the first one sought for, and with steady nerve and ready judgment, with pocket-knife, needle, splints, and bandage would dress the wound so acceptably that the surgeon would seldom make any alterations.

He went boldly forward with business enterprises concerning which many of wide experience, even, would hesitate and doubt. His judgment on all matters of which he had the management was clear, decided, and came apparently by intuition. In every sense of the word he was a large-hearted, broad-gauged man, of prepossessing appearance, and genial and attractive manners,—with strangers as well as friends.

He scorned a dishonorable transaction;—was incapable of doing a mean act himself, and despised it in others. Combined with the rest of his social qualities was the rare trait of equanimity of temper and forbearance, even under strong provocation, remembering the injury only to render some kind office to the offender when in need. This characteristic seemed to be recognized most fully by all who knew him.

Not only his projects, but his charities were on a broad and generous scale. He would always prefer to lose a debt rather than to distress a poor, industrious man. He was the peacemaker of his neighborhood, and, however great the pressure of business, would attentively listen to the narration of the misfortunes and trials of others, and like a father freely advise those who sought his kindly offices. The estate of his father having been absorbed by indorsements for friends, in his boyhood, he well knew the struggles caused by poverty and misfortune, and his kindly nature was developed in that school of experience which alone seems fitted to make men Godlike, and to give them active, intelligent sympathy for the unfortunate. To his immediate family he was a tower of strength and a fountain of love. As a neighbor he was kind and obliging; as a citizen, liberal and patriotic.

Politically, he affiliated with the Democratic party, and was an earnest advocate for the maintenance of constitutional liberty. During the civil war he spared neither time, money, nor influence, for the advancement of the Union cause, and many soldiers' families were daily recipients of his bounty. He was nominated for Representative, August, 1865, but his party being in the minority, was not elected.

His death occurred September 23d, 1874, at Townsend, Ohio. While engaged in repairing the roof of his dwelling-house, the scaffolding broke and in his fall he received injuries from which he died after a few hours of unconsciousness. His widow res. ## FAMILY 124.

The boyhood of Dudley S. Humphrey was spent among the hills of New England. His school-room education ended with his thirteenth year, as the financial condition of his parents was such as to oblige the sons to commence their business life early. He was temperate in his habits and industrious always,—which may explain the force and vigor of his later life.

* Mr. Benajah Fay was one of the pioneers of the Township of Parma, and in a long, active life did much to develop and improve the country. He died in April, 1860, aged 85 years. His wife Ruth died in September, 1830.

In the winter of 1834-35 he, with his brother William, engaged in a lumber speculation which resulted in the purchase of a large number of clocks. For the sale of these clocks, and for future enterprises, the brothers decided that the West offered the most inviting and promising field, and, as has been already stated in connection with the history of Mr. Wm. G. Humphrey, they removed to Ohio in 1835 and settled in Parma, near Cleveland, where under the firm name of Wm. & D. S. Humphrey they embarked in the lumber and clock business, built a water, afterward a steam, saw-mill, and developed a large trade.

In 1849, on account of the scarcity of timber in Parma, the brothers were induced to remove to Townsend, in Huron County, Ohio, where they purchased an extensive tract of land, built mills and opened business on a large scale. During the partnership of the brothers they built over forty steam and water saw-mills through the West. They were the first to introduce and use the "Mulay Gang-Saws," and the "Cone Pulley-Feed."

In January, 1851, while working with a circular siding-saw, an accident occurred which resulted in the amputation of Mr. D. S. Humphrey's right hand. Serious as was this loss, press of business, ingenuity, and ambition called forth the better use of his remaining hand;—in fact, he is said to have handled tools and machinery more skillfully with one hand than most persons would with two.

In 1855, he removed to the south-east part of the township, where the brothers owned a tract of land and a mill, and there divided his attention between the mill and farm.

In 1860, he returned to Townsend Centre and remained until 1863, when he went back to the farm on the town-line road, and gave his attention to its improvement and embellishment. He was an enthusiastic admirer of fruit and forest trees, as the large orchards and many shade trees on his farm attest. He set out over five miles of maple trees along the roadway, which gave the name of Maple Street to the road so improved. His admiration for shade trees will be seen from the following circumstance:

In opening a public highway on one side of his farm, a number of thrifty maples stood in what was to be the centre roadway. The supervisor attempted to cut them down, but Mr. Humphrey defended them so vigorously that he was forced to desist at the time, and, to render the protection complete, an injunction was served on the supervisors, which was made perpetual by the courts. More than four hundred of his friends and neighbors joined him, it is said, with affidavits in defense of the trees, which still stand as monuments to the memory and fidelity of him who so nobly protected them.

He took a deep interest in the welfare of others, and in building up for the comfort of those who were to follow;—was public-spirited and generous to a fault. He gave liberally to all church organizations seeking aid, but his belief and sympathies were with the Universalists. It has been said that he and his brother William did more to relieve the township from draft during the late war than all the rest of the citizens combined. His education, like his brother's, was self-acquired for the most part, and few men in the country read more, and fewer still were more successful in business.

In 1872, he indorsed paper for some manufacturers in Wakeman, and in 1873, when the financial crash came, these manufacturers failed. He, to save himself, took the mill property, which required a still greater outlay of money. He never recovered this loss, as prices declined with the demand for manufactured goods, as well as grains and stock.

He was a man of great courage, fine presence, and wonderful nerve. When he met with an accident requiring a surgical operation,—he broke a leg two or three times, and lost a toe, besides his right hand,—he refused all anæsthetics, preferring to be in perfect command of his senses during the painful operation. He died of typhoid pneumonia, 19 Oct., 1876, after an illness of several months.

The widow of Dudley S. Humphrey, who so nobly sustained him in his efforts, is still residing (1884) at Townsend, on the homestead of five hundred acres which her husband did so much to render beautiful in his lifetime. The large and comfortable house which she occupies was nearly completed by him before his death, and has since been finished by the sons. It is of the Gothic style, with dormer-windows, and fancy vine and drop work running around the gables and eaves, and is tastefully painted in colors. Her children, with the exception of Mrs. Scott, reside with her on the farm. P. O. address, Wakeman, O.*

2088. II. HARLOW,<sup>7</sup> born Tuesday, 20 Nov., 1849, Parma, O.;—unmarried. He and his brothers are extensively engaged in farming, and have the best farming tools to be found in the region. For the past seven or eight years they have raised grain on from one hundred and fifty to three hundred acres each year;—have five hundred sheep and some fine horses. They are also associated under the name of "Humphrey Bros., Seed, Grain, and Seed Potato Growers." From 1876 until 1879, they carried on a large saw-mill, bending-works and stave and barrel factory, under the management of Dudley Sherman<sup>7</sup> Humphrey. This mill was destroyed by fire, the estate losing $10,000.

Though unaccustomed to care and responsibility up to the time of the death of their father, they shouldered the indebtedness of the estate, and by close application to business and strict economy have done much to discharge the incumbrances upon it. P. O. address (1884) Wakeman, O.

The boyhood of Riley Humphrey was passed on the farm and in school. He commenced teaching when he was quite young.

In 1847, he went to reside on his father's homestead and engaged in farming. He also, during the summer of that year, made preparations for building a house convenient for two families, and in the fall of 1848 it was occupied by his father and mother and himself and family. It was claimed at the time to be the finest farm residence on the old stage route between Rome and Watertown, N. Y.

From 1853 to 1858, he devoted considerable attention to shipping produce from Chicago and other points in the West, where he had agents established, to the East. After the death of his wife he spent three or four years in the West and South for the benefit of his health, which being partially restored, he established himself in business as a live-stock broker and money lender.

He is described as of medium height, very erect, broad-shouldered, with fair complexion, dark brown hair and dark, piercing eyes;—is said to be fond of his joke, and always provided with a good stock of pleasing anecdotes. He has always had the reputation of possessing an extremely cordial, sympathetic and hospitable disposition, and of being ready and willing to help those in distress. He has through life been a great reader, keeping abreast with the issues of the day. He res. (1884) Copenhagen, Lewis Co., N. Y.*
